A DVERTISEMENT.

THE following very important and interefting trial, and the larv arguments on the different motions made to the court, bas been lang kept from the public eye; but no longer than inevitably necessary-It would bave been imprudent, (if not unlawfil) to bave published a first trial, when a second was pending. The reporter bas curtailed the second trial as much as possible-not refeating, but referring to the testimony given on the first trial; but be bas given at length all new evidence that occurred. The testimony is accurately reported-be believes the arguments and opinions to be so, and, to make it so, wherever opportunity offered, he bas submitted it to the inspection of the gentlemen tbemselves: quben be could not, he trusts unimportant inaccuracies, if any, will be pardoned.

It is probable, several of the names are wurong spelled, but, without more trouble than necessity demanded, it could not well be otberwise.

A C H A R E

Delivered to the Grand furr of tbe UNITED STATES, for tbe District of Pennsylvania, in the Circuit court of the United States for said district, beld in tbe city of Pbiladelpbia, April nitb, 1799, by GAMES IREDELL, one of tbe Associate Fiustices of the Supreme Court of tbe Unithd Stites.

Gentlemen of the Grand Jury,

HE important duties you are now cailed upon to fulfi, naturally in. creafe with the increafing difficulties of our country. But however great thofe difficulties may be, I am perfuaded you will meet them with 2 firm and intrepid ftep, refolved, fo far as you are concerned, that no difhonour or calamity (if any fhould await us) fhall be afcribable to a weak or im. partial adminiffration of juftice.

If ever any people had reafon to be thankful for along and happy enjoyment of peace, liberty and fafety, the people of thefe ftates furely have, While every other country almoft has been convulfed with foreign or domeftic war, and lome of the fineft countries on the globe have been the feene of every fpecies of vice and diforder, where no life was fafe, no property was fecure, no innocence had protection, and nothing but the bafent crimes gave any chance for momentary prefervation; no citizen of the United States could truiy fay that in his own country any oppreffion had been permitted with impunity, or that he had any grievance to complain of, but that he was required to obey thofe laws which his own reprefentatives had made, and under a government which the people themifelves had chofen. But in the mid? of this envied fituation, we have heard :he government as groflyy abufed as if it had been guilty of the vileft tyranny, as if common fenfe or common virtue had fled from our country, and thofe pure principles of republicanifm, which have fo ftrongly characterized its councils, could only be found in the happy foil of France, where the facred fire is preferved by five Directors on ordinary occafions, and three on extraordinary oneswho, with the aid of a republican army, fecure its purity from violation by the Legilative reprefentatives of the people.-The external conduct of that goverument is upon a par with its internal.-Liberty, like the religion of Mahomet, is propagated by the fivord. Nations are not only compelled to be free, but to be free on the Freach model, and placed under French guardian?hip. Frencla arlenals are the repofitory of their arms, Frencti teeafuries of their moncy, the city of Paris of their curiofities; and they are honoured with the conftant lupport of French enterprizes in any other part of the world. Such is the progrefs of a power which began by declarations that it abharred all conquefts for itfelf, and fought no other felicity but to emancipate the world from yrants, and leave each nation fies to chafe a gorverame:it of its own. Thofe who take no warning by fuct an awful example, may have deeply to ldment the confequences of neolecting it.

The fituation in which we now fland with that country is peculiarly critical. Confious of giving no real caufe of offence, but irritated with injuries, and full of relentment for inults; defirous of peace, if it can be preter ved with bonour and fafety, but diddaining a lecurity equally fallacipus and ignomianous a: the cereece of cither; fill holding the rejected

Olive Branch in one hand, but a fword in the other-we now remain in a fort of middle path between peace and war, where one falle flep may lead to the moft ruinous confequences, and nothing can be fafely relied on but unceafing vigilance, and perfevering firmnefs in what we think right, leaving the event to Heaven, which feldom fuffers the deftrucion of nations, without lome capital fault of their own.

Among other meafures of defence and precaution which the exigency of the crifis, and the magnitude of the danger, fuggefted to thofe to whom the people have entrufted all authority in fuch cafes, were certain acts of the legiflature of the United States, not only highly important in themfelves but deferving of the moft particular atiention, on account of the great difcontent which has been excited againf them, and efpecially as fone of the ftate legiflatures have publicly pronounced them to be in violation of the confitution of the United States. I deem it my duty, therefore, on this occafion to flate to you the nature of thofe laws which have been grofsly mifreprefented, and to deliver my deliberate opinion as a Judge; in regard to the objections arifing from the conftitution.

The acts to which I refer you will readily fuppofe to be what arc commonly called the Alien and Sedition acts. I fhall Ipeak of each feparate$]_{5}$, fo far as ro common circumftances belonging to them may make a joint difcuffion proper.

1. Tobe Alien Laws, there being two.

To thefe laws, in particular, it has been objected.
r. That an Alien ought not to be removed on fufpicion, but on proof of fome crime.
2. That an Alien coming into the country, on the faith of an act fipulating that in a certain time, and on certain conditions, he may becone a citizen, to remove him in an arbitrary manner before that time, would be a breach of public faith.
3. That it is inconfiftent with the following claufe in the confitution, (Art. I. fect. 9.)
" The migration or importation of fuch perfons as any of the flates now exifting fhall think proper to admit, fhall not be prolibited by the Congref's prior to the year one thoufand eight hundred and eight? but a tax or duty may be impofed on fich importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each perfon." With regard to the firt objection, viz. "' 1 hat an alien ought not to be removel on fulpicion, but on proof of fome crime." I: is believed that it never was fuggefled in any other country, that aliens lad a right to go into a foreiga country, and flay at thcir will and pleafu:e without any leave from the government. The law of nations, u: doubtely is, that when an alien goes into a foreign country, he goes under cither an exprefs or implied fafe conduct. In molt countries in Europe, 1 believe, an exprefs paffport is seceflary for Atrangers. Where greater liberality is obierved, yet it is always undeiftood that the goverument may oder away any alien whofe flay is deemed incompatible with the fafety of the cruntry. Nothing is more common than to order away, on the eve of a war, all aliens or fubjects of the nation with whom the war is to take place. Why is that done, but that it is deemed unlafe to retain in the country, men whofe prepuffeflions are naturally fo ftrong in favour of the enenay, that it may be apprehended they will ether join in arms, or do mifchief by intrigue, in his favcur? How many fuch inifances took place at the bcginning of the war with Great Britain, no body then objecting to the authority of the meafure, and the expediency of it being alone in contemplation! In cates like this, it is ridiculous to talk of a crime, becanfe perhaps the only crime, that a man can then be clarged with, is his being born in ancther country, and having a frong attachment to it. He is mot punihed five a crime that he has committed, but deprived of the power of commiting one heleafter $t$, which even a feife of patriot:fm may tempt a warm and mifguided mind. Nobody who has ever heard of Majer cudie, that poffefles any liberality of mind, but muft believe that he did what he thought right at the time, though in my opinion it wat a conduct in no manner jullifiable. Yet how fatal might his ficcefis have proved! If nexi, therefse, of good charactes, and held in unive:fal effimation for integrity, can be tempted when a great object is in visw, to violate the flriet datic, of morality, what may be expected from others who have westher faracter nou virtue, but fand ready to yield to temptations of aty hind? The opportunities during a wai of making ufe of men of fuch a defeription are to numerous and fo dangercus, that no prudent lation would ever truft to thin polfble gocd behaviour of many of them. Indeed trof! of thete who oppose this lav feem to almit that as to alien enemics the interpolition may be proper but they contend it is impruper before a war actatly tukes pice to exercife fich an authority, and tiat as to merra! a'coss in is totaly inadnimble: To be fure the two latter iiffances are not yite to plan, the objection $I \mathrm{am}$ confdering belongs equall:' in them all; fin if an alien camot be remored but on conviciun of a crime, thea an alien euemy ought not to be momed but on conviction of tecafon, or fome other eane fhewing the neceffity of it. If, however, we are not blind to what is evident to ail the reft of the world, equal danger may be apprehended fom the cicizens of a hoftile power, before war is acillully declared as afier, perhaps more, becaule lefs fufficion is entertained; and fome citizens of anmeral power are equally dangerous with the others. What bas given ittace poffefion of the 'Netherlands, Geneva, Syitzeiland and alinoit all Indy, and enables her to lommeer over fo many other crubaties, hately powerful and completely independent, but that her aris have picceeied his arms, the fmooth words of anity, peace, and univertal love, by feducsing weak minds, have led to an unbrunded contideme, which has mined in their deffuction, and they have now to deplore the intatuation which led thein to court a fraternal embace from a bexom in whicla a dagerer was concealed.

In how maty countises, alien frimds as to us, dependent amo theen, are there wa:n partians nes nomirally Fench citizens buttompicatly illuminated with French principles, elecirificd :ith F, ench enthuiafin, and ready for any fort of tevoluthany mifhectate we to be guaded as ainf the former and expred to the latter? Ne, geritkmen, If with fuch ezamples beiore their eyes, centrets had either comified thei preciution to a war in form, or tocitiyeus of france only, lofny all finfe otdaner to their country in a regard to nomixal diftinctions, they would probably juftly have deferved the charge of neglectiug their country's teftey in care of its moft eftatral points, and herealier the very men who are now clamornas againt them for exercifing à juicious firetight, minght too late bave had realon to charge them, (as many furmer intateated goverments in Europe may now fairly be charged by ifies miferablic deluded fellow citizens) as the authors of their country's suin. Bat thnfe who object to this law feem to pay little regard to cont fiderations of tinis kind, and to entertain no ocher fear but that the Preficunt may execcite this authority for the mere purpofe of abufing it. Zhee is to end to arguments or tulpicions of this kind. If this power is risper is man be exercifed by tomeibody. If from the nature of it it unlefs convicted of fome crime, but is evidently calculated for the fetutita of any citizen, a party to the inftrument or even of a foreigne: if refident in the country, who when charged with the cormiffion of a crime arain! the municipal laws for which he is liable to puniftament, can be tried firt it in no other manner.

The fecond objection is, "That an alien coming into the country, an the faith of an act flipulating that in a certain time and on certain conditions he may become a citizen, to remove him in an arbitrary manner before that time would be a breach of public faith."

With regard to this, it may be obferved, that undoubtedly the faith of government ought under all circumflances, and in all pofible fituations, to be preferved facred. If therefore, in virtue of this law, all aliers from at: part of the world had a right to come here, flay the probationary time, and become citizens, the act in queftion could not be juffified, unlefs it could be fhewn that a real (not 2 pretended) over-ruling public neceifity to which all inchoate aets of legillation mult forever be fubject, occafioned a partial repeal of it. But there are certain conditions, without which no alien can ever be admitted, if he ftay ever folong; and one is, that during a limited time (two years in the crfe of aliens then refident; five in the cafe of aliens arriving after) he has behaved as a man of a good moral character, attached to the principles of the conflitution of the United States, and well difpofed to the good order and happinefs of the fame. If his conduct be different, he is no object of the naturalization law at all, and confequently no iaplied compact was made with him. If his conduct be conformable to that defcription, he is no object of the alien law to which the objection is applied, becaufe he is not a perfon whim the Prefident is empowered to remove, for fich a perfon could not be deemed dangerous to the peace and fafety of the United States, nor couid there be reafonable grounds to fufpect fuch a man of being concerned in any treafonable or fecret machinations againil the government, in whic'. cafes alone the removal of any alien friend is auchorifed. Defides any alien coming to this country muft, or ought to know, that this being an Independent nation, it has all the rights concerning the removal of alie::s which belong by the law of nations to any other; that while he remains in the country in the character of an alien, hee can claim no otlier privilege than fuch as an alien is entitled to; and confequently, whatever rifque he may incur in that capacity, is incurred voluntarili, with the hope that in due time by his unexceptionable ecnduc, he ray become a citizen of the United States. As there is no end to the ingenuity of man, it has beed luggeited that fuch a perfen, if not a citizen, is a denizen, and therefore cannot be removed as an aliei. A denizen in thofe laws from which we derive our own, means a perfon who has received letters of denization from the king, and under the royal geverame:t fuch a power might undoubtedly have beeni exercifed. This piwer of dicnization is a kind of partial naturalization, siving fome, but net all tie privileges of a natural born fubject. He may take lands by pat ciafie or devife, but cannot inherit.

The iffue of a denizen born before denization cannot inherit; but is born after may, the anceftor having been able to communicate to him inheritable blood. But this power of the crown was thoustit fo formidable that it is exprefiy provided by act of parliament, that no denizon can be a niember of the Privy. Council, or of either Houfe of Parliament, or have any ofice of truft civil or military; or be capable of any grant of lands from tite crown. Upon the difilution of the royal government, the whole authority of naturalizaton, either ahole or partial, belonged to the feveral flates, and this puwer the perple of the fates have fince devolved on the Congrefs of the United States. Denization therefore (in the fenfe here uled) is a terni unknown in our law, face the right was not derived from any general leriflative authority, but from a feccial prerogative of the crown, to which parliamientary reftrictious afterwards were applied. So much fo; that if ani act of Parliament had paffed, giving certain rights to an alien with refrictions exactly fimilar to thofe of a denizen. I imagine he would not lave been called a denizen; becaufe the royal authonity was not the fource from which his rights were derived. As to acis of naturalization themielves; thicy are lable in Eugland, by an exprefs law to certain limitaticns, one of which is, that the perfon waturalized is incpapable of being a member of the privy council; or either houle of pailiameat, or of holding offices or grants from the crown: Yet I never heard, nor do I believe that fuch a perfon was ever called a denizen; for whirh, as there is no foundation in precedent, or in the conflitution of the unsited States, I prefune it is a diffinction without solidity: Fixed principlcs of law camot be grounded on the airy imagination of man.

The third objection is, "That it is inconfiftent with the following claufe in the conflitution, viz.
"The migration or importation of fuch perfons as any of the fates now exifting hall think proper to admit, thali not be prohibited by the congrefs prior to the year one thoufand eight hundred and eight, but a tax or duty may be impofed on faid importation not exceeding ten dollars for each perlon."

I am not fatisfied, as to this objection, that it is fufficient to over-rule it, to fay the words do not exprefs the real meaning, either of thofe who formed the conficution, or thofe who eftablithed it, although I do verily believe in my own mind, that the article was intended only for flaves, and the claufe was expreffed in its prefent manner to accommodate different gertlemen, fome of whom could not bare the name slaves, and others had cbjestions to it. But though this probably is the real truth, yet, if in atiempting to compromile, they lave uiguardedly ufed expreffions that fol beyond their meaning, and there is nothing but private liftory to elucidate it, I fhall deem it ablolutely bieceflary to confine myfelf to the writien inflrament. Cther reafons may make the point doubtful, but at prefent I am iaclined to think it muft be admitted; that congrefs prior to the year 1808 , camot prohibit the migiation of fice perfons to a particular fate, exifing at the time of the conflitation, which fuch fate fhall, by law, agree to receive. The fates then exifing, thercfore, till $18 c 8$ may (we will fay) almit the migration of perfons to their own flates, without any prohibitory act of congrefs.-This they may do upon principles of geateral policy, and in confiftence with all their otier duties. The fates are exprefisy protibited from entering into an engagement or contrat with another flate, or engaging in war, unlefs actually invaded, or in fuch imminent danger, as will not admit of delay. The avenues to foreign connection teing thus carefully clofed, it will fcarcely be contended, that in cafe ef war, a fate could, either directly or indirectly, pronit the migration of enemies, If they did, the Enfed Sater ceuld cercandy without any impeachment of the ceateral righe of allowing miz gration, in virtue of their authority to regel invalion, prevent die artival ot fach. And as fuch invaign mary be atemped without a fimal Wafi and Congrefi have an exprefo righe to protect rgaina invafoan, as well as to repel it, I prefume Congrefs would allo bave authorty to preveat the nrival of any enemies, coming in the difguife of friends, to livade thetr country, Butj admithing the right to permit migration la its full fores; the perluns migratur on their nuthority muf be hiblece to the laws of the couatry, which condin not only of thote of tbe parifigur fate, but of the United States. White aliens, therefore, they mult remaln lo the chaz rater of aliens; mad, of confe, uan the principles I have mentiened, be findjert to a paiver of removal, in certain caies recegaiged in the law of nations ; bor can they ceafe to be in this fituation, until they begome c:tizens of the Unitced states; in which cafe they mut obey the laws of tha union as well as of the particulur fate they refide in, But, cemtiez men argue ns if becaufe the thater had a right 韦 permit mitration the migrants were under a 0 ort of pecial protection of the fate edaltilay lt, left the United State, merely to difaponint the purpole of migention, thould exercife an abitriary autherity of temoval whing suy caule at all. It would be jult an coniftent to fay, that if hich migrane wes charged with a murder on the highl feas, or in any fort or arlenal of the United Statef, he fhould not be tried for it in a cout of the Uuted States, lef the court and juries, out of ill will to the flate, hould combine en procure his conviction and punifhment, in all events, ia defeat the flate law. The two powers may undoubtedy be made coupatible, if the legiflatures of the particular fates, and the goverument of the United States do their duty; without which prefumption, not an nuthorty given by the confltution cail exif. They furely are more compatible than the cellateral powefs of taxation, which, under each government, go to an unlimited extens, bas the very nature of which furbids nay other limitation than a fonde of mor ral right and jutice, If we licepticize in the manner of fone getalemen on this fubjeca, fuppofe each leginature fould tax to the amount of 1 go in the pount; each bas the power; but is fuch an exercife of at more apprenended than we apprehend an earthquake to follow us all up at this very monent? All filems of goveriment, luppote they are to be admo niifered by men of common fenfe and common hogefly, In our country, as all ulamately depends on the voice of the peotile, they have it in their power, and it is to be prefumed they generally will chufe men of this defe cription: but if they will nat, the cale to be ture is without remedy, il they chute pols; they will have fowilin havs, if they chuif knaves they wiil have knavilh ones. But this can never be the cale muil they are generally touls or knaves themelves, which, thank God, is not likely ever to become the charater of tie American pople.

Hazing fuid what Ithought material as to the alien laws, upen the particular objeations to then, I now pruced to difals the objections which have besi made to triat is called die fedition ast, ghe of whicio equally apolies to the alien laws as well as to dus, Dat I thank it pieques previouly to read the law itelle.

The objections (fo far as I have heard them) to this aft are as fullow $i$ x. (And this applies to the alien law alfo) That there is no feecitio power given to pafs an act of this defcription, theugh in the particular fpecific powers given there is authority conveyed as to other ofiences fyecially named.
2. That this law is not warranted by a claufe in the comfitution, conreying legilative authority, which after defignating paricular cbjects, adds:
"And to make all laws which flall be neceflary and proper for carrying into execution the foregoing powers, and all other power sefied by this conflitution in the government of the United Staies, or in any department or officer thereof."-Becaule it is not neceflary and proper to pafs any fuch law in order to carry into execution any of thole poweis.
3. That adnitting the former pofitions are not mainainable, ,ot the exercife of this authority is compatible with the following anendment to the conflitution, viz.
"Congrefs fhall make no law refpecting an eftablinment of relicion, or prolibiting the full exercife thereof; or abridging tine freedom of ipeech, or of the prefs, $r$ the right of the people peaceably to aficmule, and to petition the government for a redre!'s of gricuances."

With regard to the firft objection, I readily acknowledge, that foon after the conftitution was propoled, and when 1 had taken a much more fuperficial view of it than I was fenfible of at the time, 1 did thin. $k$ Congrels could mot provide for the punifnment of any crimes but fuch as are fpecifically defignated in the particialar powers enumerated. I delivered that opinion in the convention at North-Carolina, in the jear $1 ; 88$, with a perfect conviction, at the time, that it was well founded. But I have fince been convinced it was an erroneous opiaion, ard my reafons for changing it I hall fate to you as clearly as I am able.

It is in vain to make any law unlefs fome fanctoon be amexed to it, to prevent or punith its violation. A law without it mighi be equivalent to a good moral fermon, but bad members of fociety would be as little influenced by one as the other. It is, therefore, neceffary and proper, for intance, under the confitution of the United States, to fecure the effect of all laws which impole a duty on fome particular perfons, by providing fone penalty or puaithment if thry diebey. The aurhorty to provide luch is conveyed by the following geineral words in the conftianton, at the end of the objetts of legillation particulaly fpecifed: "To make all laws which fhall be nectary and proper for carring int") ceecution the foregning powers, and :t: , wer powes vefted by this conftitution in the government of the Uniated Sates, or inayy departmentor oficerthereof." A pe:alty alone wonld wo in cery caie be tuhtient, for the cffonder might be rich ans difregard it, or porr, though a wiftel ofiéeder, and unabl. .. pay i.. A fine, therefore, wili not alwass anfwer the purpofe, legillathe will al ays difoerfe witi this, where the imporance of the cafe dies not require i. But if it dos, from the wery mate of the pumithent, it bumes a crima', and no a ciril ofence; the grand jury mu? hadia, betwe the whon can be convicted.

This, eneral aidina ma: be illutrated by a raricty of inflances under the perai. wde of the cunt i 'ates, which have, I believe, never been objefied to as uncomitutisua, thutigh there have never been wanting panetrating and difcerning menbers who were ready enough to take exceptions where they found any plaufible ground for them. 1 fhall enume; rute a few.

In the act entilded, an akf fyr the punifament of certain crimes againft the United Staies (ool. I. Swif's edition, p. 100) among other crimes fpectied, are the fllowins.

Murder or larceny in a fort belorging to the United States. Mifipifton sf felony commited in any place under the fole and exclufive juridiction of the United States. Stealing or falififying a record of any court of the United Stazes. Pcrjury in any coart of the Uuited States. Bribing a jodge of the United States. Obficting the execution of any kind of procets ifiting from a court of the United States.

In the collestion act, 1 vol. p. 237 , it is provided, that in all cafes where an oath is by that act required from a malter or other perfon having crmmand of a fhip or veffel, or from an owner or affignee of goods, wares, and merchandize, his or her factor or ayent, if the perfon fo fwearing fhali fuear tallely, fach perfon thall, on indictinent aud convicion thereof, be panfled by fine or imprifonnient, or both, in the difcretion of the court, before whon fich conviction flall be had, fo as the fine fhall not exceed one thoutaind dollars, and the term of imprilomment fhall not exceed twelve months.

In the act laying duties on diffilled firits, (vol. i. p. 324) in the 39 th fection it is provided as follows:
"If aivy fipervifor, or other officer of infpection, in any criminal proSecution againit them, thall be convicted of cpprefficn or extortiós in the execution of his office, he fhall be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, or imprifoned not exceeding fix months, or both, at the difcretion of the court ; and thail alfo torfeit his oflice."
Thefe infances defere great conidideration; becaufe I believe no candid man will deny that thefe provilions were conftitutional exercifes of authority, witim the fcope of the general authority conveyed, though not fpeciaily named as ubjects which it fhould be competent for Congre is to provide for: Aidid they certainly derive weight foom the confideration, that the principle of them (which I believe was the cafe) was never objeeted to, though the erpediency of tome of the provifions may have been.

In further illuftration of this fubject, I hall tate a cale which was determined in this cout-The Unitcd States again月 Worrell, publifhed in Mi. Dallas's reports, p. 3 r.,. Where there was an indietment againt the defendant for atempting to bribe Mi. Cuxe, the Commilioner of the Revenue. The defendant was found guiliy, and afterwards a motion was made in arrefting judgment, alifguing, ingether with fome techncal objections, this general one, that the Court had no cognnance of the offence, becaufe no att of Cungre is had pafied creating the oftence and prefrribing the punifhinent, but it was flely on the fuet of the common law. The very able and ingeaions genteman win is the reporter of that cafe, and was the defendant's Comncil in it, in the coulfe of his argument, makes the following oblervations, part of which are renarkably ftriking and pertinent to my prelent fuibeci: "In relation to crimes and punith" ments, the objects of the delegated power of the United States are enu" merated and fixed. undoubte:ly the mof momentous; for, as the legitimate object of every goverument is the happinefs of the people committed to its care, nothing can tend more to promote this than thar, by a voluntary obedience to the laws of the country, they fhould render punifhments unneceflary: This can never be the cale in any country but a country of flaves, where grofs mifteprefentation prevails, and any large body of the people can be induced to believe that laws are made either without authority, or for the purpofe of oppreffion. Atk the great body of the people who were deluded into an iniureation in the seftern parts of Pennfylvaina, what gave rife to it? They will not hefitate to lay, that the government had been vilely mifreprelented, and made to appear to them in a character directly the reverfe of what they deferved. In confequence of fuch mifreprefentations, a civil war had nearly defolated our country, and a certain expence of near t:wo millions of dollars was actually incurred, which might be deemed the price of lib:ls, and amnag other caufes made neceflary a judicious and moderate land tax, which no man denies to be conflitutional, but is now made the pretext of another infurrection. The liberty of the prefs is, indeed, valuable-long may it preferve its luftre! It has converted barbarous nations into civilized canes-taught fcience to rear its head-enlarged the cipacity-increafed the comforts of private life-and, leading the banneis of freedom, has extended her fway where her very name was unknown. Bat, as every human bleffug is attended with imperfection, as what p oduce; by 2 right ufe, the graateft good, is productive of the grate:t evil in its abufe, fo this, one of the greateft blefings ever beftowed by Providense on nis creatures, is capable of producing the greateft good or the greatelt mifchief. A pen, in the hands of an able and virtuous man, may enlighten a whole nation, and, by obfervations of real wifdom, grounded on pure morality, may lead it to the path of honour and happinefs.-The fame pen in the hands of a man equally able, but with vices as great as the "ther's viitues, may, by arts of fophiftry eafily attainable, and inffaming the pations of weak minds, delude many into opinions the moft dangeroms, and conduct them to actions the moft criminal. Men who are at a diftance from the fource of information muff rely almoft altogether on the accounts they receive from others. If their accounts are founded in truth, their heads or hearts mult be to blame, if they think or act wrongly. Bat, if their accounts are falle, the beft hear and the bef heart cannot be proof againt their influence; nor is it pofSijle to calculate the combined effect of innumerable artifices, either by direct faltehood, or invidious intinuations, told day by day, upon minds both able and virtuous. Such being unqueftionably the cafe, can it be tolerated ia any civilized focicty that any flould be permitted with impunity to tell falfehoods to the poople, with an exprelis intention to deceive them, and lead them into difcontent, if not into infurrection, which is fo apt to f)llow? It is believed no government in the woild ever was without fuch a power. It is, unquefionably poffeffed by all the fate governments, and probably has been exercifed in all of them: Sure I am, it has in fome. If neceffary and proper for them, why not equally lo, at leaft, for the government of the United States, naturally an object of more jealouly and alarm, becaufe it has greater concerus to provide for ? Combinations to defeat a particular lav are admitted to be punilhable. Falfehoods, in order to produce fuch combinations, I fould prefume, would come withis the fame priseiple, as being the firf ftep to the mifchief intended to be preventel; and if fuci fallehoods, with rejard to one paticular law, are daugerous, and therefore ought not to be permited withot: punflomentWhy thuuld fuch which arc intended to dettoy contedeice in goverument altogether, and, thus, induce difobedicace to every act of it ? It is faid, libels may be rightly punilhable in monarchies, but there is not the tane neceffity in a repiblic. The neceffiny in the later caie, I conceive greater, becaufe in a repablic more is dependent on the good opiaion of the peopie for its fupport, as they are directly or indirectly the origatio of all authority, which of courfe mail receive its bias from them. Tak: away fiom a republic the camidence of the people, and the whole fabric crumbles into dulf.

I have orly to add, under this head, that in order to cbviate any probable ill ufe of this large and difcretionary power, the confitution and certain amendnents to it, have prohibited in exprefs words the exercife of fome particular authorities which otherwife night be fuppoied to be comprelended within then. Of this nature is the prohibitory claute relating to the prefent object whieh I am to confider under the next otjection.
4. That objection is, That the act is in violation of this amendnent of the confitution. ( $\mathrm{j}^{\mathrm{d}}$ vol. Swift's Edition, p, 455. Article 3 d .)
"Congrefs thatl make no law refpeciing an eftabilihnent of religion, or "prohibiting the free excrife thereof; or abridging the freedom of " iprech, or of the prefs, or the ri ght of the people peaceably to affemble, " and to petition the goverament for a redrefs of grierances."

The queftion then is,
Whether this law has abidy fod the freedom of the prefs?
Here is a remarkable difference in expreficus as to the different objeits in the fame claufe. Ihey are to make no law respecting an eftablithment of religion, or prohio:ting the free exercife thereof : or abeidsing the frectom of fueech, or of the prefi. Whea as to one object they entirely prohibit any act whatever, and as to an ther object only limit the exercile of the power, the: math in reafon be fupprefed to mean difiereat tinings. I prefume, therefore, that Congrefs may make a law respecting the prefs, provided the lav: be ficcl as net to adoridge its freedom. What might be deemed the freedom of the prefs, if it had been a new fulbeet, and never before in difcuflion, might indeed adnit of feme con-troverfy.- But fo far as precedent habit, la is a and paactices are concerned, there can farcely be a more diffinie mearing than that which all thefe have affixed to the term in queption.

We derive our principles of lav originally from England. There the prefs, I believe, is as free as in any country of the wolld, and fo it has been for near a century. The definition of it is, in my opuion, no where more lapizily or jullly expreffed than by the great Author of the Commentaries on the Laws of Eugland, which book deferves more particular regard on this occafion, becaule for near 30 years it has been the mannal of almoft every fludent of law in the United States, and its uncommon excellence has alfo introduced it into the libraries, and often to the favourite readirg of private gentemen ; fo that his views of the fubject could fearcely be unknown to thofe who fiamed the Amendments to the conftitution, aad if they were not, unlefs his explanation had been latisfactory, I prefume the Amendment would have been more particularly worded ${ }_{3}$ to guard againf any poflible miftake. His explanation is as follows:

[ 1 h ]

*The Liberty of the Prefs is indeed efferitial to the inture of a frez $\because$ itate. And this confifts in lajing no previous tefraints upon pliblicati", ans, and not in ireedom from cenfure for criminal matter when publith"ed. Every freeman has an undsubted right to lay what fentiments he "pleafes befue the public; to forbid this, is to deftroy the freedom of the "prels: but if he publifies what is improper, mifchievous, or illegal, he " malt take the confequence of his own temerity. To fabject the prefs " to the reftrictive power of a Licenler, as was formerly done, both betcre "and line the revolution, is to fubject all freedom of lentiment to ihe "prejudices of one man, and make him the arbitrary and infallible judge " of all contruverfal points in learning, religion, and govermment. Ihit " oo punith (as the law does at prelent) any dangerous or ofenfive writ"ings, which, when pubhined, fhall on a fair and impartial trial be ad" jud ed of a pernicious tendency, is neceflary for the prefervation of "peace ans guod order, of government and religion, the only fclid fran"dations of civil hberty. Thus the will of individuals is fill left free; " the abute only of that free will is the object of legal punithment. Nei"ther is any reftraint hereby laid upon frcedom of thought or enquiry: "hberty of private lentiment is fill left ; the diffeminating or maling "public, of bad fentiments, deftructive of the eads of fociety, is the crime " which focicty correits. A man (fays a line writer on this fubject) may "be allowed to keep poifons in his clofet, but not publicly to vend them " as cocials. And to this we may add, that the only plaufible argument " hetconore ufed for the rettraining the juft freedom of the prets, "that " it "as neceffary to prevent the daily abule of it," will entircly lofe its "force when it is thewn (by a reafonable exercife of the laws) that the "prefs cannor be abuled to any bad purpole, without incurring a fuitable "puniflument: whereas it never can be ufed to any good onc, when under "the controul of an Infpe.lor. So true will it be found, that to cenfure "the licentioutices, is to manain the hberty of the preis." 4 Dhach. Com. ${ }^{5}{ }^{1}$.

It is believed, that in every ftate in the union the common law principles concerning libels apply ; ard in fome of the ftates wouds limilur to the words of the amendment are wed in the conflitition itflef, or a contemporary bill of rights of enull attlionity, whout ever being fuppeded to exclude any lav being patiod on the fabjert. So thit there is the flomeelt prool that can be of a unverial comeumence in America on this point, that the freclom of the preis does not require that libeliers finail be pres tected from panithmont.

But in fome repests the af of convers is moch more reftrietive than the principles of the common lan, of amperats the princupes of an fate in the minan. For umber the lav of the Untad States the truh of the matter may be given $\mathrm{i}_{\mathrm{i}}$ ctiduace, what at common law crimnal profechions was held int to be aminule; atd the punibhent of fue aid imprifome:t, whed at common law was liferetionay, is lmited in publicatien, with the feditoas in, ent pariculaty defoted. So at at $f$ the witing be falle, yet not mathere, or ualii as, and not fulte, wo conveion can the place. inis themene thily provides for ary pithfhort of a wilful and atrocious fallhood, And none furely will contend that the publication of fuch a fallhond is ammirg the indefeafible rights of men, for that would be to make the freedom of liars greater than that of men of truth and integrity.

I have now faid all I thought material on thefe important fubjects. There is another upon which it is painful to fipeak, but the notoriety a. well as the official certainty of the fact, and the impurtance of the danger make it indifpenfable. Silch inceffant calumnies have been poured againft the government fo: fuppoled breaches of the conflitution, that an infurrection has lately began for a caule where no breach of the conftitu. tion is or can be pretended. The grievance is the laid tax act, an act which the public exigencies rendered unavoidable, and is framed with particular anxiety to avoid its falling oppreflively on the poor, and in eftect the greatelt part of it muft fall on rich people only. Yet arms have been taken to oppole its execution: officers have been inful ed : the authority of the law relifted: and the govemment of the United States treated with the utmoft defiance and contempt. Not being thoroughly informed of all particulars, I cannot now fay within what clafs of offences thefe crimes are comprehended. But as fome of the oflenders are committed for treafon, and many certainly have been guilty of combinations to relif the law of the United States, I think it proper to point your attention particulally to thofe fubjects. The provitions in regard to the former; fo far as they may at prefent be deemed material or infructive, are as follow:

(Here the passages referred to were read. )

The only fpecies of treafon likely to come before you is that of levying war againt the United States. There have been various opinions, and different determinations on the import of thofe words. But I think I am waranted in faying, that if in the cale of the infurgents who may come under your confideration the intention was to prevent by fo ce of arms the execution of any act, of the Congrefs of the United States altogether (as for infance the land tax act, the objer of their oppelition) any forcible oppoli,ion calculated to carry that intention into effect was a leveing of war againf the United States, and of courfe an act of treafon. But if the intention was, merely to defeat its operation in a particular infance, or through the agency of a particular officer, from fime pivate or perfonal motive, though a higher ofience may have been committed, it did not amount to the crime of treafon. The particular motive mult however be the fole ingredient in the caie, $f_{s}$ if combined whth a general view to obiruct the execution of the adt, tie offence mut be deemed treaton.

With regard to the number of wimeffes in teafon, I am of cpinion that two are necelfary on the udiciment as well as upan the trial in court.

The provifun in the conftitution, that the two nitneffes mult be to the fare overt-act, (or actual deed conftitutiog the treatonable offence) was in conleguence of a confrution which had prevaled ia England, that thesh two witeffes were recuired to prove an aut of treaion, yet ii one witnes proved one act, and another withels anothe: ats of the fame fipecies of tieation, (as for intlance that of levying war) $i$ i was furticient a decifion which has alsays appeared to me contrary to the true intenin of the law which made two witiofles neceffary-this provifon beins, as I can: ceived, inte.ded to gland aganit fitticus charges of trafol, yhech an un-

Principited government might be terpited to fuppoit and encomagh etio 'at the expenceof perjury, a thing much mare diffecult to te effcied ty two witueffes than one.
An act of Cougrels which I have already read to you' (that cernmoinly *called the fedition act) bas fpecially provided in the manner you have Theard againf courbinations to defeat the execution of the laws. The cambinations puniflable under tlis aut munt be dittinguifed from fuch as in themfelves amount to treafon, which is unalteraibly fixed ty the conflitution ittelf. Any combinations, therefore, which before the pafint of: this act, would haye amounted to treafon, fill conflitute the fanne crime. To give the üct in queftion a different conflruction, woutd do away altogether the crime of treafon as committed by leyying war, becauic no war can be levied without a combination for fome of the purpofes flted in the act, which muf neceflarily confitute a part though not the whole of the ofence.
Loug, gentiemen, as Thave detained you, for which the great inmporance of the occaition, I truft, is a juft apology, it will be uffeful to recollect, that ever fince the firt formation of the prefent government, every act which any extraordinary difficulty has occafioned; Jias been uniformfy oppoofed betore its sdoption, and every att practilied to make the people difcontented after it : without any allowaice for the neceffity' wlich diftuted theris Some feem to have taken it for granted thiat' credit could be obtained without jultice, sloney without taxes, and the honour and lafery of the United States on'y preferved by a diffraceful foreign dependence. But, notwithfandirg all the efforts made to villify and indermine the governmerst, it has uniformily sofe in the efteem aidd confidence of the people. Tive bas difproved arrogant predictions; a true knowledge of the principles and conduut of the government has rectified many grofs mifrepreientations ; credit las rifen from its affes; the country has been found fullof relources, whick have been draẉ̣ without opprefion, and faithfully ap: plied to the purpofes to which they were appropriated ; juftice is impartially adminifered ; and the only crime which is fairly imputable is, that the minority have not been fuffered to govern the majority, to which they had as little pretenfion upon the ground of fuperiority of talents, patriotiin, or general probity, as upon the principles of republicanifm, the perpetual theme of their declamation. If you fuffer this government to be deftroyed., what chance have you for any other? A feene of the molt dreadful confuition mutt enfue. Anarchy will ride triumphant, and all lovers of order, decency, truth and juffice be trampled under foot. May that God whofe peculiar providence feerns often to have interpofed to fave thele United States from deffruction, preferve us from this worf of all evils! And may the inhabitants of this happy country deferve his care and prosection by a conduct beft calculated to obtain them.
 SIR,
THE Grand Jury of the Circuit court of the Diftrict of Pennfylvania, have heard with great fatisfaction, the Charge delivered to them, on the opening of the Court.

At a time like the prefent, when falfe philofophy and the moft danger.

With thefe fentiments firongly impreffod oa their minds, they unanimoully requef, that a copy of the faid charge may be delivered to them; for publication; efpecially for the information of thote, who are too eafly Ied by the mifreprecentations of evil difpofed perfors, into the commifiion of crimes, ruinous to themlelves, and againf the peace and dignity of theUnited States.

To the Gentlemen of the Grand Jury of the United States, for the diftrict of Pemmylvania.

Gentlemen,

I receive with great fenfifility the honor of this addrefs, from gentlemen whom I perfonally refpect to nuch. Believing, as I have long done, that the couftetution and laws of the United States afford the higheft degree of rational liberty which the world ever faw, or of which perhaps mankind are capable, I have feen with aftonifhment and regret, attempts made in the purfuit of vifionary chimeras, to fubvert or undermine fo glorious a fabric, equally conltructed for public and private fecurity. It cannot but be exaremely pleafing to me, that the fentiments on this fubject I delivered in my charge, fhould meet with your entire approbation; and as you are plealed to fuppofe the publication of them may be of fome fervice ia correcting erroneons opinions, I readily conient to it, coulidering your fanction of them as giving them an additional value, which will encreate the hope of the:r producing a good effect.

tirse men arrived or not, that the marflal had fent off four men of his poofe, in order to meet the men with arms who were consing forward, and after we were up fairs there were three men arrived as a deputation from the armed body, making enquiry as to the intention of the marfial in taking thefe prifoners : with thefe 3 men the 4 deputed by the marinal had recurned from the armed body that was the other lide of the bridge, in order to learn the marflal's object. The marflal afiured them of the legality of the procefs, and reaioned with them as to the confequences of oppoficion, or threats to him, or preventing him from executing his duty, but I believe he liberated the two men that were firl put in confinement, and retumed them their guns again. During the time that thefe two plea were in confinement we examined their guns, and found that they were both loaded. I was pretty much in the lower part of the houfe hackwards, and there was much of the proceedings of thefe people I did no: fece, in the front of the houfe, but I endeavoured to converfe with as many as I knew, informing them of the badnefs of their conduct, and the confequence of it, but it appeared to be to no effect, as I knew. About one o'llock I think I frift faw what was called the main body of this armed force, marching up the freet: there was a party of horife preceded the twot came riding up two a bedt, I am not certain whether they had their fiwords drann, but 1 believe they had, and then followed the foot, marching up in Indian (fingle) file, when they came up the foot marched twice round the tavern, and placed themelves in font of the houfe, where they ford leme time diawn up in fingle rank, I believe they were rifie-men they contined there till the refcue was ffieted. During this time I frequanty leard that the prifoners were dema:ded by them, and they in. fifted on their releafe.

Cross exumation. Did you bear the demanl mede?
No, I duld not, but I heard in the houfe that it bad been made; I alfo head that they interded to furce their paifege up fairs. I obferved a Faty coming up ftim, particularly one, whom I did not know, pointing a rite op the fi:irs, as though levelling it at fome particular perfon. Ihe pophe appeased very noify in the lower part of the houf, all this time, I fropiematy bard he ory of "deliver u; the priforers," and it appeared t., come fr: in the party at the foot of the hairs. During the affiur, I am nic certa:n whether it was previous to this or not, I looked out and fatis fix or eght man at the foot of the fairs and the promer on the fairs converfing with the maithow: whele I was faminy chere, there was an ad man, whom I undentond afterwards to be Joha Kiise, cane rumning in from the front door, and callee fir cajtan Frues in Geiman, telling hirn there was his fword; (offerin' it) I think he called thee diforent times, on which I clefred the prioner wase ts hand and tell him to watt it was not cuite !ine yet ; iho tly after the pribmers were griven up. I was not by to be able to hear the converiston between the marlial and the priforer.

Attorxir. Did Fries appear to take the commard ef the men?

Yies, I faw him at different times paffing to and fro:
Did any officer flay with the men that were drawn up in array befors the houfe?
I noticed captain Staeler particularly, giving orders to his troop, and with his fivord drawn.
Did you fee any communication between Fries and Staeler?
Not that I recollect.
After the prifoners were delivered up, the principal part of the men marched off: I particularly heard captain Jarrett call to his men: I do not recollect hearing Fries.
Did they take the prifoners with them?
No. I heard two or three men in the bark room fay that they mult fee the prifoners, and infifted they fhould be let go before they would leave, and particularly they enquired for the minifter, oue Jacob Ireman, he was a prifoner, and at that time actually in cuftedy.

Court. What were thefe prifoners in cu'tody for?
They were arrefted for combinations and in flemeanours.
There was, among the company in the lower rom, a man who declarod himelelf very violently; he faid if the damned ftamplers² had only fired a flot, we would have the wed what we could do. He was one of Staeler's company. He really expreffed a wifh that it had been done. 'the words were fpoken in Geiman.

Attorney. Were many, or any of thefe pecple in a military drefs as well as arms?

There was twelve or foupten of the horfe: I believe there were none of the feot, except that about ten or twelve laad cockades of blue and white, blue and red, fec.
Courr. Had they cartouch boxes, or any other means of carrying ammunition?

They had fhot pouches, particularly the rife company, and I believe all who had gums. Keefer, who was firt difarmed had a powder horn in his pocket : his piece was a common fowling piece, the others were mofly rifes, as far as I could perceive from the window.

How many armed men were there?
I did not count them, but there appeared about an hundred, or rather sbove that number. The whole croud alfembled I think could not have been lefs than 400 .

What number of perfons had the marflal with him for his poffe commitatus to arreft thefe people?
I think fourteen or fifteen.
How many prifoners do you think there were?
I believe eighteen or mizeteen.
Cross examinatijn. Did you ever gather more than you have now flated, of the intentin of th:ie people in affembling there?

I have frequently heard that they meant to opisme the laws.
What was the object declared by the people themifelves at that time?

* A Stanpler was explained to be a nick-name given in that country to the friends of govermment, originating from their support of the stant act.

I underftood that releafing the prifoners was the object they had in view, both from themfelves and from feveral perfons with whom they had converled on the fubject.

Wi as there a proceis again! thefe perfons who arrived, and were detained by the marflal?
No.
Court. Did you furpofe, from the converfation you heard, that it was theie two prifoners who were inteuded to be releafed, or the prifoners held in cuftudy by the marfhal ayain!t whom procefs was iffued?

I tuppujed thote prifuners who wele tiken by warant by the marfhal. I furize ied that the two perions who fifit came, came with iuproper views, and as fuch ouglit to be confined, and wifhed them to be kept till we faw there perons who were coming with arms.
Winat did the deputation from the le armed men demand?
The; demanted the relale of thoic two men, and they were releafed .previous $t$, the coming up of the armed men.

Coos examination. At the time that Fries was converfing with the marilial, alch why giad not aus orportunity of hearing what paffed, was there any viclence in his manner, or any appearance of rage in him?

As to lio wwa paticuld condui:, I cannot fay, for it was but a forr monents t.at I lidi tune to nutice ham: I faw no particular violence in his minater.

Did $y$ :a hear Fites compunicate to the croud the queftion he propofed to the marin!, and the marnhal's aufiver reipecting thete prifoners?

No.
Wis there any thing fail, during this tranfaztion about bailing thefe priki.e??

Ther was a demand mada by shankyler, in the room of the lower part of the houle, a thoit tune previons th the atial releale, hut the marflal told Shankwier that his ummand was to take him betiore the judge, and he could not aduiit him to ba!!

Was there, or not, a reneral overtire made to bail thefe prifoners?
Not that I recollect : there iras milich converlation on this fubject in difierent parts of the houle, but not as coming fiom the party; but I beleve it was obferved that if they could be bailed, it was probable the party might be indiuenced to withuraw, but this did not come from the pary therifelves.
you fantion that there were upwards of an hundred men in arms, and that the aforenate prefent was abour 400 , do you comider every individual who was there as partaking of this riot?

No. Though there were many of them that appeared there unarmed, were very violent in their experfions, and generally they were in oppofition to the govermment.
During this period, were there any commifineners, or affeffors there?
There was Mr. Ejerly, commifficner for that diff:is, Mr. Balliott, and the principal affefior, and I believe two other affeffors, if not more.

Weie any atts of viulence officed to thefe officers during thai time?
Not that I law.
Did thefe officers remain in the houff, or go down among the people?
They remained in the houe I belicre : they arrived there on Wednefday, the evening preceding.

Did they hear that there was a probability of the prifoners being refcued?

I dud not ake notice where they wene to after they were releafed; they went on up town.-When I fav the rinemen coming forward, I flopped t .11 they came up, and then lowke to them : they reemed that they would go on, but they promifed that they would do nothing.

Didi you let then know that the two perfons whom they had demanded were liberated?

Yes, I d.d, and the three men who went wih us told them alfo.-The horiemen did not wait one moment, but hurried on : they all then marched up town, and forned right in front of the tavern: I returne: with then. After they were formed there, I was amonr; them, and talked with them a great deal, but c uld not do any thing with them : if itere was ten or twelve that agreed to be moderate, the others would all wifift upon it, that they would have the prifones, all of them. We vele there for nealy or çute two bours. This man, whom they called capain Fries, came out and mentioned to his men that he would now have the prifoners, if ally of them would so into the houfe with him: he had been in backiard and forward leveral times. Helaid he thould go forement. He tuld them that he would afk the favour of them, that they ware, none of thein $t$, iire finft, if they weit in. He mentioned to them like., ifle, that there were fome armed men on the fairs belonjing to the marithal. I did not expect he would go in : I was tathing to fome men there, when I looked rominl and faw fiome of the men at the door: le fa.d he woold go foremalt: he ligmfied, talking in German, that he finculd get a blow or a ftroke: the nearelt tranllation was, "I fhall get it." -1 in oking round, fav the men going in at the duor, and I followed them in: they were armed men. I did not fie the rifioner afier he had mentioned them words. I ,rot in, betweca the men and the flairs at the foo of the flairs: they halted there, I got in theer, in order to keep them back from goin, un ftars ; I was there but a few minutes, when I fave the prifoners coming down tidiris.

Atruazaz. Did you notice any particular circumfances that took place ai this ime ?

Uici.iss. ihey were determined to go on; a little fellow amono them, I d, mot kin, wifis has, fecmed to be very angry.
Were they at that moment aking for the prifoners?
Yes, they fad hey would have the prifoners.
What was the coriduct or expeefions of the marhal at that time?
I do no: know, I was not fo near as to hear any thing : after the prifonets were fet ac hiberty, they were all gone in a few minutes; they feemed to be much pie.tied that they had them.

Repeat particulaly what captain Fries faid, when he told the men to come tirward.

He faid If ie dil. git ${ }^{i}$, thicy flould not be fcared, they then muft do as well as they coull: : in iad he expecied to get leme trooke ; he told them they muft take care of themfelves: I du not recollect that he faid tiley thvild floot, yet I recollect fomething he faid; I think it was "fily ftrke or do as well as you can." The prifoner at the bar went before, and he rather withed the men to follow him.

On being queftioned again as to the words ufed by the prifoner: the witnef's repeased it in German, which was tranflated in the ront to mean the the expeited to get it, and if he did, they muft frike, and flab, and do as well as they could. Seblaget, stechoi uid macht so gut als ibr konnet.

Cross examination. I underftand you to fate, that when you went out at the requeft of the marfhal, it was to fpeak to thefe people, and that they toid $y$ ua their object was to obiain the liberation of the two men belonging to their party.

Court. Did none of them fay any thing about the tax law?
Wirness. I did not hear them fay any thing.
What became of the prifioners after they were liberated?
I believe they all went to their homes.
Did you oblerve no vialence whatever?
No, I did not either by violence or by words hear the prifoner, nor any other perfon aceempe at any thing, more than what I have faid.

JOTN BARNETT, fiworn.
Atronney. Relate to the court what occuired on the 7 th of March at Betblshem.

Witsess. On the 7 th of March in the morning early, juft as I got up, the deputy marihal handed ine a fummons, at which I was a little flattered till I read it over. The funmons was, that I fhould be at Bethlehem at 10 o'cl.ck, to aid and affift the marfhal in executing the laws of the United "tates. He alio fent we fome blank R.timons, defirin; me to fummon as many muse as 1 pietuel. I put Chititian Winters, and John Muhillan's names down ; we could not find any more grod perfons for that bufinels. $\Lambda$ brut to ocl ck I arived at Bethlehem. I was there but a very flort time, when fomebrdy came in, and taid he had me: 20 men at one place, 12 at an ther, 8 cc . walking towards a tavern, on the road, about 3 or 4 miles from Bechlehem; I cannot recilleet its name. The marthal, Mı. Irely, M.: Hemy, Mr. Balliot and others agreed that they thought it would be beff to iend three or frur men to me et them, and to flop them on the rad : it was then to be decided who flowld go. I mentioned that I thought John Mi,holiai and William Barnett could do more with them, tha: any bely elit. : hey were awreed upon as was Chrifian Roth (or R :e) and another, but liaac Hatiel went in his place. This was, conformable to agreement, two federalits and two anti-fecleralifts. They went and met them, I remained at the houle. They were not gore very lons, indeed I think it was juft as they were getting upon their horfes, there was two men, arrayed, and with arms ; one had a ritic, and the other a fmooth bore piece. When thoy were cone into the yard, the marfhal went down in to the yard to them, and talked to them; bibit he talked to them, I did not hear. However he took their arms awav fom them, and carried them up fairs, and put them by themielves. Bied after that, there was nee or fix hortemen came, I was informed that there was one man of them named shankwyler. The marfaland jadge Henry went down to meet them, they aked them what they come there for : they faid, they only cane there io be Shankwyler's bail: and judge Henry then alred them what they did with their arms? They faid they did not mean any harn with them. They then oot oft their howes, and went into a roon with the jud $\mathrm{g}_{\mathrm{c}}$ and the marthal : what they faid there, I do not khow, for I did noe hear them. Prefeatly after there cams ap a troop of hore, and behind them there was two companies of rifteme:. They marched up right into the yaid and formed before the door of tho taven.

How many rifemen do you fuppofe there was ?
About 50 .
Had the light horfe their fwords drawn?
Yes.
How many do ;ou fuppofe there were in the whole?
On a rongh calculation I luppole iso or 40 armed men.
Ho:r many was there of the marlhal's pofie ?
About 16 or 17.
After they had formed a line in the yard, about 15 or 20 miniten Captain Jarrer arrived, whea they gave three humss. He then went into the houle and talked with the Marthal: the Ntarhal requefted him to get the men to witharv. Fe proleiled he would. He had arrived from Philadelpha, whinder he had wen to give bail. Afer this, Jarrett faid at the tavern abut twou has. The men lept regular order, and never feparated. The intathal apointed war ur me me three others ts, kee, the guard of the fars, ame! win whols, two at the botom, and two at the hearl. I lered mo time, and the fecome time I was orlewd on guard by Capt. Henar Sarder, l faid on the platiom at the turn of the faire, when Pres, we prons, came up to me, and wanted to co up ftars. I told him lhat he could not be permittel to go up fair, without the Marthal's leate. I then alked him what he wanted? He andwered that he wated to lee the Marhal. I told him that I expected he could lee him, and told bme m:a at the head of the fairs to call the Marthal out of the romi. Ife came out, and I then told him thefe two gentemen wanted to talk to him. He faid I flould let them pafis. As Fries was the fint mu, lle him prit on bitween me and the other guad. The ofher man wanted to $\because 0$ up, fut I teld him that one at a time was cnough, and that when the charin! done, he would be permitted to talk to him too. Wise then werit a, and told the Marhat what he came for : he replied that he was cenc for the releafe of the prifmers. I faod chat by them when they were talking. The Atathal made anfwer that he could not give them up to hin ; he thea told the Marihal that he wouk have them: Well then, faid the Marfhal, you mult get them as well as you can; for he faid it was out of his power to deliver them up; he dared not to do it. Fries then tuld the Marhal that he had a fhirmill yellerday, and he expected to have another one to day; he then faid to the Marlhal, "As for you Marfhal, I will vouch that none of my men will hurt you, but as for the other company I will not vouch for.

Do you know what he meant by the other company?
No.
Where was Mr. Balliott and Mr. Ircly at this time?
They were in the room where they commonly were, up ftairst
What anfiver did the Marfhal make to that?
I do not know.
With that both of them marched off. I remained on guard. A litile while after this, I faw the men coming in at the door, and they got into the entry, with arms. I did not know one of thofe who came in except Fries: he returned with thofe armed men. He had a fword in his kand, but I think it was in its fcabbard. When they got into the entiy, they were prefled upon by the poffe, who foon got them clean out of the dour. I then got off guard. The language of the men was, that they would have the prifoners. I could not hear many of their expreffors, becaule I was chiefly up fairs, but I heard them fay they would not leave the ground till they had the prifoners. The marfhal at this time had fone back into the room. Before the prifoners were reicaled I was relieved. When they made the fecoud attempt, I was up ftairs, looking out of the window. I believe Chriftian Winters took my pof. Thefe prifoners were at this time up fairs in a room by themfelves.

How many prifoners were there?
About fixteen or eighteen.
Where was Shankwyler at this time?
Inc was down ftairs in the back room, he was not taleen up fairs at all.
no you know any of the cther pifioners?
No.
Court. Did there appear to be any kind of acquaintance, or friendhip; between Fries and any of the priloners?

No, Ibelieve there was not.
Did they appear to wifh to be refcued?
No, the prifoners faid they did not with to be refued by thofe peopla, they laid that they knew none of thofe people that were before the door. If they had done any thing wrong; they faid they were willing to go any where to take their trials. The minifter, and the Lehi people were all there.

Cooss examination. Was there any violence onered?
Virisess. I faw them point theit guns toward the window often couregh.

Was any violence offered to any perfon, befies what was offered to the mailial?
iNo.
Did you hear thefe men fay that they came there for any other purfole than to refcue the prifoners?

No, I did not, and I believe that was all.
Counsel. No violence of manner or expreffion was ufed while Fries was talking to the marmal, was there ?

Witness. No, he had ins finord in his hand, and in its fablacd ac that time, and the other manhendis fiwd, and a regmental coat on.

Daning the time that you nove there, had any perfon office Fies his food?

Not that I krow, I did not hear any wion.
You did not hear any one coy out, lewe Di. Frice, l.ein is your fword?

I keje iny thumb to the poclall the time: they then fepped back, and fod fems talk, bat I could ant mak ont their exprefiums. They then went cat if the door again, and the prioners cane dows. The marfial cane on in the platform, and I lefe my phace. The marhal fent me down to learn the name of a perfon.

Coner. Had you any concerfation with the peopho out of doors?
Witress. I hat a mood deal, and the the comerumaces of their conduct. They faid that they weie all arant the prioners coming down to this place, they fhould be tricd in their owa momey. I did not hear any thing about the laz, they meely compained abont the prifoners being taken down to Fhiladelphia, and nothing about the laws as all.

Atronen. Had yount a dipule with one of then?
Witxess. Yes, I was fent down by the marhal to encuire a man's name; he wated to knew wat I aked him for ; he iened to be fared: he faid he did not mean to do any harm to ayr one. I do not know his name. Wheal I poke to this youns man, one came up and faid don't tell this danned Stampler. The meaning of this word I think is about this flampact ; they called theie perple stampiers that told them the confequenices of this condati. It is the watit a term of reproach. The man who called me fanpler flack at me, but did not hit me; they tuld me his name was Hemer.

Cross examination. The pecple daparted as foon as the prifoners were acleaferl, did tiey not?

Witsess. Yes.
Did you whe all hapua to the man who fruck at you?
I culied hem a raca, or fenethens that way.
CHRISMAN ROME, fivom.
On tie thaf March, I was furmoned to go to Behehem, but did r:ot kuow what it was fur. About in o'clock I got to Betheltem, whea 1 cane, Mr. Eyerty came to me, and toll me fone mon were onning there to refue the prifoneis, I thought it ate pronible, but he thl ine it was certain. When we lad hern there ab ut the hours, the:c camse two

 They told us they were inforacel that there were a number of men mes there today, fo thoy faid they came there to be hew they came on: Ciny did not fay what they head the: were to meet fro. We took them and put them into the houfe umers gard, and $t$ wh: thio arms from the timen withan a mile of Behlelom. I dulut know a fingle man of them, bat judre Mollollan and majow Banett farke to them frif, but I did not nudutan! what they faid. I went harther bach, to the rear: If faid to then what in the world are you about men; you will bring yourfelves in to great trouble. One of them mentioned, we don't know you: I mentioned if you know me or not, you will thank me for it. I faid, if you do not do as I advifc you, yon will be forry for twenty years after this; fo there was one of them that levelled his $g$ g.un at me: faid I, little man, comfider what you are about, don't be too nuch in a lurry : then fome of his comrades pallhed him hach. Then that man hallowed out, march on, don't mind tiis people: 1 do not know his name. They then marched on to the briaje, and there we flopped them again. They then agreed amongt themlelves that they would fend three men with us th the marfial, to fee if they could get the two prifoners we took at firlt, liberated, and gave their honour that none of them fhould come over the bridge with arms. We then went with thefe three men to the tavern, at Bethlehem. They then went to the marfial and agreed with him, and the two prifoners were difcharced, but he fat down their names. I do not recollect their names. Whea theie two men were difcharged, we went to go back with them amain, but when we came to the lower end of Bethlehem, there was thant company and another coming on, and there was no fopping them again.

Atrokemi. Did they hoow thefe men were difcharged before they paftad the bridere?

Witmes. I do not know.
Inw far is the bidige from Debithem?
About half a mile.
Do you know which way thefe two men went?
They went with us I think, but I am not fure. I endeavoured to fop them to reafon with them, but they would not, and I then told them if they were determoned not to hear, they misht do as they pleafed.

Wid you fee the prifoners, in this company?
No, 1 did not lee this man at all to my krowledre.
As I came back to Betinchem, I went up flairs to Mr. Eyerly and tice marthal. The men paraded before the tavern, and there I think they were for two hours.

Foir many do you fuppofe there were in arms.
Ifupofe izo men or upwards, were drawn up.
Did you fee thofe two men that were firt kept pifoners?
Yes, I faw them mix: along with thefe people.
Were the light horfe armed?
Tes, fome of them, and with there unifurms.
Had they their fwords drawn?
No, not till they came near to the tavern, then they drew their fwords, a great nunber of them. Before we flated from the bridge, we athed them again what they were about ? they told us that they were informed that they lad tahera a number of prifoners, and that they would take them to Philadilphia, and put them in gaol there, and no bail would be taken for them : we atked them what prifoners it was they meant? they mentioned one mame only that I recollect, which was one Shankwyler. They mentioned $t$ 'lat they would not fuffer Shankwyler to be put to ganl in Philadelphin: dhey mentioned that they would give bail ten double for him, or that they might put him in gaol in our own county, aide try him in our own celunty. I lisiv one Schwartz come up into the room where the marthal was.

Court. Was not you among them after they came to Bethlehem?
No, I was not. Old Schwartz frid he had two fons in the company, and they were two of the prettief boys in the company.

Did you fee any of the people in the yard levelling their guns at the window?

No.
Cross examination. Was there any other of this company befides Schwartz that came up into the room?
No.
Did any one abufe, threaten or infut Mr. Eyerly.
Not that I know of. I heard no threats againf airy one.

> COLONEL NICHOLS, the Marfal, fworn.

Attorner. Mr. Nichols, pleafe to relate the tranfactions which led to the fubject of the indicment againf the prifoner, and the affair at Bethlehem.

Witness. Some time between the zoth and 26 th of February the warrants I now hold :a my hand were given to me by the atterney of the diftrict, with orders for me to go to Norchampton comety to execute them. 1 fat out on the 26th and aiter ferving fome fubpeneas on the road, in order to get fome evidence about fome matters that were wanted to be in poffefion, I got to Nizareth on the finf of Maich, next morning, Mr. Eyerman and myfelf went into Lehi townhip to ferve fome warrants upon Dome perfins who had given their oppoftion to the houfe tax law. I think we got twelye of them that day, the others were not to be found. I thiak there were five of them, however they came in afterwards. We then returned to Betheham, and there met with Col. Ballintt. We went then to Macungy townhip, aid there we net with no dificulty till we went to the houle of George Syder; I had a fubpene on him: he ard his wife infulted us very much; his wife began abufugg us firf, and he came out with a club, and would by no means be purfuaded to receive it I luppofe not undentardiag it : I gave it to a Mis. Schwartz, a neighbour, who undertock to dectiver it to him. We then proceeded to Millar's town, a few mites father : on the way we foppod at the houle of the Rev. Mr. Buikn, where we left our horfes, and walked into the town, to the honfe uf George Sheffer, to ferve a warrant on him; but were informed that he was not in town. We returned to the tavern, about the centre of the town, and there we fair a conliderable number of poople affembed. Mr. Eyerly and myfelf walked over to Shankwyler. As we walked out, many people ran after ne, and many ran pait us, and getting into the houlc, filled the long room. There appeared to be about aity men. Near the houfe in which Shankwyler lived, we concluded it wa bel policy to af for hing, for hy that means it was not likely we finuid fund him. And therefore as colunel Ballintt knew him, I got him to piant him out to me; bus upon obfervisg tre, he withirew into the croud, Ifollowed him, and haid hild ca him, aid told him he was my prifoner in the name of the Linited States. I trld him J was the marflal of the Cinised States for the lemetylama diftrit. Fie setreated towads his harr. Ite afterwards called out that he would not hurt the marflal, but Leerly and BaMiott were damed rafeals: after this the people called out to each cother Scbiciget, Siblagut: (ftrike, Arike) This feemed to be the general viice of the people. There was one of the Shaeffer's feemed to be a prominent chaiacier; it was David.

I told thim the conicurace of their attemption to frike: I had a pair of piftols, and findiag the dager we vere in, I pailied open the bitoms of my great coat, that 1 might, if neceflary, get a ready gripe at them: whether they fow then cin not, I canot fir, but when hey found that I was detemined nes to buber thefe peuple to be abaled, they ware then a litile quet : they, homever, pulled the cockade nat of Mi. Balliott's hat, and I believe would bave done more vivence to him, had ther dared. I called on Shankwler to with me to Bethehem, and thenie to Mhiladelpha, but he fwore lie would no: : I told hinn the confequence of relifting the authrity of the Liniced States, siatit vould be ruin to him; he declared and f.ore he woud rehit ; he would not fubmit, be the confequence what it might, I told him it would ruin his intereft and family ; he faid he would do it, if it was to the deftuction of his property, and chidren. However, he finally agreed to mect wis at Bethlehem, but never promiped to fubmit, or furrender himfelf as prifoner: He fpoke a good deal about the ftamp ait, and the houfe tax; that feemed to be the bone of contention, and he faid he had fought againft it, and would not fubmit to it now; I tuld him he appeared to be too young to have fought on either lide during the war: he then faid, his father had, be then added that there were none in favour of thofe laws but tories, and officers of rovernment. I told him that, as to tory, that could not apply to me, that I had harl a llare in the revolution, and that I was as fond of Jiberty as any of them. We came away, and as we came out, Mr. Eyerly and Mr. Balliott came out of the door, ihey huzzaed for liberty: I told them that 1 hoould join them in that, if they would huzza for liberty of the rigit kind ; but this was liecntious liberty. We then went with a conftable to ayte? Adam Stepham, Herman Hartman, and Daniel Everly. When I returned, I was informed that the refcue of the prifoners at Bethlehem was intended. This was on the fixth of March. I could fearcely conceive it pofible; I thonght it was fomebody for their own diverfion had raifed it me:t, whan un, unt we gut to Bethlehem, where we sot that nigh: The: we weic informed that the report was ferious, and that it woul be atemped by a body of armed men. On which I contulted with jud,e Heary, Mr. Bahtot, PIr. Eyerly, Mr. Horlefield, and gencal Drown. I had taken a bond of the Loli pionk, with fireties for their appearace. I hest MI. Weed orer the momain to arref Ireman, the miniter, and f ha Fo, whin be did. Secing this matier very ferious and important, ixaced sencolbona to remain at Bethehem, as he had very sreat indube in that cronty: he faid he mas fo near home, that he fhould so hoin', as he had beew fo long from his family, I then afked him $t$ re ma in the momin, but he feemed to thisk there was no necefity for it, and dind ant. I than contalted what flep it would be neceffary to take; I had ith an attmen, and whd him I was ondered that they fhoud not be an anmed hure; I thea fooke to judere Ienty, expeting that he cond call out amed men, hat he told me he cotd not, for he had reccived fimilar mftertions. We then combede! to call about 20 men. He called this pone from the nethourhoud of Bethlehem and Isflen, about 18 of then cane in. About 10 or it ock two men riding into the yard, difmonoted, and phaced themfelses upiofte the coor, by the fide of each other; one of them had a loas caooth bere gun, and the other a rite. Sone people in the houfe weat out to feak to them, and afted them what broughe them there: they leemed to be at a lofs for all anfier ; I think one of thein faid they came out on a mooting frolic: I then alked them what they meant to hoot: they did not know, nor could they explain the object of their coming. I afied them what they meant to do: one of them faid they neant to do what was beft for the country. I then fuppofed that they would all come in by Aragoling patties, and therefore thought it was the beft way of making the bufinef; eafy, was to lead them into the houfe, which I did, and put their arms into the garrett. Shortly after, three horfemen, armed, and, I think, in uniform came into the yard with Shankwier : I went and fpoke to them, and fome went with me. I aked Shankwyler if he was come to deliver himfelf up; be anfiwered no. I afked him that he came for, if he did not come to furrender himfelf, he anfwered that he came to tee his partner: on farther enquiry I found he meant his accufer. By this time the people were collecting very faft, and fome perlons mentioned that there was an armed force down by the bridgc. On confulting with the gentlemen who were with me, it was agreed that a few men hould be dent to fpeak to them, and warn them of the danger they were in if they perfilted in the meafure which we fuppofed they intended. It was accordingly agreed that four gentlemen foould go, which they did, and in a litrle time returned with three of their force, as a deputation from them to ipeak to me. I alked them what was meant by this armed force, and and what they intendel by it : they anfwered me that they wanted to prevent my taking the prifaers to Philadelphia. I told them that could not be, nor mult be; nor muft it be attempted, they had much better go back, and tell the people to go to their refpective homes. I think they afked me, particularly for the twe men who had finft been mede prifoners; I forget whether I gave them lp then, or fome fhort time after; however, they were given up, and their gus were given up to them: they wee both loaded, and one of them was putting a new fint into his gun, in the yard, before I went out to feak to them. The fame gentlemen who weat down to fpeak to them at the bidge, went down to them again, and, a thort time afterward, we obferved that they were coming up in force, up the frect, Mr. Muhollan riding wath the foremolt of then, and fipaling to them: the horiemem, fuch as had foods, hed them drava: the infartry marched with trailad ams. The priture at he bur was at the head of the intantry, win his fword drawn: the horie marched ino the yard, and formed in front of the houle, the infantry marched round the honle, and the captain, with the leading file, came in at the upper gate. I had a great deal of converfation with dherent perion: amons them, who feemed to take a lead. They were all ftrangers to me, I thed hem the confoghences of their atempting to refue the pifoners; I told them they might relt allured that things of this lime what be feverely punilated by the govemment; that it would be confered an in, ? when, am! hat every infult offered to me, would be an inctat to tire Linited States. I had a geod deal of comveration with the pituecr at the be:, wibont knowing that he was captain Frics, thl heme hamit luman to me I Atrorycy. Did they fpeak of any prifoners in particular?

Witness. No, they fpoke generally of the piifouers.
Did the prifoners sjeak of them as particular friends neighbours, of acquaititances?
No, the meafure was his object. During this converfation, he was without his fword. The fubfance of the converfation was, he demanded of me the prifoners; I refufed to give them up, and told him the conicquences of his demands. On his fill inditing, I told him that he and thofe about him would be feverely punilled for this condue, that he would furely be hanged. He faid they conld not bs punithed : he faid fomething to the effect that the govermment were not frong enough to hang him, for that if the troops were brought out, they would join him.

Atronney. Did he give any reafon for wifhing to refcue thufe prioners?

His reafon was, that he was oppofed to thofe laws: the Alien law, the flamp act, and the houfe tax law, ard firid they were unconflitationalo He alfo lpoke of briaging people charged with c:imes to Philadelphia to be tried as an opprelive ching: they had no objection, he raid, to be tried in their own courts, and by their own people. We parted, and met in the croud two or three times, for the houfe was much crouded: he flill demanded of me the prifoners, I tcld him I could not give them up: I told him I was commanded to bring then to Philadelphia : he inlifted upon having them, and I that he fhould not. He then went and talked to his people, and came to me arain. He told me that if I did not give them up, he would not aufwer for the confequences: he told me that he would not hurt me: he was the oldeft captain in the rank, but he would not anfwer for then that were with me : that he took command of the whole by rank. By this time captain Jarrett cane in, and by this time there was much noife and huzzaing. I was told that this noife was on account of the arriral of cuptain Jarrett: I wifled him pointed out to me in corfidence, that, :s he had come to fubmit to the laws, he would be able to periuade others to do the famis. He was to me; he had a pair of piftlohs in his hand. He thewed me that he had entered into recognizance for his apparame. I then begged him to ule his intuence in perfuading the pesple to diperes, and coo to their refpestive homes, and told him what would be the confequence if they did not. His anfwer was, that he had no i.fluenee ; that he could do nothing. After this, I confulted with judro Henry and rthers, what was beft to be done; it feemed to be them orinion thin: I had beter fubait, and give up the prifoners: I told then I wowd not do it, I would immediately march the pateners to thiadelphia, and ia the amed mob thought proper to take Eaen foom me, they might, it woud thea be their act, and not mine: I went to them, and tond them 1 , propere for march immediately, for that we would fet off to Phladet ha. ine Lehi prifoners faid they would not do fo, they would mat enpas thenetres to to much danger, but if I would falfer them in oo to ther home, they wouk meet me in Philadelphia on the Monday or The thay fohlowing. I met Mr. Fries about the foot of the ftairs, and he full jerfhited in his demand of the prifiners, that I mult give them up.
Cross canmination :ad he a frord with him?

Yrimais. I do not think he had a fword at that mement. I refued; and went into the back room, and a perinn whom I did not know, told tise, that if I did not give them up I fhould not be hurt, but the life of Balliott, Ejerly and Henry were in danger. This was not an armed mian. I did not like to expofe the lives of thofe men, fo $I$ refcued them. Fries came in directly, and faid I had not given un Ireman, the minifter. I told him I bad; he then went out, and came in again, and faid he was without. He then mcunted and went off.

Artonser. Dit you really apprehend any danger to the gentemen who were with yca?

Witerss. I did apprehend that the lives of thofe gentlemen would be in danger if I refafed the prifoners.

Who had you thea in poffefion as prifoners?
We had liox, Ieman and fome others who had not furrendered themfelves, befides the Lehi people.

PHILIP SCHLAUGH,
When I was at Bethlthem, which I expect was the 7 th of March, tle firl I fa:w was that the company was ordered in rank, and when that was done, this Fries was in the entry of the houfe; where he was fyealing? loud. I enquired who that was, they faid it wàs captain Fries: He faid them who was the greateft torics in the laft war, them was the head leaders now ; then I went out of the houfe, and the went up to the marfhal, and when he came out again, he welit up to his company, and told them " Well brothers, I went up to the marfhal, and afked him about the prifoners, and tuld him I would have the prifoners, büt the marhal told me he dare not give them up aillingly; I tell you, brothers, we have to pafs four or five centries, but I bez you not to fire frift on them, till they firf fre upon us: I hall be the foremaft man; I fhall go on before you, and 1 expect I thall get the firit blow." Then he turned himfelf round. Mr. Mullollan, and others berged him that he would not go on in this matter, they would rather go and fpeak to the marflal that he fhould deliver up the prifoners willingly, if they would abfolutely bave them.

Did the men rull on when be old thein this?
Yes, they fcllowed him. He then faid to them,you mult not fire firf; but if they do fre upon you, then I will order you to fire too, and help yourfelves as well as you cai. I did not wait till the prifoners were relealed, fir when I heard this, I thought there was going to be warns work, fo I got upo: my horif, and rode off to Eafton as falt as I could.

Tbursday May 2.

JOSEPH HORSEFIELD, efquire, qualified.

Itronver. Pleafe to relate the particulars of the affair at Bethlehen as tar as came to your browledge.

Wirness. I live in Bethtehem; am a juftice of the peace there, and was there on the 7 th of March.-Shortly before the laft general elc:ion, the firite of difcontent and oppolition was fenfibly felt in the courty of Northampton; there were different meetings called in different parti of the countr, among others, I was informed there was one at which the ailliai oficers were particularly to attend, which I underfood was intendel to prepare a ticket fir the election. At that meeting, furd ${ }_{1 y}$ refolution were $\mathfrak{a f t e d}$, which appeared in public prints, among others; one was that petitions fhould be formed to obtain a repeal of the alien and fedition laws, and the land tax act. I was informed that the capm tains of the militia companies were to be ferved with a copy of each of thele petitions : I was likevite informed that this was done, and a five pemiy bit each paid frecly for a copy, though the Germans love their money io well. I think tixe pople were told that the petitions merely contamed a requet for the epeal of the houle and land tax law. I have feen none of them. On, the election ddy, the people preity generally collected and, at leat in the dift.ita where $l$ had a right to vore, the firit of oppofition againt the meafores of goveriment were fo miveral, that a friend of government, by fayis me wod in favour of it, was reaty to be abufed, and I underfood it was foin every elcetion diftiot in the countr, and the county in general gloried that they had gained the day. Nothing nateial occatred, to ay kiowled, en, from that time till the marlital arrived there.

Atroning. Did the aliements go on regulaty before that time?
Witaess. No.
What dio youknow of that fact ?
I never was prefent at any nppofition myfelf, for I motly flay at home.
Did not the pirit of oppofition which had begun before the election, increafe before the marthal arrived ?

It daily increated.
In the berinning of Marcl, the marfhal of the United States amived at Bethehem, I thiok about the 3 . I having fome perional acquaintance with that gentleman, waited on him, when he tod me he was dent to the county on bulinels for the United States, and delned me to inform him where feveral certain perfons refided, againt whom he had precepts from the diftrict judge. 1 acquainted him with the couries and ditances. He then went to Nazareth, and returned again about the fifch, telling me he had fumoned a number of perfons in 1 ehi townilup, and that they were to be at Bethlebem on the 7 th. On the 6 th in the evening, 1 vas informed he had reiuned from Millar's town, and on the $\boldsymbol{\text { th }}$ in the mornirg I weat up to town, when he thl me that he expected there would be fime difturbance that daj; and aho wid me that he had ifived fummons's for the posse o mentatus. Betucen io aind it oclock tlie pofle came, I think they were about it in muber. A condiderable number of penple from the neish mbood of Bethel:cm, lawd collcee!, unamed. Mr. 1) ixen arived Gom Emans abous in obluck, and momed the marifal that on his way be met win a mumer of peple onilected at a taven called Reiters, in anms, beth iwnemen and foomen, about 6 miles fom Bethethem, ard that he mee a number on the road, paty armed, partly manmel. About bali palt cleven, two men arrived at Bethehem armed, from that quarer : they were dilimed and fint up fains into a room : abont the date time a mabler of perfons arrived from Lehi townhip, who were allo fent u, ftais by the marlhal in a room by themfetes: they wete about deren in number. I was pretent when Mr. Eyenly fouke to thefe pibues, tellog thom that an armed force was formed with intemin to rcicue them; the pormen anfwered that they by means wilhed it : that ther would fubmit to go with the marflal rather than be relcued. In about an hour, I was looking cut of the window up fairs, and law ridug into the yar? a number of horiemen, bedides tome footmen : 1 Taid to the mathal, I thuabt it wat beft for us now io go down and fee there poople. I went down and afked one of them what was his neme, he anfered Daniel Shaeffer. He had a fword at his fide, and two pillols: next to him, on hortebeck, was Heary Shaikwyler, nest to him was another horimana accoutred in the fame mamer ; bis name was lhiI:p Dacich ; there werc all.) J.fln Dillinger and Jacob Kline, not in uniform but wich fords in the feabberd. 1 athed them what they wat:ed: we are all civil people and tave no ams, was my obfervation to them. Dillinger who feemed to feeak for them, faid that yefteday the marthes had taken Shankyler and fome other of their neighbours pilloners, that they were come to fee Shank ler's pane: (accufer.) The marlhal tud them that the United States was the aceuter if Wif. Shaikwyler. Dillinger laid he thonght it was not right that he howd be taken to Pliladelphia. The warthal faid that the julde had ordeced it fo. 1 told him tha: I thought they were unacquainted with the goveriment of the Uhitral Stares, and I thought they vere in a very critical and dangerous fittiatom ; that the Custed States in left than 20 days could mufter 10,000 men, which power I thought they could not with ftand, and that it was beft for them to furrender the prifeners to the marthal, and go home. They faid that Shankwyler and the others were their neighoors, and that they would wait and fee what fhould become of them. 'I hey dal not mention the others names. I afked whether any more armed man voould be theie; Jacio Khe anfwered, 50 more. Wiith that we bent into the hadfe. Afier dianer the perple collected very fant, and Dilliager began again to fipeak in betrill of Shankwler. The marfal told him it could nit be utherwif, gule muth: Shankwler anfwered that he had a famly to take care of, aml tirat he woild not $g$. With this, the marfhal and my? walled ap fiais, and there fav a great number of armed peop le roud the houts, I thatk 120 or 130 , and about 250 unarmed. I firgetefed the marlhal that my fufficions wete very gloomy; that I donored whether fe would fuceed in takag ofl the prifoners, for 1 hat cuie:ly head anome the pecple that weer in the houfe, and out of do $t$, , inat nothey mould fatisiy then but the delivery of the pifoners: in tront of the houle was dawa up a number of men armed. Wirxess. No, they frid in the yard.-I looked out of the windors assin up fairs, and there I faw a fecond preffure, to come in at the door fome of the men who were in the ranks thunped their gus mever the ground, and jumpal, pronouncing fome uninteligible hiricks, favioge like finieks. I begred the marfhal, fior God's fake to deliver up woie men up fairs, for tie eefcue was perfect in my opinicn: the clofing of the men would be only butcheriag, and I had no doubt the govermment of the United States would not let its dignity be trangled up, in this way. The marthal full continued to heflitate. By this time a number of pirfons had got into the houfe, adorned with large thee coloured Feweh cockades. The p fie itand up fairs at this time: I hen wonked my way down Aars again, in order to be redy for a jump. By this time I underfond that the prifiners were dehvered. Afer the prifisers wele gone abour ten minutes, there was not a fingle armed man in, or about the houfe : fone of the neighbours who had collected were flill there, fone of wh:m weie approving, and others difapproving of the conduct of the infinguits, but in my opinion, the majority were approving.

Have you any knowitede of the conduct of the prifoner at the bar, at Bethlehein?
No, I never faw him till I came down to this place, but I frenue:tly heard the name of cuipain Fries called.
Cross cxamination. Did you lee Mr. Henry or Mr. Ballictt in the room looking out of the window?

Witwess. Mr. Rallintt looked out of the window but flepped back a gain pretiy quick, afraid of the muzzles of the guna.
Courr. At the time that judge Peters iffued warrants for the apirehenfion of thofe people, do you think any magitlrate in the county could have iffuel them, and made them returnable to himielf?

Witness. I look upon it that the fate julitices were a nullity. Many people came to me, afked me if the law was dead : I told them No, they flyould fiet hear of me being dead.
Cross examination. Was there any appications made to any of the juffices of the peace?

Not to my knowedge, but I think the juftices of the peace could do nothing with it.

JOHN MOIHOLLAN, Efq. fiworn.
Atrornei. Was you at Bethelem on the 7 th of March?
Wirness. Yes.
Pleale to inform the court and jury what took place there.
Witness. The reafon that I was there was from a fummons I had. received to attend the marlial that morning. Agreeable to that fumsmons I went there about 11 o'clock, and we went at the direction of the marhiai to meet the force over the bridge. Chriftian Roths, William Barnett, and J. Hartfell went with me.

He then related the occurrence of the meeting the companies, and the delegation of three men from them, which was much fimilar to the teflimony of William Barnett, and Chriftian Roths.

Court. At what time did you firft hear that the marthal had thefe two men in cuitody?

Witness. The fift time I heard of it was by the men over the bridge.

What becaine of thofe two men?
I cannot tell ; the marfhal tcha me they were difcharged, but I do not recollicit feeiag them.
Did you fee the pifoner among this pate?
No, not to my knowlelse, if I had ithoud not have knomn him, for I never heard of him before. Having met with thofe horle men before we came back to the bridge, we returned with then, and all made an hale in the yard. I fpoke all I could to difinack then from the purpofe about which they came, but all to no purpuif. I had no anfwer that I could muderfazid, tor they gererally fpoke in German or broken Englifh, which I could not underftand. I aiways underfood, generalls, that they wanted the prifoners, and that they wifhed to give in lecurity, and let them be tried in the county : that if they had done any thing that was wrong, it was right they fhould fuffer, but that it was not right to take them to Ihinadephia. I heard major Barnett fay this who interpreted what they faid in Cerman. After being a confidcrable time engaged with people as actively as I could, but it appeared to be but to litcle purpofe, I then werit up flairs with a vicw to take fomething ; as I was returning the flairs were fo crouded I curid not eafily get down. Coming down I faw a perfon whon I underfood to be captain: Fries, and the marthal flanding talking to him. I bclieve it was the prifoner at the bar. I heard them talk a few words: the marmal faid that they were not doing right, and they nuift fulter: but I camot recollect any thing particularly that was faid, bat I obierved that he often made a demand of the prifoners, but that he fhould not be hurt; that he would be anfwerable for himfelf and the company, that nose of his men fhould hurt him that day, but that he would wot be anfwerable for any others that lid not belong to his company. It think he repeated this twice. I was there but a few minutes. I made fime obfervations to the men advifing then to confider what they: were about, for I confidered it dangerous, aad very wrong to proceed in this way. At this time there was a nuile in the entry: I was afraid finething had happend, fo I weat down, but I do not recollect feeing Fries, the whole day aferwards. There was a great deal faid, but none of them folee to me in Englith.

> JICOB EYERLY, qualifed.

Atron:in. We with you to relate what you took notice of at Beth- . lehem.

Wiraess. As to what happened on the feventh of March, $I$ am not able to fay much. I was out with the marthal the day before, when he ferved the proceis. As we heard that the reicue was intended. It was agreed by the marflaal to fend exprefs to Eafton, in order to obtain the polfe to aid him in the execution of his duty : they acco:dingly arrived between 10 and 11 o'clock, to the number of $\mathrm{i}_{5}$ or 16. Mi. Dixon of Emaus tuld us that he had feen about 20 armed men at Reiter's tavern, and fome at another tavern, befides fome on the roaid, and that he underfood from them that they were coming to refcue the prifioiers. It was then agreed to take thefe prifoners, who had furrendered, up ftairs. There were a number of people now colleitcd now from the neighbourhood, and then it was agreed to fend the depytation to meet the armed men. About that time I went down flairs into the back room, and there I faw thofe two men whofe arms had been taken from them: I did not fee them come in.

I then went up flairs again, this was the laft time I went down fairs, till after the prifoners were releated. I then faw thofe three men come with Shankwyler. I did not hear what paffed, but faw Mr. Horfefield and judge Henry go to them. Sometime afteiwards, I faw an auned firce coming in, a great matiy oin histildet, and mary footmen with mukets on their thoulders: the livifemen had their fwords drawn. The greatelt part of thoie on thoreback cane fromi Bucks comaty. Afterward, the marthal came up fairs and faid that they were determized to biave the prifoners, and be believed that Mr. Bellicte and myifl would be in danger of our lives if we went out of the houle, and theia deired me to undertake to guard the fairs, and told me to gwe onders that if any bohy would come up with force, they fhould fhoot them. I placed hie guadd on the flairs, at firlt there was but two. Some of the pati: were at this time below talking to the people. After fome time the guara atod me that they got io volent, and threatened to come up ftairs with volence. and requetted of me that I $m$;ht double the guard, which I did. As I was in the room, I looked out of the window and five a company of ntie men, all with three colvured cockades, marching Indian file round the houte: I counted them, these were 42 in that company: anothe: perfos befide: myfelf was coursing them, but I do not recollect who it was, though I rather think it was Mi. Ballintt : they marcled twice wome the houfe. Another cime when I was walking abuut the room a perion who was along with me, I do whe recollect who, iche me that the were poonting their guns up to the wintuw, and that he was fire it was dangerons for me to thow my felf at the window.

Objecion was he te made by the council for the prifone, againf any hearfay evidence.

Attorner. Hed you not reafon to believe that your life was in danger?

Witness. There is not the leand doubr upori my mind, from what I heard, and from what I fay, and from the ma:thel's teftimuny, but if I had gone to any place where thes conid have done it, but they would fhoot me, becaufe the permile ia gemeral appeared to be in fuch a agee that there was no reaion in them.

Some farther objections was made l, the council as to his ideas of the flate of things, but the cuurt declared it bight to thew the general impreflions he ielt.

Attorney. Did you, or not, ablan from fhewing : ouffele at the window, or amongft the perple.
Witaess. Yes, ao much as pumble. There was m inme paticula that I faw, except at one time when I was in the :mom, I iasd a terribles huzza: this was in the attermon. On thio I went :o tie inshow tof fee what produced this moife, and I faw that captain Jaretio hat a ired: he thad juif difmounted his horle, and lind his piftols in his liani, a a a was walking up toward the fairs. I did not amain lates at are varo... but juft looked out, and faw him come in, and thortly after lee vir: the room where I was; he had not his piftels with hin then: i iaciri..
 Mr. Jarrett had furrendered himfelf and given bith, and that he chacheis he was a flong friend to government. I then fade to him, if vounca friend to government, as you profés to be, you cught to go down and is your people to defift : to which he made no reply at all. He walked about in the room for fome time, and then went down flairs. I did not fee any thing more till the prifoners were releafed. The only time I faw Mr. Fries, the prifoner, was a few minutes before the priloners were delivered up. I walked out of the room and faw Mr . Fries upon the had of the nairs, fpeaking with the marfhal: fhortly after, the prifoners were requefted to go down, but the minifter ftaying a little while up in the 100 m , there was a call made for him particularly, and therefore I went and requefied him io go down. Shortly after, the armed men went off. I looked out of the wisdow and faw Mr. Jarrett pariding his light horfe in rank bise the door. He then gave orders. to march, and they went ofto Attorney. Did you perceive any thing of the prifoner after this?

Wirares. No, that was the only time I faw hum during the day.
You were one of the commiffoners appointed to carry into execution twe acts of Congrets; one for affeffing houles, and the other for laying a direct tax?

Yes.
Was there not, before this time, a general oppofition to the execution of this law throughout the county of Northampton?

After I had received my commiffion, which was fometime in Auguft ${ }^{1793}$, I hadi received a letter from the fecretary of the treadury, requefling me to take fume pains to find out fuitable characters to lerve as affeffors. I did, in coniequence of that, write fome letters to fome of my friends, in the counties of Northampton, Luzerne and Wayne, which conftituted my divition : in Wayne and Luzerne, I found no difficulties whatever, but received a number of applications fufficient, and accompanied with recommendations. In Northampton county I was no: fo fuccefsful ; I had but two recommendations frem that county; it was therefore neceffary for me, from the beft information which 1 could obtain, to endeavour to find men of futable characters in each townhp; and likewife to get a number of blank commifions, in cale fome of thofe appointed fhould refufe to accept of the office. I receised information at Reading, at the time the board of commiffoners met, fiom the commifioner in Bucks, that he had received information from a fentlemen in Whiladelphia (Mr. Clapman) that he had travelled thruegh a great part of Northmmpton county, and that in every tavern whete he ftcped, this tax law was the general topic of converfation, and that great pains was taken to find cut who the perfons were that were friends of the goveinment fo much as to be afefiors, in urder to perfuade them not to accept of the appoititment. A though I in.'d iot beleve it was the cafe at that time, yet I found it was the cafe afterwards.

Cross examination. Do you know this traveller?
Witaess. No.
Agreable to my duty, I gave notice to the affefors to mest me at a remon place. I thould have firl laid that I appointed the afiellons agiceable to the beft information I could cullect, I took one man fremeach wnaihip, fuch as was thought qualuied for the butactis. I le fint them dueir comminoms, and with them notices to neet me at a t.me and place appointed in oder to receive from me their inftruct.ons.

Le then metnicned the names of the alleffors, and the townhips to which they were appointed.

I appointed a meeting of the affeffis of the third diftrict at Nazactik; on the $3^{d}$ Thurflay in November, two of them did not attend, and fome of the others who did attend begged to be excufed foom ferving. I ant:ed their reafon, and told them I could not very well excufe them, they told me that the people in their different townhips were very much oppofed to the law ; that they thought it was dangerous for them to accept of it. I found that they, as well as the people, had a wrong idea about the law; and I was fo happy that day as to prevail upon all tiofe that wifhed to be excufed accepting the appointinent, upon explaining the law in then, to accept it. The next day I met the affefors of the fecond difriet at Allentown, where all attended but one. I had the fame difficulty there as at the other place, and it was not without much difficulty that thofe who did appear, that they did accept of the appointment. I then left the blank commilfions with Mr. Balliot, and requefted him to appoint fove perfons in the rawn of Mr. Home, who had refufed The Monday fo!lowing met the allefers of the other diftriat at Chefluat Hill towinhip. Previous to that I had feen Mi. Kearre, who was the arieffor, appointed at Eafton; whea I me:ntioned to him that he was appuinted an aifeffor, he tond me that it would net fuit hin to accept of it. I requeited of him that he might name fome fuitable perfon, and qualified for it, and 1 would be willing to accept him. He mentioned Jacob Snyder, and to 1 me he would notice Mr. Sarder to meet me with the ref. When I cane there two of the affeffors did not appear, and one from Hamiton did not appear willing to accept of it, butafier a great deal of explaming and perfinding, it was prevailed upon. Juf as we were going, Syader cane, he told me that he had received his notice, and that he was not willing to accept it ; that the people were very much oppoted in the lais, and he did not very well undertand it himfilf, but he thought he would endeavour to get fome information, and that when he came there, the infomation he received was fuch, that he was deeremisel to go after me, and accept of the appointinent, if he were to mi:. $: 3 \mathrm{mle}$, in order to accept of it, for that he had been wrong invomaluout the law. I then went up to Wayne was perfualed with dilitwly $t$ accupe of the apointincut. As 1 was religuation; I wh an I crabd anderept of it, hut that I would fee perfect juhice duas. At re rey le. he weat with me to Eatom, where we him at home, wer i.e t Juilic Trail, in order to take his depofitom. He begued that I wend suat the facur in him th confider of it till the mext moman; I d d, and ne: mornin'; he came to me and beged me was gi, en to the pear! :y a fer gendenen, who had travehich though the county a few days fince. When we came to Hamilton townflip, there were about 60 or 70 perfons affembled, three or four of them in uiniorms, ibeir arms was behind the door at the houfe of Mr. Hellers. I then thl them that I was come as their friend, and without any defign of taking the leaft advantage of their conduct in oppofing the affeffors: that I had come to read the la iv to them, and explain it. I did fo, and pointed cut the impolitions pracile: on them. Mr. Henry affited me as much as be could, bit all to very little purpofe. The affeffor after this again berged ine, for Gud's fake, to accept of his refignation. As there was a number of thein that cemilained againtt the afleflors. I propofed to them that th ang I had no autionity to it, yet if I thourhe it would be a favour to srait the that indalsence to elect their own affeffor themifelves, I would grant him tixe appointment. They told me they wonld do no fach thing, for fad they " if we do this, we at once acknowledre that we will fubmit to the laws, and that is what we wont doa I then enquired for a fuitable man, and John Hufton was mentioned; who was likewite elected affeffor under the county rates. I called him into a room, and requefted him to accept the appointment, he told me it was impoimble at the prefent time, but he fhould, whenever things appeared more favourable, fo that he could go through, be willing to do it.

I hear that the bufinefs is now done.
Attorney. Pleale to relate who were the perfons that travelled through that county, and encouraged the oppofition.

Wirness. The laft week in Becember, or the firft of January I received a letter from Mr. Heckavelter, the affefor of upper Milford : by which, he informed me that he was fopped by a regular deputation from the townthip meeting, confifing of 3 men. I fint a lige to Mr. Heckavelicr, and wifhed him to give notice to Mr . Schymer, Mr. Moretz, and come of the leading men in the townhip, that I would meet them at fuch a time, and explain the bufnefs to them. When I came, in confequence, within 4 iniles of theplace, I was requefted by a friend, not to go; for that the people were fo violent, that if I did go I fookd certainly be billed: I replied to them that I would go, I was not afraid of any of them: I took Mr. Henry along with me; when we came there, I found about 60 or 70 perfons collected at the houfe of John Schymer. I fuppere about 20 of them had Freneh cockades in their hats, red, thac and white. Mr. Schymer then took me into his own room; there were about eight or ten in the room. Mr. Sclymer afked me if I had feen the petitions, he gave one of them to me, and requeited that I would read it, which I did in the prefence of another perfon; there were bat two in the company that undertood Einglith. While I was reading, thefe two men began to thake their heads, they faid it was not fuch a petition as they had been toll. I then alked them whether the general oppontion was not on account of the famp tax, and the houfe tax; they faid yes. I then told them the ere was not 2 word in this pet tion againft the ftump act; they .eemed to be altrgether fatisfied, aid faid that they had been made to believe it was. I then weat into the next room, where the people collected: fome of them appeared to be extremely violent and very abufive. I told them I had not come there to be abuled by any body; that I had come there as a friend, to inform them of the law which it was important fhould be underftood. There was a report among them that it- was no law; I read the law to them, and explained it in the German language, and told them it was their duty to fubmit to it. One of them of the name of Genige Shaefies ${ }^{5}$ jamped up betore me, and faid, Mr. Eyerly, it is no law ; I told them that if they did not believe me, they might enquire of Squire Schymer whether it was or not. Mr. Schymer told them it was a law; upon which Shaeffor replied, "admitting it is a law, we will not fubmit to it". He then farther faid, here I am, take me to gad, but you thail fee how far you will hring me. Upon which a great many of them jumped up and faid, yee, Hy Grd, if they thall onts attempt to take any one to jail, we would foon: have him out again. Sone of them made ute of very abulive langrage argaintt the affeffor, codling him a tory rafeal and the like; and as the affeffor had requefted me to accept of his refignation becaufe it was not in his power to go through with it, I propofed to them, that if they had any objections againft the affeffor, that they fhould elect one, and I would give Jim his appointrineut: to which fome of the mof fenfible and mof moderate replied, no, if it munt be done Mr. Heckavelter fhall do it, and fome of the others faill, we will do no fuch thing, if we do, we at once acknowledge that we fubmit to the law, and that is what we will not. I then went over to the tavern chile by, with Mr. Schymer, when Mir. Heckavelter came to me, and told me that he was in danger; that there was three of the Shapffers were gring to give him a licking: I requefted him: to fland by me, and I would fee him fafe.' We then went off.
Gross examination. Did they come up to beat hin?
Witness. Yes they did, all three of them. Mr. Heckavelter told them he would not have any thing to do with then, and they charged lium fomething refipecting a liberty pole at Millars town.

Did they theaten to beat him on account of his going on with the laws as affefior?

No.
Attorney. But it was no priwate quarrel was it?
Wirness. No, Mr. Heckavelter tedd me it was not.
When was tlie liberty pnele erecied?
Two weeks iefore that, but after the diffentions arole, Wrere thrfe pr.les erected any where, but where this oppofition prevailed?
With a fe"v exceptin:is: there was one place where the law was filly executed, and fume obbers that fullowed the examile, where the law was exectued.

Was the lan excented at Millars town?
It was int exceuted there, nur at upper Mifford till about two or tiree week ago at fartheth. I thea agreed to go to Millars town, where one of the Shaeffer's lived. Mentioning this to ain affeffor, (John Roming) he requefted I woild not do it ; he told me that the pegple were fo violent that he would nint oro unon his deties if any body would give him 6.500 to din it, if he did, he mant run the rifk of loling his hife. I then delifted.

Arronxis. The lase were not excuted till after the army came up, and net belpere were they?

The wituets wa:s quing on to fay what he had been tuld, but hearfay evider:ce was inadmifinte.
-I then went to Mr. Trexlers where I faw Mr. Robft, who gave me infor:mation of Heidelberg, Wieffenberg, Lymn, and Low Hill: he told nie that at a meeting at one of thofe places the people had drawn up a certain'y doing wrons, and that they woild bring them?elves into trouble if they went on that way: upon which they (the people themfeives) deltroyed the paper. He faid the fame of Heidelberg. He likewife intormed ne chat in the townfhip where he lives it was impoffible to execute the laws.

At what time were the laws executed in thole four towninhips?
Since the troops have been there. He went fo far as to fay that all in the townthip oppuled the execution of the law, except three or four.
Hearlay evidence ftopped again by the rouncil, becaufe the conititution provides that the accuted liall be confromted with his acculers.

Mr. Rawle contended, that, as he wihed to thew the court and jury the general flate of that country, the hearfay evidence of Mr. Eyerly ia Jis official capacity as commilioner, to whom reports of the affeffremts were made, was admififible.

So far as explained the general temper was allowed.
Werness. - In Penn townthip the affeflor did not meet us, he refufed to accept the appointment, well aiware of the dhiculties that would occur, and a general rule was admited to meet th.fe difficulties. l rece, wed information from Mr. Balliott that he had found a man is that towndhip who was willing to execute the office. At my requet, he ient him a ecmmillion, but the man was obliged, befure he took the oath, to returie it asain, declaring it was impofible to do it. This was fometime in Jamua: y . Sometime afterwards he wrote to me of another man who would accept. I requetted him to fign his camminhon. I received intormatiou while the marluad, Mr. Balliott and myletf were about the county, that as foon as the pecole in the townhip knew that he had received his consmidion they raifed a mot.

When was Pemn towntlip affefed?
About tea days ago.
Cours. Had you met reafon to believe that, otwing to the oppobition in that townfhip the law could not be executed?

Witness. It could not.
Was there finllar oppofition in any other townhip?
In Moore towndhip there was dome oppofition, but when the atefor was opposed be called a town meeting. That townhip hats been afficied aboyt two months.
Mr. Lew is infited that if fuch evidence were allowed, it would be neceffary to produce the commifions of thefe oficers, and he could fee no seafoi why themietves could not have been prefent as evidences on the profecution, inftead of that teftimony coming through Mr. Eyenty.

Mr. Ranle contended that if it was neceiiary to prove commiffiong, there would be no cud to the enquiry.

Atronser. Ivere you prefent at any other meetings?
Wreness. No.-Oin the firlt or iecold of March taft, when the marShal came to Nazareth, and teld me that lo bad procits' again!t a number of perfons in Northamptan county, he requifind me to go with him: 1 went with him, firit to Lehi townhe, were the marthal lerved procefs?
 Lhen came to Betilelam, and alen to Enaus: the fift home the marimat had to lerve in was a fubpana upon George Syder, wheic, alter being; abuled by the houle, we were fworn at and abuied by hink : he lad as large club in tis ha: had.

Court. Did he abure you before you fpoke to him ?
Witness. Yes.-He called us ralculs, highway robbers and the like: the marfhal told him he ouly had a fubpena to appear at Philidelptia to give teitimony; to which he anfwcied, io German, he would be danned it he would go. The marthal findug he cuuld do nothing with him, requeited Daniel Schwarte fen. to read aid explaian it to him, and we leit it with him to ferve. We then went to Millars town to ferve a warrant on George Schaeiftr, but we were tuld he was gone to Phihadilphia : we went to Sewadis tavern. The marfhal and myielf then went to Shankwyler's where there was at leaff $j$ affembled in the rem. Kot knowing Staikwyler, Mr. Baiiistt pointed him out, and the marthal took hirn: while the mathal was talking with Shankwyer, the croud inclufed urem us, and abuled us very mach, and in a very menacing maner, accompaneed with an almof univerfal cry of frike, ftrike, ftrike, fo that for fome time we did not know what would be the confeguence. The marlial this tine was perfuading Shankwyler to fubmit, telling him the conicguence of oppolition : he at firft declared he would not, butat lenoth le laid he would do as Jarret did. Some of the people then faid, tliat if Shankwyier was to be taken out of his houfe, they would fing has long as they had of drop of blood in their hodies. The marthal the: curned round to the cooud, when they were fo vilent, and told then that Mr. Palliott and myfelf were under his protection. I forgo to mention that while the marhal was talking to Shankwyler in the bar, nae of the perfous prefout tore the cockade from Mr. Ballioti's hat, while he was turning rouad to fipak th the marinal : Mr. Balliott cild not for the pretent know bat it was a blow fone one had given hirio. They thein made back a litule. Handg found it imponithle to do any tharg farther, Shankwler pooniled to meet the marthal at Bethenem. We then went out of the room, but hefore we cane out of the loure there was a iemble haza in the locm. $I$ then fent for a contabie at the requef of the marflal, to go with him and flow him the perions and phaces of tiofe againt whom he had procels. I remained white he ferved the procelo' at Mr. Irexler's, and it was there we firt reccived infomaisn that an attenpt wruld be made the next day to refcue the pritioners. We arrived at Betlilehem that evening the Gth of March, and then the occurrences happened of which I have given teilimony as far as I know.

Some converintion hare occurred refpeating the tellimony of Mr. Fyerly where he faid he had apponted affefiors : Mi. Eyerly corrected himfilf, that he mea:t he kad recommended them to the buard. But Mr. Le:*is laid he thou'd expect the records to be produced to the courr, that the manaer and legality of the arpointments might be feen.

> SAMEDL TOON, fwom.

Teflimony tranllated by Mr. Erdman.
Atporney. Where do you live when at homa?
Witeess. At uper inhiord in Northampton county.
Do you belong to any cumpany of light horie ?
Yes, to captan Jarrett's.
What is your fiation?
A trumpeter.
Were you requefted by any body to go with a party to Bethlehem; by whum, and at what time ?

On the 7 th of March, about 8 o'clock I went to the houre of Daniel Sch:ante.

Dil you go, or were you fent to Schwartz?
I we it of my own accoid, becaule I heard that the light horfs were to meet there, when I came, there was one of the light horfe there, named Samuel, the fon of Daniel Schwartz. I afted him who ordered the company torether, and what they were about to do? he faid that Jokn Fogle the lieutenart had directed them to meet at Guif's tavern, about 3 miles from Betilelem, on this fide : he then afled me if I would go along. I anfwered, no. Daviel Schwartz had annther fon named Daniel, who wanted to gro alone, but the old man would nut allow it, becaule he had no regimentals or miform.

Attorney. What is meant by uniform?
Witness. The cap and coat.-Old Schwartz then teld his fon that he thould go to a neighbour, and thould borrow his coat and my cap. I would not lend my cap, becaule I told him I might want it myfelf, if I could get an horie, as I told him I had it in my heart to go.

Do you know what they were going for, or was it mentioned at all ?
I did not know that morning what they were going for.-If that is all your excufe for not going, old Schwartz frid he would lend me his horfe, and give ne a dollar in the bargain. His fon, young Daniel he would not allow to go along, but he begging very hard, he would allow him to go as huiller, to take care of the horfes. They went, fome of them as far as Guife's tavern, fome of them were in regimentals, and fone not. I aid 'schwartz's two fons went, and when we came to Guife's there was. no officers.

How many went from Sciwartz's houfe?
Six: Fenry Staeler, myfulf, Adann Stahmaker, and Schwartz's three fons.-When ree cane within half a mile of Guife's, we overtook a company of ritiemen of about 30 ftrong. They had no officer with them. btailuaker was one of the lieutenants, but did not meddle with the company, nor was he in regimentals, nor in arms. They waited about two hours for Fogle, the firt hieutenant, but he did not come. Captain Jard rett was down at Fhilidelptia. When I found there was no one to take the commasd, 1 determined to go un fartlier: then there began a quarrel among then, fome of them were wiling to go, and fome of them were not. Stallinkicr and metelf then propofed to go to Bethlehem, and we vorild briting them advice what was doing there, if they would wait an hour, and then they would know what was beft to do. I then took off iny segimentals, and put others on, belonging to my brother-in-lav, the tavern-keeper. Sone were willing to do this, fome were not. They then went after me, and told me that I mut put on my rerimentals; and take my trumpet. I refuled this, and told them, I would not go a flep farther unlefs there was iome officer who would take the command and anfwer for it. They then agreed to it, and chofe Andrew Schiffert. He then fad he would accept of it, if they would follow him, obey his orders, or bis advice. They then went on to Bethlehem.

Did the number increate?
The rifle paffed by, but the number of horfemen did not increafe.
How many horfemen were there?
There were only about eight or nine at Guife's, but there were a great number of our people on horfeback, here and there one of them with a gun. When we were about half a mile on this fide the bridge, we wera met by four porfons from Bethlehem.

Had you fettled what you were going for ?
I had no intercourfe with any one of them on the fubject, becaufe I was always a good way before the troop.

Did you not hear at the tavern?
No, I did not hear any particular reafon for going to Bethlehem.
Why did you go with them?
Becaufe I was afraid of getting into trouble, and yet I was afraid if I went there.
Why afraid?
Becaufe I fuppofed they would take the prifoners.
Why did you fuppofe in?
Becaule I heard here and there one orseivo fay that they would not fuffer the prifoners to go to Philadelphia with the marllalo.

Did you blow the trumpet as you rode a head?
Yes.
Whar pafed when you met with thefe four ge:itlemen?
Thefe four men peiluded is to go back again, and there was here and there one that was williur to go back, ammers whom was Schiffart the captan: as :hey would not fulluw him, he la:d down his commiftion again. They then went all lia confulion, till we came to the bridre: all mixed oue with nonther.

What did thofe people do who refufed to go back?
There camso one to tirm and told them that the two rifle men wese prifoners, wh.h inritated them very much, and they faid they would go and get thim; they would have thein.

Was this betor: or atter the gentemen arrived from Bethlehem?
It was a:ter they arrived, that they heard thofe two men were imprifoned?

What was the converfation between thofe deputies and the people?
I do not recollect nueth of their difcourte, but I heard a good deal of altercation beiveen them: they were determined that the priioners flould not go to Philadelphis, and that they would go to Bethehem.

Court. What prifoners did they fay?
Witness. I do not know: they oily faid the prifoners. However thefe deputies brought them fo far that they agreed not to go to Bethlehem.
Attornex. Upon what terms?
The gentlemen told them they would bring themfelves into great tronble, for an army would be marched argainft them. There was no conditions or terms inade befides this. They then proceeded and chofe fome people to go with them to the marfhal, to fee whether he would give up thefe two men, and then they would return to their homes. They then requeffed me to go over as one of the deputies with two others: one of them was Yiefly, a ritie man. I agreed to go, provided they would remain there till we returned. We then went, but without any arms, but we were fcarce over the bridge before a great part of tie light horle followed us, and arrived at the tavern before we could come there.
Attorney. What light horfe was that?

I did not obfervè them all, for they rode very faft, but it was the comd pany I belonged to.

Had any of the Bucks county people come up at that time?
Not any that I know of.-When I came to the tavern I did not want to go in, bur. Mr. Mohollan and the others took us into the marthal ; but the greateft part of our company had come in, and therefore I could not tell what to fay for then in their behalf. When I came to the marfhal, he atked what was their defign: I anfwered that I did not know; but Yicily demanded of him the two riffemen who were made priioners, but I canat fyy for certain whether he demanded any more prifoners of him. The marfhal then read the orders which he had fion judge Peters: we then went out of doors.

Did not the niarflal deliver up thefe two men.
Not at that time.
Did you all go back to join your companies?
I cannot fay whether the two others did or not. I remained where I was.-About half an hour after the rifle company arrived; marched round tise houle, and formed in rank before the houfe.
Cross examination. Was this before the two prifoners were given up.
I am not fure whether it was or not, becaufe I do not know the time they were given up, for F went up in the room with Mr. Bulliott and Mr. Eyenly.

Did any horfemen come with the riffemen?
There came now and then fome horfeman, fome armed, and fome unarmed, and they harried into the yard.-When I faw them flanding in a rank I went down ftairs, and afked captain Staeler how he came over when he promiled not to cane over. His anfwer was, that the Bucks county people had come, and they all come over together. They firt fraid belind the houfe: the houfe was all in confufion.

Attorney. What did they akf for, or demand?
Witsess. I heard fome of them fay that they wanted the prifoners out, and that they would force themfelves into the houfe. I came out of the houfe feveral timcs to pacify them, and fo did Shankwyler come out twice to feeak to them.

Atrorney. Did you fee the prifoner at the bar?
Wreness. Yes, I faw lim once feraking with the marflal about half way up the ftair caife.

Did you fee him come down and fpeak to the people who were in the ya:d?

As they wanted to go in by force, he told them they fhould wait a little, for that he would fpeak to the people infide a little more firf. :

Did you hear what he faid to them afterwards?
No, he then went away, and they forced themfelves in at the door. I with fome others tried so keep them back all we could.

Did you fucceed in keeping them out of the houle at that time?
I fucceeded in keeping them off, but one of them was very anxious to gret in, and told the people that they fhould pull ofi their gluves, i:a order to feel the trigger, and sock :he better.
Who was this?
It was Jacob Ingleman.--Staeler then formed his company in a rank. Oin Henry Heover, who was Manding in the entry afier they had furned, feemed to think the time too long, and faid if they would only fend eightmen to him, he would foon have the prifoners. The people then got ins; one after another, and the entry became almol full. 1 believe at that time the prifoner at the bar came and told them not to be afraid, but that they might now march on.

Court. At the time Fries faid that, were the men in or not?
'Fhey were in the entry, and a great many people were there: I was in the back of the houfe, they then marched towards the flairs where the guards had left. The marflal was thein quite alone, and ke told them he would deliver up the pifoners. The priloners then, tame down fairs I helieve, for I did not know them : I had not the leafl perfonal acquaintance with one of them.

Was Fries any way diftinguifled by his deefs, or fivord, or cockade?
I never was acquainted with Fries before: he had on then a great coat, a cocked hat, and a black feather: 1 did nct ice him with a fword.
Cross examination. Did you hear what pufficd between Fries and the marhal on the llairs?

No, I was flanding bel wa ; I only faw him there.
Did Fries fpeak Englifh or Dutch?
Sometimes he fioke Englifh, fometimes German.
Friday, Miay 3.
ANDREW SHIFFERTT, fworn.
Teftimony tranflated.
Was you mie of the armed party that went to Bethichem on the feventh of March?

Yes.
To what company did you belons?
To Jarrete's company.
Inform the court and jury how you came to go, what your motive, and what the cbject of the expedition.

I was informed by John Hoover that all the light horfe were to meet at Martin Ritter's at ien in the morning: I was not at home when he came, but I was informed of it. I the:a went over to Riter's the next morning, (on the feventh of March) and when I came there, I aked what was to be done. Their anfwer was, that they were going to Bethlehem to releaic the prifoners.

Colrt. What prifoners?
Witness. The prifoners from the marhal.
To what townhip do you belong?
To Salifbury. I told them that if they were to do this, they would find what would be the confequences. The others faid that if they got thepprifoners clear thai day, there would be nothing done, it would be all *oy

If who went with arms?
If the foldiers cent with arms.
1):d not you erquire who had appointed them to meet?

No.
Did you not ank when you were at Riters?
No. At Kitter's I wanted to go home, but they would not let me, telling me that Fogle would be at Guife's tavern, whereupon I agreed to go fo far with them. Coming there, Fogle was not there, and.I and Sa-Yiuel Toon wanted to go home, for there was no officers there. They then agreed to choofe an officer, when the cloice fell upon me; I told them I would not go with them without they would obey my orders; and not fay any more about taking the prifoners from the marfhal. They profeflied to do fo, whereupon we proceeded to within half a mile of the bridge, and there we were met by four genilemen from Bethehem, and as they repeated again that they would have the prifoners, I faid I would have no mure to do with them. They then went into Bethlehem, buit I did not go with them, but in about two hours I went in to fee what they were about : I flaid this fide of the bridge 'riil then. When I got to Bethlehem I was informed that they had got the priloners out. I remained there about half an hour and then rode home, to that 1 know not what happened.

Did you hear that the marflal had taken two men prifoners, at what time and where?

I heard that two men were difarmed: I heard it on this Gde the bridge.
Did you hear it while the rifle company, and the others were there to gether?

It was a perfon who cathe from Bethehem that told of it, but I camot tell who.

Was it before the deputation arrived ?
I cannot tell, but I did not hear it before.
Had the Bucks county people come up before you left that place where you ftaid on this fide of the bridge?

Yes, I haw them ride up at about two o'clock.
Court: Was Jarrett's and Staeler's companies gone over the bridge when the Bucks county people went over?
The light horfe were, but I am not fure of Staeler's.
Did you enter into converfation with the Bucks county people?
Nu, not any.
The evidence here was slofed fo far as related to the affair at Bethlehem: Mr. attorney then introduced the following, preceding and fucceeding events to thow the fate of the country, and the prifoner's intention. JOHN DILLINGHKR, fworm Tefimouy tranflated.
Attorney. Where is your home?
Wirness. In upper Milford, Northampton county, about fix miles from Millars town.

Do you know of any rumour or report in your neighbourhood that the marthal was coming up to arreft fome perfons, before he came?
It was talked of, as fufpected that fome perfons would be arrefted.
Court. On what account?
I can give no account of that. The report was that they wouldeme arrefted to be taken to Philadelphia.

Was it reported, or any propofition made among the people that if any body fhould be brought to Philadelphia, that it thould not be fufered?
It was faid, that if any perfon was to be arrefled innocently, it would be very hard for fuch a man; and he ought not to be fuffered to fuffer. And further it was faid that fomebody bad fivorn againft Shankwyler that he had two piftols and a fword on his table; and that he had fworn that if the affeffors fhould come, he would fhoot them. I and my'neighboury faid that Shankwyler never owned a pair of piftols, nor did they believe any were ever there except a traveller browght them thene. [He kept $\dot{\alpha}$ tavern] I then heard that the marthal had arrefted fome perfons at Mils lars town. The following day (6th of March) captain Staeler came to my houfe, and I afked him whether he had been in Millars town. He anfwered yes. I afked him whether it was true that Shankwyler had been arrefted by the theriff. (Becaufe at that time the term marshal was not known to them.) Staeler anfiwered, yes, and that he was to be the following day at Bethlehem, and akked me whether I would go to Bethlehem likewife, and told me that more people were going up to fee, I faid I fhould alfo like to go and lee, provided the people would fave themfelves from getting into trouble. I then dreffed mylelf to go away: Staeler alked me if I would not take my rifle with me.

Court. Were you one of captain Staeler's rifle company?
Witness, No.
What company did you belong to?
To no one particularly ; only the militia.-II then anfwered no, for what? He then informed me that there were a number of people to meet at Ritter's tavern, whence he heard they were to proceed to Bethlehen, and they would go there pretty early, to exercife a little, and that 1 fhould go in the ranks to make a flow, becaufe his company was not compleat. Court. Was it mufter day?
No, but they had frequent meetings in order to exercife themfelves I then agreed that I would take my rifle to far as that. As I was dreffing when he came, he afked me what I was drefling for: I told him that I was going to my mother in law, to fetch her fome flax to fpin; fle lives in Bucks county, about a mile on this fide of Conrad Marks's houfe. Whereupon, he (Staeler) defired me to tell young Marks that the light horfe were going to Bethlehem, and that he fhould go likewife if he pleafed. Before I came to Marks's, I faw a light horfeman croffing the road into another road: when I came to Marks's I faw only his wife and children and a flrange man the e: I afked Marks's wife what light horle man that was; fhe anfwered it was her fon ; I afked where he was going: fhe faid he was going over yonder whene they were affeffing houfes, to go againtt the alfelfors. I then left the meffage Staeler directed me.

Did you go farther into Buchs than where your mother-in-law lives ?
No. I entered into no other houfe than Marks's and my mother's.
What time of the day were you at Marks's?
About one oclack:
Did you not mention to John Schymer, Efq. that the people would not fand by him, and that he would not be fupported, when it was reported that a warrant wasill ued againt him, but that if he remained firm, he would?

I do not reccollect any ucathing.
WILLIAM THOMAS, fworn.
Attorviey. Do you live in Bucks county?
Witress. les.
Did you go to Bethlehem on the feventh of March ?
Ies.-On the fifth of March we heard that the affeffors were going round to affels the houfes in Bucks county : they had affeffed a fevr of the houles about already : my brother was at Jacob Hoover's, and I was there when he told me to tell two of our neighbours to let the affeflors gio round.

Were you not on the 6th of March defired to join the party going to Bethlebem?

On the 6th in the morning 1 was at Jacob Hoover's and he told me to go to Adam Broutler and Petu" Coome to tell them to come to his houfe.' On the road I met captain Kouder: he told me 1 mult come along back agaul down to the mill, for his company was coming together there that day: when we came there, feveral were met, and they were beating the dium: pait of them were armed. There were about 15 there in the whole. We then we.t. to Jaccb Fries's tavern ; then the people faid they went to tee the affiffius, but 1 dinnt know what for.
Court. Where there any mure at Fries's than thofe who came from the mill ?

Wityess. Yes there were a great many more, 1 think about thirty: J.hal Fries and Kouder then fent fome (two) horfemen named John Getrman and Conrad Marks, the furner had a gun, to fee if they could find the afieffors.

Attonver. What were they to do?
Tirness. Why, their diretions was, that if they could fund then they flould bring them to Maker town, or to Jaceb Fries's tavern. After the horfemea were gone, then the order was for the company to go to Guaker town.
Were the party pretty geneally armed?
A great many were niot, and many who were not had clubs. I cannot tell how many were armed, but the greatefi part had either arms or clubse

Was there a drum and fife ?
There was when we were at Quaker town.-We all ftood in a rank, and fired off, and hallowed huzza. Oie party went to Enoch Roberts's tavern, and the other to David Zeller's, and foon after we were thete, tite alteflors came along. They were efquire Foulke, Jobn Rodrick, and Cephas Childs. I was at Zelter's when they came along, and they all be'san to run out of the taveri. When I came out they had Foulke by lis horfe's bidith, and him by one leg, and they told him to get off. It was capain Kouder that had hold of him ; then John Fries came up and tuld him to get off. Jacub Houver came up, I thinkbefore Fries, and tol Kouder to go away and not ahute the man, and he trok hold of the bridle and fooke to him. Fies told Foutke to get off, he wanted to fpeak to him. Then Ge.rge Mumbower came up, and food at the back of the uthers, giving onc of them a knock with the butt of his guni, and told $t$ em to pull him of ; Jacob and John Hzover told them they flould not abute the man, for he would get ori without. With that the efquire rode up with them to the fhed, and got off. They then went into the tavern together. Then Join Fries tuld him that he had forewarned them yef:terday not to affets the houles, and yet they had come to day again; hee then told him that he fhould fhow his writings, what ho lad done in the towntlip. Which he did, and Juln Fries read them, and gave them to lim back again. I then went into atiother ronm, aid when I came out aigain, Childs, the other affeffor, was itting on the talle, with five or fix abseut him. When I came up to him, I told him that they fhould not ${ }^{3}$ abu:fe him, for I ufed to krov him: at this time they were abuing him?

Attorney. How were thej abufing him?
By fpeaking to him; I do not recullest what they faid, but they thi him the thould no: lave gone about when they had forwarned him thes diy before, and they made him promife that he would not come acrain till ferther orders-n'till they knew how the law was. Taey told him they th. ught they had as fit men in their townhip as what he was, and they withed to choole a mi:a 1 the fame townhip if they mult have it done. As to Rodrick, I dil not fee him.

Artones. Dill you hear any crj of "fie" after Rudick?
Witness. No.
Did you fee any gun finapped afier him?
N..

Did you fee any thing relating to a travelling man named captaia Sea born?

Yes, he was ticere, he was drumb, and fome of them afked him whether he was for liburty $0:$ g.vernment, he faid grovernment: Yeter Gobsle faid if he faid that again he flould be whipped. They were all pretty well drunk, but I was nor drunk.

Was Fries drunk ?
I do not recollect ever feeing him drunk : Kouder was, and fo might Fries for what I k:ow, but I had known him fome time, and knew he was a fober man.
Did you hear any talk about tories there?
Yes, they taked of toties and fumplers: Foulke was one they called a tory, and fo we:s feveral cilhers.-A young fellow then went in to frike Seabori, but I told him he fhould not frike a man that was drunk : I knew hinn when he lived at the river. He frruck him once or twice, but I told him if he flruck him again, I would frike him. Then we went down to Jacob Fries's, and there captain Kouder told me that I hould be at Narks' the next day, to go along with them to Nillar's town. It was now dark, and I had not feen John Fries come then. He todd the fame to the ret of the company. I then went hame and went to bed. Afier I was home about a quarter of an hour, John Gettman and Jobm Fsics's fin came to our houle, but I was in bed. Gettman had a gun at my houtic, (he was a gunfinith.)

What age was young Fries?
About fiftecn or fixteen.-I went next morning to Marks' tavern in confequence of a meflage they had left for me that might before with my inotier. By' ten o'clock we weie all there.

Was john Fries there?
Yes.
He named 13 more who were there.
Young Marks weat of fom after fun rife to Millar's town to tell thems we were coming, John Fries's fon went with us, but his father's horio got lame, and he was obliged to go back with it.

Were all thefe people amed ?
Yes, all but Marks and old Kline. The prifoner had his fword with him. Cuver. Ifad any one the command of the men?
Tirmass. Yes. John Fries badtie command but he did not conmand till he goi 1 , Detallehen, le gave so orders on the road.

Attorney. What was the fubftance of the converfation before you went from the tavern?

Why, that they were going to Millar's town : I did not know that they were going to Bethlehem.

Did you hear any converfation about the intention of the march ?
Yes. That we were going to Millai's town, for fhould there be prifoners there, Marks faid that he wanted us to fhow ourfelves.

What were you to fhow yourlelves for ?
I do not know what for.
Were you to affift to bring the prifoneis down to Philadelphia ?
I do not know.
What was the intention of the Northampten people?
Why, they had a mind to take the prifoners again: I underftood that the night before at Fries's and aloug the road before we got there. About three or four miles from old Marks', we met young Marks; he faid it was not worth while to go to Millar's town, that the prifoners were up at Bethlehem, and that they had all gone therc.

Who had gone there ?
The Northampton pe piple-the light horfe. Some was then for going back again: fome, as they bad come fo far, was for guing up to Bethlehe:n, to lee what was going on there, fo we went on.

Who told you to go on?
Oid Marks and John Fries faid that as they were come fo far on the road, they would go up and fee what was doing there. Then we went on about a mile, and flopped at Ritters where they fed their horfes: there was a liberty pole there. Then we went on to Bethlehem. When we came to the bridge, there the people had flepped, there was fome riflemen and fome light horfe. Some akked the realion why they fopped there: they faid they could not get over, the bridge was ibut: then John Fries rode ul, and aked whether they required toll or not ; they faid, yes. Then he: wold them to count his men, and told us to follow him.

Did he fpeak generally?
Yes.-The words be ured was, now bors, follow me. I do not know whether he counted all or only his own men.
Did you hear any thing at that tine of thofe men whom you found there having fent three men to Bethlehem?
I leard of their having taken two or three men under guard.
Who paid the toll ?
I do not know, we did not, we were all mixed together.
Did you not hear of three men being fent forward ?
No, I did not.-I heard of their having taken fome prifoners.
Had you heard before you come to the bridge of thcle two prifoners? No.
Did the whole party follow Fries over the bridge, or only the Bucks county peopic?
I belicre only the Bucks county people, without it was fome ferr.
What became of Staeler's Rifiemen?
Why they came pretty foon after over the bridge.
You were all on horfeback?
Yes.

Bid not the others come over the bridge at the fame time it was open: ed for you?

I did not look back; all that I can fay, when we got up to the tavern, they were pretty clofe after us.

What diftance is it from Marks' to Bethlehem ?
About twenty miles.
When we got over the bridge, there were two men met us, and faid we fhould not hurt them : Fries told them that he fhould hurt nobody without they hurt him firf. Then Judge Mohollan came and fooke with him atterwards, but I do not know what either he, or Fries faid. When we got up to the tavern at Bethlehem, the whole of Staeler's riflecompany were there. They marched round the houfe twice; we did not fland in ranks, we were feparate. They wanted one to go up and talk with the marhal, and they from Buicks and Northampton faid Juhn Fries was more fit to go up than e'er a man that was there. Then John Fries and one Hoover went up flairs. $\Lambda$ fer a while Hoover came down, Fries ftaid up when he came down, lie kept daihing and fwearing, and faid force fhould do : give him nine or ten of the bef riflemen in the company, and he would form the houfe; a great many of them told him he ihould not do it, he faid he would, Jacob Hoover, George Mitchel and Mr. Mohollan endeavoured to keep him off.

Did this Hoover belong to Staeler's company?
I think he did.-Then Fries, when he came down fairs, he fetched fome writing down with him, that he got from the marfhal, which heread to the company. He faid the marhal dared not give up the prifoners, and therefore that they would take them by force of arms. At this time the Bucks county people were feparate from the others.

Court. Who did Fries fpeak to?
Witness. He fooke to the whole of them.-Then he afked, what fhall we do now-take them by force of arms or how? Several of them fi.d, fince they come fo far now they would have them. Frederick Henry fatd fince they were come fo far, it was a damned thame not to have them. Then Fries went up fairs again, and faid he would go and talk to them once more. Whe: he came down again, he fail that the marlhal dared not give them up, without they took them by force of arms. Theythen tok hom that he fhould go and do fomething pretty foon, for it wa; getting late. Some of them fad it was better to let Fries have the whole' command of all the men. Then it was concluded to go into the houfe, and he fooke five or fis: times.

Was it agred that Fries thould have the whole under his command?
I'do not know. I only heard what that one man laid, and he thought him the fitteit perfon.

Did Fries hear this? where was he?
He was in the yad before the door, and near enough to hear it.
You did not hear him object to taking the command?
I do not know whecher he heard what that man fatd. -Then Fries, when it was concluded to go into the houle faid, For God's fake don't' fire buys, ill I am fieel upon frft : he faid this three or four times over, Then we moved on to go in, he was before us.

Cocrat. Hzw many followed him?

I do not know, but a good many at laff. I could not fee who they twere, the houfe was fo full. Then Fries went up and talked to the marihal about lialf way up ftairs. Henry told me that Fries was telling the marflal that if he did not give up the prifoners, they would fire on then, fo that they fhculd not fee each other for froker After that, the door was opened, and I faw fome of them come down.-Some came down while Fries was talking to the marfhal.

Then they were not all down ?
There was fome not down; they called for them, and they came down. -Fries faid he was glad Hoover did not go in along with him, becaufe he was too much of a fool; he thought this would not have done fo well as it did : he did not want him there.

Did you retire from Bethlehen altogether when you had got the priloners?

Yes.
Did Jarret's tronp go with you?
I faw fome light horfe before us.
Did you fee Fries go to the minifter after he was releafed ?
Yes, he went to him in another room : he pulted off his hat to the minifter, and told him he muft thank him that he had got out, he faid he was out, but be could tbank bim for all.

The marfhal was again called to reconcile fome feeming difference in the relation of the laft converfation Fries heid with the marflal, and of the prileners coming down at twice.

The marfhal faid that the laft converfation he held with the prifoners was at the foot of the ftairs.-Mr. Fries declared that he would force his way up ftairs, if I would not give them up; I told him that this would: be puifhed with the utmof feverity, bue that if he was determined to refcue the prifoners, he fhould not go up fairs, but that I would go up, and order them down. Finding myfelf not in a fituation to refift his force, I went up and ordered them down.

Cross examination. Had any prifoners left the room before you went up flairs?

No.
Attorney. Had you any converfation with bim afierwards?
Yes, he returned and faid that we lad not given up Ireman, that I muft deliver him up with the reft: I told him they were all gone: he then went out and returning again faid he was there; and went off. At that time all the prifoners went out.

Cross examination. Have you any recollection of what Thomas fwears ,that Henry told him, refipecting firing fo that you fhould not fee each other for fimoke?

No. I cannot be particular in that ; I cannot recollect it fo as to give evidence upon it. There were many very ferious threats, elfe I fhould not have given up the prifoners.

Cross examination. At any time when you were in converfation with Fries, did any of the prifoners come down flairs?
No, not the Lehi prifoners : there might be others that would not fubmit, but none from the room in actual cuftcdy, not to my knowlege : if they did, it mufl have been while I was fpeaking to thim in the croud, it was poffible for them to do it at that time.

Were they not guarded?
They were in the room, and that guard remained there till I went up ; it was placed there to prevent any perfon going up or down.

Cross examination. After this converfation with Fries, you went up flairs to order the prifoners down. Were they all there in the room at that time?
I believe fo, but I did not count them.
Well, upon your order did they come aown; and did you come down with them.

Yes, I came down with them.
Attorney. When the prifoners came down ftairs and you with them; do you recolleit having a fhort converfation with Fries at the fide of the thairs?

Yes, but there was but a very flort one.
Cross examination. Did you lead, or follow the prifoners in coming down fairs?

I am not certain, but I believe I followed them: GEORGE MITCHEL fworn.
Attorner. Where do you live?
I keep tavern in lower Milfond townfhif, Bucks county.
Inform the court whether there was any oppolition to the houfe ta: law in your townhip.

There was great difturbance and difenntents refpecting this houfe law; it happened that chere was a meeting advertifed for the 8th of February, at the houfe of John Kline, to comilul about the houfe tax law.

Were any mames ligned to the adver ifement.
None that I recullect.-A number of the inhabitants met, it wan pretty late in the day: they all feemed difoontented, but they were in doubt whether it had paffed into a law or not. 1 here was fomething in the news paper of ain amendment, which made them doubt whether it was in force. They formed an inftrument of writing, but I cannot recollect the particulars of it. It was drawn up by John Fries; I affifted him. We paffed home af.er that. I had no particular converfation with any body after the pajer was figred: it was ligned by about 50 or 52 of the inhainterts.

Do you recollect whether captain Kuyder was directed to give any notice by that meeturs?

I do recollect fomething ; I think it was that captain Kuyder fhould give notice to the alleflors not to come forward till they had informed themfllues farther, whether it was a law or not.

Crose examination. Who put up the notice of this meeting?
Witxess. I am not liure: perhaps it was myfelf. John Hoover, and Ecreral, had talkei about it, and we thought we would call a meeting.

Was Fries prefent when you agreed to call this meeting?
No.-This was on Friday: on the Monday following James Chapman came to any houfe, and told me I thould tell Jacob Hoover that he fhould give notice over the creek (I live nearly at the end of the townfhip) that if they would choofe an affeffor of their owa, they fhould be welcone; and any man that was capable of the bufinefs weuld be admited into the office. There was o:e Valentine Hoover cane to my houfe that fanje day; he lives over the other fide, and I told him what Mr. Chapman had told me, likewife, I informed Jacob Hoover thiat day mfelf. Who cppofed it I dont know, but it was reported that it was not adopted. Squire Foulke fent me word to advertife a meeting. Ifrael Roberts and Samuel Clark called on me and told me. They informed me that Mr. Fouike was of opinion that the people were ignorant of the lav, and he would read it for them, and explain it to them: this was the purpofe of the meeting. So we advertifed the meeting to be held at my houfie.

What tine was this?
Sometime in February toward the latter end. It was on a Saturday, and there were a great many of the inhabitants at the meeting, fquire Foulke and Mr. Chapman attended it. The people behaved very ditorderly ; but I cannot recollect any of the converfation that paffed. Jacols Kline came in and afked me what the meeting was intended for. I told him that I underflood by fquire Foulke, that the Germans were very iguod rant of the law, and that he called them together, to read, and explain it to them; I defired him to try to pacify the people, and I believe he did his endeavour, but it proved in vain: at lealt they did not read the law. I did not underfand that any body offered to read it, he thought it was in vain, there was fuch a clamour.

Did they fay any thing to you?
After Mr. Chapman was gone; Marks afked me how I came to meddle with the advertifement.

Was John Fries at the meeting?
No.-I don't recollect any thing afterwards till the affeffors cane, which was the $5^{\text {th }}$ of March. They took the rates of my houre and my neighbours.
Who were the affeffors?
Mr. Childs, Mr. Youlke, and Mr. Redrick.-I went from home the reft of the day, and the next moruing when I returned (fixth of March) I heard thare had been an uproar about driving away the affeffors. It was talked of that they were going to Millars town the next day. Hearing of fuch an aproar, I thought I had bufinefs at Millars town. Po I concluded to go and heir what was going on: they talked they were going to meet the Northampions who were going for the reliaf of the Prifoners.

Did you know the names of any of the prifoners?
No.-So we came at Marks's; (ith of March) when we came there, there was a talk at Marks's houfc about going to the tavern above Emaus : Marks faid his fon would bring word. We went on then till we me: young Marks, and he beckoned that we fhould halt, or go hack, fo we did; he faid he had been up aţRitter's tavern, and they had flarted before he came there.
Who went with you?
He mentioned cightcen names.
Who were the commanders?
I do not know of any in particular who took the command.a-Some withed to go to fee Bethichem, fome to fee the bridge, fo they concluded to go on.

Court, Did you hear John Fries fay any think about going on?
I cannot fay who were for going on, and who were not. We wern overtakea by feveral people going to Bethlehem on the road.

Court. Were they armed or not?

None that I can recoliech.-When we got to the bridge at Bethlehering there were a great many armed men, and light horfe, and two rode over the bridge towards us, from the other fide. I did not hear the converfation that paffed at the bridge ; but after a while we went over to Bethlehem.
After you got to Bethlehem, what did you obferve, refpecting Fries?
There was a great many of the company that was formed before the houfe, who feem to fipeak out that they would have the prifoners. Fri's went in, I faw hin flate to go in, but I did not hear who ordered him, or who defired him. A flort time after, is the courfe of five or ten minutes, Henry Hover came out to us, and faid he was fergeant of their company, and he was chofen to demand the prifoners. He faid he went up flairs, and fomebody gave him a pufh, and had like to have tumbled him down ftairs, and be came out in a great paffion. He went on in a great rage, and I catched hold of him : he faid if they would only give him ten men, he would florm the houfe. A fhort time after that, I obferved Fries come out, and he faid "filence" to the people there. He feemed to be as much among Staeler's company as among ours. He then afterwards faid, "Gentlemen, an officer of the United States fays he cannot deliver up the prifoners, unlefs they are refcued by force of arms: fo, be faid, if you are willing, we will, I will go foremaft, but if we do, I beg of you, none of you fire till they fire on us frit, till I give the word, and if I drop, then you mult take your own command." He repeated thefe words, at leaft, once more. I heard nothing afterwards of the proceedings in, nor out of the houfe, that I recollect.

Was there fome time after this, a meeting held at Marks's?
Yes.
After the proclamation?
A meeting was held on the 18th of March.
What was the object of the meeting?
To choofe a committee of the three counties of Northampton, Bucks and Montromery.

Why thefe three counties?
Becaufe there were none clle in the proclamation.
What was the meeting held for?
To confult what was beft to be done, and it was determined to leave it to the committee.
Was John Fries there?
Yes.
Did you put any queftion to him relative to the affair at Bethehem?

- No. After the meeting I had fome converfation with him: while the ${ }_{2}$ committee was fitting I faid to him: John Fries, you never intended to "refift the law, did you? He made me anfwer, yes, I did.

What laws were you talking about?
We did noṭ in particular mention any laws.
Was there a meeting after this at your houfe, and what time was that?
It was on Eiafter Monday, March 25.
What was the object of that meeting?
That was to appoint an affeffor. The one that was appointed was to do the bufinefs, if he pleafed, if not, the perfon they chofe was to do it, or hoth together.

[ 67 ]

Was John Friss at that meeting?
At the beginning of it he was, but I do not recollect that he was as the time they gave in their votes.
'Did he unite in the chaice of the affeffor?
Several did not wait becaufe there was no oppofition, and they thought there was no occafion.
'Did be, or did he not exprefs himfelf as much againft the law as ever?
He faid it would not. fuit him to vote now, as he had been againft the law throurhout.
Did not many of thofe who had been oppofed to the law before, vote" for the affeffor now?
Yes.
Cross examination. At the meeting at Marks's, was it not gencrally agreed that there flould be a fubminion to the laws?

Yes.-After the bufinet's was over, they made mention of it, but Ida not know that they made any report of it.

Did not Fries, with all the reft, agree to the fubmifion?
I cannot fay.
Court. Was there any agreement to do it?
Why, I believe the people never knew to the contrary but there would be a return made.

Cross examination. Was it not recommended to fubmit?
Yes.
And was it not agreeable to the meeting ?
Yes, I believe it was; I heard no oppofition to it?
Atrorney. Was not the return made in writiors?
Yas.
Did not 'fquire Richards propofe that there flould be a fubmiffion figned there?

Ne, I do not recollect any fuch thing.
Cross examination. Waṣ it a general delign of the meeting to conform and fubmit to the laws?

On the $\mathrm{I}_{5}$ th of March we received the proclamation, and that evening I took it down to Frederick Henny's ; William Yhomas went with me: I read the proclamation to Frederick Henny, and he was agreed to fubmit ; he made no oppofition.

Cross examination. When Fries faid it would not fuit him to vote for the affeflor, did he lay he contipued in oppoftion to the lair at that time?
I don't know that he did, but he feemed rather oppofed, at that time, to the laws or the appointment of an affefior.
Cross cxamination. Was this proclamation comsunatated to the meeting on the 18 th of March?
Yes it was; after I had real it to Heany, I told him to take it to others. I thuyght it was proper th get a pecition leat to the' Preffitent: JAMES GHAMAN.
Artornfy. You are a priticipal affeflor tircier the act for laying a direct tay are you no:?
Yee, for tetue townhips, (which be named).
H )w did the afefments go forearl urder your care ?
If believe in all but lower Mitiford the affingents were carried into ef. fect without onpfition, or ia a manoity of tire towalhips, except foree little threatenings. The affeffor of lower Milford was taken fick foon after he got his infructions, and fo did not proceed. His name was Samael Clark: I called upon him afterwards, to know whether he was able to proceed or not: he thought he thould be able in a few days: I had occafion to go to Nemtown, and was feveral days from home, but found there was nothing dune refpecting it ; I found the psople had had a meeting, and there appeared to be great oppofition to the rates being taken. The day afier I returned from Newtown, Clark called upon me, and told me he thought it was not fafe to go about, from the dipofition of the penple at that time. I told him that I would meet him the next day at George Mitchel's tavern in Milford, and meet the pecple to know what their complaints were. I met Clark at a houle juft by, and he told me he would be in at Mitchel's in a few minutes. I examined Mítchel, to know what was their complaints: Mitchel fignified that the people were diffatisfied that the affeffor was appointed without their having a choice: for they withed to choofe fer thentelves. I told Mitchel if they would choofe a man of character, I would ule my influence with the commiffioner to have him appointed, and I defired hin to give notice of it to Jacob Hoover. I wrote to the commilioner flating the fituation we were in, and told him what I had done, but le feemed not to be willing to indulge them with it.

Court. Who was the commifioner?
Wirxess. Seth Chapman was commiffoner for that diftrict.-I told him it would eafe the minds of the people if it were done. At length he confented, bat feemingly with reluciance. However they never chofe one.

Was it made known to the people?
I do not recollesit that it was.-I met him at a meeting of the affeffors which was held at the houfe of Jolm Rodruck. On my return home I was told, I think by 'fquire Foulke, that the townhlip was advertifed to meet at Mitchcl's. LIe liid if I would atiend thece he would meet me. I got there between one and two cluck. Juft as I got to the houle, vefore I went in, I faw ten or twelye people cuning from toward; Hoover's mill, about half of them were armed, and the others with fichs. I went into the houfe, and twenty or thinty were chere. I fat talking with fome of my acquaintance that were well diffed to the haw. Conrad Marks talked a great deal in German, how oppreffive it was, and much in oppolition to it, feeming to be much emarged. His fon, and the fe who came with him feemed to be very noify and rude; they talled all in German, which as I did not know fufficienty, I paid but lithe atetrition to them. They wele making a great noife; hazzaing for liberty, and democracy, damung the tories, and the like. Ilet them go on, as I taw no difpofition in the people to do any tiang toward forwarding the bistnefs. Between four and live I got up to go out ; as I pafied through the croud towards the bar, they puthed one anvether againt me.

Was there any offer made to explain the lav to then?
No, none while I faid ; they did not ieem difpoied to hatar it.
Cross examination. lou dia not fay a wood to them about it?
No, I did not. They did not mention my name the whole time of my being there, but they abuied Eyerly and Ballinte, and faid how they had cleated the public, and what villains they were. I underftood it was refpesting collecting the revenue, but I did not underfand near all they faid. I recollect Conrad Marks faid that Congrefs had ne risht to make fuch a law, and that he never would fubmit to 'have his houle taxed.

Cross examination. Frics was not there, was he ?
No.-They feemed to thitk that the collectors were all fuch fellows; the infmuation was that they cheated the public, and made them pay, but nesur paid into the treafury,-A fter setting through the croud to the bar, I fuppoic I was fifteen minutes in converfation with Mitchel : he faid perhaps they were wrong, but the people were very much exafperated. Nothing very maicrial happened, and I aked Mr. Foulke if it was not time to be going. ©o I gor into the "ileigh and went off; foon after they fet up a dreadful busza and fhout. I topped at Jacob Fries's tavern, and waited for Mr. Foulle, who foon came: Clarl, we affefor was likewife there. After talining a little more on the lubject, Clark fill perfifted in not having any thing to do wibh it, fur he thought it was not lafe for him. We thought it was beft to give the other affeffors notice, as their alfeffiments were nearly finifled, to meet us at a certain day to take the rates in that townip. I then wote to the other alfefiors, requelling them to meet at Onater town on the th of March. Rodrick, Childs and Fonlke met me thene: we waited till evening, but no others cane ; fo wo abred to meet at my houfe next morningat 9 o'clock. We met, and I went with them to Mifford, to Samuel Clark's, but he was not at home. It was thought bett for me to go to fee for Clark, as he was engared in a movine. I went to Jacol Fries's tavern to wair for hum; they vent to Mitchel's to take the rates. Clark foon came : he told me he could no: ardertake to tale the rates, for that he might as well pay his fime :t is cifl him all he had, for they were fo oppofed to it at any rate, that he could not think himfelf inte, for at leat he fhould receive fome pivate injer. Finding he would not do it I faid no more. John Fries was comint," :p juft then: he told me he was very ghad to fee me : he told me that lee taderitood I had been infulted in their townthip at one of their meethgs: he was very forry for it : he mentioned 'Squire Foulke as well as !ayitl: had he been there, he faid, it hould not have been done : I turned it of by this : that there was not aperfon among them that foke a word to me. I told him I theugit they ware very wrong in oppoling the law as they did: he hognifed that he thought they were not, and that the rates thould not be taken by the affiffors. I tod him that the rates certainly would be taken, and that the affelions were then in the townhip taking the rates. I repeated it to him, and he aniwered " my God!" if I was oit!' to fend that man (pointing to one itanding by) to my houfe to let them kuow they were taking the rates, there would be 500 or 700 men uder ans here tomorrow moning by fun rife. He told me he sould wot fubnit to tha law. I toid lina I thou, int the people fad more fenfe than to rite ia amo to opple the law in that manacr: if they did, govemment man cuamby talie notice of it, and fend an armed force to enforce the laws. His ation was that "if they d, we will foon try who is fronget." I tohe him they cortanly woukd ind themfelves miftaken refpecing their force, he lignifled he thougit not: he mentioned to me the troop of horfe in Montgonery county, and the people at upper and lower Mutiod, ade fomething about infantu, who were ready to join. He haid he was rey forry fur the cocafion, for if they were to rife, God knew where it would end: the confequences would be dreadful ; I told him they would be obliged to comply : he then faid huzza, it sball be as it is in France, or quill be as it is in France, or fomething to that effect. He then left me and went off.

Cross examination. Did Fries appear to be intoxicated?
No, not that I know. I fcarce ever faw hin intoxicated.-A fhort time after he was gone, on the lame day, the affefliors came to Jacob Fries's tavern. We then ordered our dinners there, and I believe it was Childs undertook to take the rates of Jacob Fries's houfe. We had not gore out of the soom after dinner, till John Fries came in, he addreffed himfelf to 'Squire Foulke, telling him he was very forry to fee him there ; be was a man that he had a great regard for, but that he was oppofed to the law himfelf. "I now warn you, faid he" not to go to another houfe to take the rrates, if you do, you will be hurt." He did not wait for any reply, but turned himiflf about, and went off out of the room. Id do not recollect any thing farther was faid to him. He feemed much irritated. I he affiefliors concluded to proceed upon their bulinets.

Rodruck and Foulke agreed to go together, and Childs went by himfclf : this was an agrecment between themfelves.

Crois examination. Hal Mr. Clark's appointment been vacated?
There had been no meeting of the affellors fince Mr. Clark had refufed, complaining that he found it inconyenient to proceed with the affef:ment.
Was this new arrangement communicated to the board of affeffors at all. No.
The council for the prifoners doubted the legality of the appointmen: of Mr . Foulke, fince the law had provided that an affeffor mult be appointed by the board of commiffoners, and not otherwife.

Mr. Chapman faid it was eftablilhed at the meeting at Rodricks, which was cailed in order to fee what bufinefs had been done, and then an arrangement was made that in cale of the inability or unwilingue's of Clark to do the bufinefs in lower Milford, it lhould be dine by the whole, and therefore it was done, without the place of Clarke being vacated.

Cross examination. Were there any minutes of the affelfors kept?
There was no more than a memorandum.
Attorney. When you had this converfation with John Fries, was it in any relipest founded on the alteration of the affeffors, or was it a general declamation againlt the law?

He did not mention any thing of that at all.

Mr. Dallas gave notice that he thould expert the gentlemen engaged in the profecution to preduce the records of the affeffors.

> JOHN RODRICK fiwom.

Attornex. Were you one of the aficflors under the direct tax law, appointed for lower Milfurd?

Yes.
Have you your warrant?
-Yioduced it. Dated November 5,1798 .
I fuppole you took the oaths the law directed?
Yes.
Did you att as affefior in any other part of your difrict previous to going to lower Mulfurd?

Yes.-There were twelve townflips in our diftrict, and there were lix: affeffors to ferve them.-He named them.-W'e were all fix fworn at a meeting held at my houfe, by the commifioner, Seth Chapman: 'iquire Foulke got his warrant afterwards; he was appointed, I think, in addition to Samuel Clark.-We met the commiffioner on the ith of Februay, when it appeared all the other townhhips were nearly done, except lower Milford ; at that meeting all attended but Ciark.-The principal afieffor, James Chapman was likewife there. We were informed that lower Milk ford was rot done, for Clark was afraid to go about. The commiffioner tuld the principal affeflor that he muft inform the other affefiors, that if any thing could be done in it, we muft try to do it. We all agreed that we would.

Was Mr. Foulk appointed before this meeting?
Yes, and he was prefent at it.-Not Iong after this, we got orders from the principal affefor to meet him at Quaker town on the 4th of Marcl; and to go the next day to get the rates at Milford. There were only three of us attended. We agreed to meet at the principal affeffor's houle the next morning, which we did, and thence we went to Clark's to have him to go with us: he was not at home, however we proceeded on, takigs the rates, Mr. Childs, Mr. Foulke and myfelf. We had taken between 50 and 60 affeffarents when we came to the houfe of Jacob Fries.

Were the people at home when you took the rates?
All weie at home, I think, except onc, and there we left a notice. When we came to Jacob Fries's we met the principal affefor. After dimner, while we were fitting at the fire, John Fries came into the room: we had a room by ourfelves. He faid he heard we were come to take the rates of the townhip; we told him yes. He faid he would warn us not to proceed, elfe we flould be hurt. He faid he was forry for 'ficuire Foulke, and I believe Mr. Chapman he mentioned, for he always relipected theten very much. He faid he was oppofed to the law, and he would not fubmit to it. He then left the room. He feemed to be a little in a paflion. We got on our horles, and proceeded at taking the rates: I and Foulke went together, and Childs by himelf to fonse who we thought were quiet people. We proceeded on till about funfer, when we were going to the houle of one Singmafter, and as we turned down a lane, out from the road, ve heard fomebody hallow to us: we flopped, and faw it was John Fries and five men more. We flopped, and they came walking towards us. John Fries was in the front. Fries faid that he had warned us not to proceed, and we would not hear, and now they were come to take us prifoners. believe I afked by what authority : with that he made a grapple at the bridle of my borfe; 1 wheeled my creature round, and he juft catched hold of my great coat, but he could not hold. I rode off then: after I had got abrut two rod, I turned my creature round again; and he was a little way from the reft. I told him I was furprifed at his conduct, that he bad behaved fo. He began to danm and curfe, and walked back towards the other men: he mentioned that if he had a horfe, lie s;ould foon catch me.

Attorney. Was he near his own houfe then?

Witness. He was about two or three miles rfom it.
I rode up nearer to thofe other men: they had ftopped efquire Foulke: as Fries returned back to his men, he faid, inen, let Foulke go as we cannot get Rudrick; to morrow mornin; we will have him. I will have yoo men together to moriow, and I will come to your houfe; and wiil let you know that we are oppofed to the law. We then went and took the affefment of Singmafter's hotif. WVe had agreed befoce we left Jacob Fries's, that we would meet the princinal affllor the next moning, to fee what courfe we flould take.

Cross examination. Was Singmafer at home?
Yes.-So we met: we faid then that it was mit worth while to attempt any thing moe, we could not proced ous. James Chaman ha wrote a letter to the commifioner to thate maters. We: wa niseed :o quit taking the rate at haver Mifford at that time, as an the eng we fhould not be able to doany thing. Wic: we wert minerimi.e manag Quaker town (on the 6th of Miarch) Cephas Childis race befac us. lad 'fquire Foulke rode together. Whea we came to (Quaker ton n, Chids turned into 'quire Griffith's: we found a great many people armed with guns, and with uniforms, fo I faid to Foulke, here is Fries, and his company. I faid, we wont ftop if we can help it : I rode throush them, but when I had got half through them, they hallowed to me wifle ; a great many hallowed, and came running on both fides the roud, fome with their clubs and mulkets to ftrike me.
Court. Did they flike you?
Witness. No, they did not, I rode quickly through them.
Court. Did they frike at you?
I faw them running to come to ftrike. -I had paffed Roberts's tavern, and when I come to 'Zeller's tavern, there was John Fries at the porch; he hallowed to me to fop, for I was going to pafs by, and not to flop and give myfelf up : there was aroother man with me. They followed me to ftop me: I fopped and wheeled my creature round, and afked Fries what he wanted. They damned me, and told me I hould deliver myffelf up ; I told him as long as he ufed fuch language, I would not. There was order then given to fire at ine.

Court. Who gave the order?
That I camnot tell, but there was two men fanding clofe together at Zeller's door, they pointed their guns : as I faw that, I rode off.

Cross excmination. Then, as you were fo near, you can tell whether it was Fries or not who ordered them to fire.

1 did not hear him.
How far were you from the porch ?
Five or fix rod.
Were Fries and you face to face?
The other company were fill coming up at this time : they hallowed them to flop me. The laft I heard was, they hallowed out to get horfes to purfue me, but they did not purfue me.
Cross examination. Had Fiies, of the other Tpeople the gun at this time that the order was given to fire?
I cannot fay that Fries had any thing in his hand at that time, but the others had clubs.
Court. How far was Fries from you at that time?
I do not know : perhaps five or fix rods. There was an old man ftanding with him.

Attorney. Have you feen thatold man fince?
Why, I thought I faw him, or fome one like him the other day in the city. I believe I have feen him in the court fince the court begana Befure you met with Fries, did you meet with any opyontion that day in takng the rates for lower Milford ?

Why they talked of giving us fome, but till they gave it in: Nobody powented us.

Coss examination. Who made out the lifts for the rates taken by you?
'spare Fouke :--there were a great many Germans, lo I enquired, and Foulle put it down.

When did you firft know that the rates were not taken in lower Mil. ford?

On the 16 th of February.
Did you lanow of their being an intention of apoointing Mr. Foulke beture he was appointed?

I donet know.
iA ras Fonioe ampented on account of Clart's abience, or merely to go into that townhip?

I underltood he was appointed to affin Mr. Clarke: he was appointed by the commifioner.

CEPHAS CHILD, qualified.
Were you one one of the afieffors unde: the act for the valuation of houlés?

Yes.
In what county?
In Bucks.-He here fhewed his warrant, and proved his gualitication; daced November 5, 179 s.

At the meeting at Roderick's when we vere qualified, we had our infrutions given us by the commifioure: he informed us that there were for dinefors to twelve townhips, which we were all equally concerned in afenm, and it would be proper for us to point out ahich townhises we wobld feverally take. I thinh this meeting was ab out the latter end of 1) cember. Imade fome obje tions, becaufe I could not talk the German hangare: they faid that could nake no difference, becaule we were at apreed as to cur diftrich: Mafford and kichland wete athened to Clark. 1 twok Hill-wn and New-B:itain. I arreed recipnothy wan Clat to ahif him, and he me, as he cold talk German, and in Jill-uneon there bremany Gemans. This was ared in the ? weme whe whote, and Henie Fublak I made the Pame agrecment wih. I believe that this 1. A of ammement was generally made by the wh be, anith each other.
 a.het him tin two days, and an ther the was aporinted for him to anilt nl.. I hat made fome begining in my ond ditrict befure that day anme. Before we feparated, the anedor pitched upon an early day to make our retums of what we had don, in order $t$, camine whether we hel proceeded right or not. I went up to Clath': aseeable to apponintrent, and found he was not able to go on: I thetivet atended io my win difrict.

Atronser. Why was he not able to go on ?
Ile was lick and unable.-We met to make our returns at Redricris: Y. erman Fouke, I think, met with us, I know nothing of his appoints ment. This was on the ;th day of the Bucks court (Gth of February.) Nat kaning gone through our bufinefs, we were to meet on the afth agaiu. Foulke, I underfood at the former meeting, had heen arpointed: When we met, enquiry being made what we had done: Foulke told James Chapman that he dared not go into the tuwnfhip, for he underflocd that fome threats were thrown out againn him, and he rather wifhed that the people would appoint fome other perfon, themfelves, to do it. The commifioner did not feem to agree with it, but at laf confented that if fuch could be done, he fhould not materially object : finally, he condented fo far as to intimate to Jaues Chapuan, that if they fhoutd make fuch an offer, and appoint one, he would recommend hin, if not, he laid we mult go and affif in that townflip. There were fome propotials made who of us fhould go, excufes were made, and then the commiffioner informed us that we were all enjoined as much to affels that townthip as our own. Upon whieh he told the principal affeffor that if it did not go ou, he was to write to us, and we were to attend to the call. I received a letter about the firt of March, or the laft of February from the principal afleffor, that he had been to Milford, and it did not feem likely the afiefliments could go on, and I was ordered to meet the reft in Quaker town on the 4th of March. Accordingly, Foulke the principal affefior and myfelf met thiere. We had word from two others that they were not able to come. We concluded to call upon Clark to go with us, and divide the townflip fo as to compleat it in a flort time. The next morning we met to begin the bulinefs, we went to Clark's but he was not at home. It was agreed then that we flould go on with the rates, and James Chapman was to go to Jacob Fries's to wait for Clark. The firf houfe we went into was Daniel Wiedner's, I went in firf, and told him I was come to take down the rates, under the revenue act of the United States: he appeared to be very angry; I reatoned with hiut, telling him, if he wifhed to read the law he might: I told him the confequences of cpecfition, but he might have ten days to conlider of it, and give in his account if he chofe to take that time. He fecing me thus faid, "take it now fince it muft be done," he gave me his account accordingly, and ajpeared contented. He taid farther, "we have concluded not to take it, as we expect the act will be repealed." He meant they had concl.aded not to take till they knew what Congrefs would do with the law. I made reply to him that I believed that was already done, tor I had feen a repirt of a committee of Congrefs, that it was inexpedien: to repeal it, and it was not done.

Court. Did he offer to read the law?
No. He made fome remarks, but I thld him it was sery wrong. I caniot tell what he faid in particular. One thin, I thimk was, that the affeffors were to have very extravagent wages. "It does not matter," he faid, "you may as well give in my return." I did not get on my horfe till I got up to Nitchell's where the other two affelfors wese. Widener went out a little before me, and he was there whein I came, walking about, feemingly very angry; I again reatoried with hin.. Abother ob. jection he made was, that the horfes of hich value vis to pay wothing, while fmaller ones, and of finall value was to pay hich. 1 finget to diy that after the rates of Wiedner's land was talan be remriod and finid be had forgot, there was another piece of land : he then fat down with an heavy figh and faid. "They will play the devil with ne: what hall we do." I afked him wiat he niamt, he made no anfer. I told him I hoped every one would be as well coavinced as he was. I tosis ieveral hevites in my way, and went to Jacob Fries's. As I was going in at the dooly I met John Fries, who floook hand witi me, thld me he was glad to fee me, aidd alked me to take a drink. He came in again after we had done dinner and faid "I forbid you going to any other houles in the townllip; he then mentioned that Foulke and Chapman, or Rodrick were men le mach citeemed. He faid if we did pon to any other houries, we flould be', or would be, hurt. We then procecded to allefis. Where Englifla people lived there appeaned no cojecion, except at one place. The people there fand, that if they did give in the account, there were fome ordinary people in the neighbourhood, and they would be fit on by them to do them an injury. That afteracon I went to David Roberts's: his wife feemed very anxious, a a wihed her hufband liad been there, for fhe faid I fhould not go home alac. I went afterwards when he was at home, and he faid he had no objection, willy for his neighbours. After fome converfation he faid the perple there had agreed not to let the rates be taken yet: he fail they hed already chofen an affefor in their own townhip: I told him I wendered they did not let him go on: he fignified that he was a perion if di obnoxious charaker, and therefere they did not wifh to accept of his. In our return home, I cailed at 'הquire Grifith's: as I got off my hofe, his wite told me that they were cone there to take us, and thai there were 40 or 50 men there, and fhe did not know what they were abuat. A litile girl juft after came in and faid that they had hold of 'Squise Foulke's horte by the bridle, going to take him: I weint to the window, and faw them all round him. I did purpofe to go out, but at their peefuation I ftaid. The hittle girl came in again, and faid they had taken Mír. Funlle into Enoch Ruberts's tavern. After a fhort time Fries came over into the houlie where I was fitting : he took me by the hand, and I rofe up ; he faid, Mr. Childs, you mull go with me to my men, ás we walked alvig he faid "I told you yefterday that you fhould not go to another houf, and if you did you would be hurt, and we are now come to take you prifiner, if we find that you will go on with the affefments." My anfwer wac, we are obliged to fulfil our office, and we cannot do otherwife, uulefs we are prevented. I was endeavouring to inform him of the maner in which I had obtained the warrant, in hopes that I thould prevail upon him to go on with the bufinefs, as Ruberts had propofed, but he would not hear me. When we weit into the houfe, he addeffed himfelf to his men an! me: "here are my men"-" here is one of them."
Courr. By this it appered that he had the direction. Did he feem angry ?

He appeared to be angry, but he did not appear to fhow any revenge to me, or to talk angry-1 do not recollect that I knew any one in the houle, except the tavern kecper. Some of them foon began to ufe rough lan cuage. A perfon then came behind me, and caujht me by the collar oier the fhoulder, and faid, "darm you Rodrick, we have got you now, "damin you, you thall go to the liberty pole and dance round it ;" the houle was then crouded as full as it could cruad, and they puhthed me up fo clofe, that I could not turn round fometimes for a confiderable time : the perfou who caught me, feemed to wifh to keep behind me, but he flill kept hold of me : during this time I had feveral thumps; which feemed more with the knee than the fift. After fome time he got to fee my face: he damaed me that I was not Rodrick, but that I was the other damned fon of a bitch that he faw fitting at Rock hill, he had miftaken me. A flowt time after this, a perfon came up to me and faid "keep a good heat, and you will not be hurt." I tarned, or endeavoured to turn to them and faid, "I am not Rodrick, nor did I ever affefs in Rock hill :" he faid " you are a damed liar." With that there were fill more of them came up, and preffed about me more, and more took hold of me. There was a grood deal of talk, fome in German, and fome in Ençilih. I then told then that my name was Cepias Childs; that I was not a man known in the county, but I had no doubt many of them, though the; did not know my face, kuew my name: by that there was fome who know me there as Coroner of the county ; that man then faid "if he is Cliilds, he is no better than the other." He afked me wiore I afiellied: I told him: a mamber of them alked how they liked it whes I had been. I told them forre of them had appeared difiatisfied in the firft infance, but as I believed, every man almoft in the townihips where I affefed were fatisfict, they again faid I was a damned liar, for the people had tuld them that they would joun them in the fupprefion of it, and my own neighbours would hisht argainf me. I tokl them I thought I kiew beteer than they; that if I was wel! imformed thicy would not do fo. 'ihen they begain again at me. Then they afked me if I had taken the oath of alleciance to the United States of America: I told them I had: they afkel me when: I whald them I could not recollect the time, bat I knew it was 25 foon as the law required it of me: they afled me of I was a friend to the government of the United States; I told them I was: the; then began to dam the government, and the governor, ald fhoved me about, many of them taking their Maker's name in vain: there then was a perfon who fooke very good Englifh : they damned the houfe tax and the flamp act, and called me a fampler repeatedly : they damned the alien law and fedition lan, and firally all the laws: the government and all the laws the prefent Congrefs had made. They damed the Conflitution allio.

What Confitution?
They did not mention what Conntitution, whether of this fate or of the United Statec. They damned the Congrefis, and damned the prefident and ali the fiiends to guernment, becaule they were all tories, for that none were friends to the prefent government except tories. They anked me if I had been out in the laft war: fing I told them the law did not require me to go, and then I faid I was under the tuition of my paients : they faid they had fought for liberty, and would fight for it again. They fied they would not have the government, nor the Prelident, and they would not live under fich a damued government : "we will have Wafhington;" others faid "No, we will have Jefierfon, be is a better man than Adams : huzza for Jeffe: Fon."

Who faid fo?
All of them.-They then infifted on my taking an oath of allegiance to them, allidging that if I did fo, I thould not be hurt. They iinfifted on in leveral times, till at length I had no way to wave it, and then I afled them what their goverment was. One anfwered Waflington: I faid I had taken an catil of allegriance to Wallington's government a!ready. They then faid Jefferfon; we will have none of the danmed fiamplese, nor the houfc tix. So they went on. They faid they cmbo-died themfelves to oppofe the government ; they meant to do it, and that was their defign in coming there.

Who laid fo, and what were the precife words?
I do not know who faid it, but the words were thefe "We are determined to oppofe the laws, and we have mist to do it; the goverument is lay.nr one thing after anctier, and if we do not oppofe it, they will bring us into bondige and llatery, or make.flaves of us: we will have liberty." And than timy mentioned the number of men that had joined them, or lent then: word that they would joir them. They mentioned, fome an humded, fome nore, fome lefs, that they had there would do it, befides, they lad all Nouthemptin cunty to a man would join them, except tome traics às they called thiem. Between Quaker town and Delaware river, I reconleci they fald they could raife io,000 men if they fhould be waited to oppule the fedition and alien liws. I cannot be certain, but I thark he faid (as be fyoke in German) and fifty other damned laws. However I am wot certain as to the momber. They likewife faid that Guneral Waflington had fent.them atcount that he had 20,000 men all ready to affift them in this undertaking to oppore the laws. I begged them not to believe it, for it could not be, and fomebody was endeavourinig greatly to impofe upon them : I thought I knew the fituation of things better, and as for General Waffington, I was fure he never wouid m:der take fuch conduct as that.
Juar. Did they fpeak in the German language at that time, or Englifh?
A great mary of them fpoke in Geiman, but one or two of them fooke voy good Einglinh, but they were altogether Germans. 'Ihis paffed while I was in cuftody.

Cross cxamination, What do you mean?
Witness. Why Fries took me in there and left me in cuftody and went awa;-

Court. Did he orde: them to keep you in cuftody?
Not that I know of.-' 1 hey faid Gen. Wafhington had certainly wrote to them fo and fo. One of them faid he would be damned if it was not fo, for he had feen the letter from Wahington; or fomething to that effect. During this time they were conftantly pufling me; one would come to my back and get his knee up : they would endeavour to pufh me on the fove, one or twol.at hold of my hips and endeavoured to throw me down, others emed rea!y tolick me, and particularly after this converfation abnut Waflington. Abcat that time Captain Fries came toward mie and feemed very much firprifed: He faid, Mr. Child, I underftand frome of my men have abuled and infutted you. He really did appear to be very lerious; he faid he would not allow me to be abufed; he appeared to be really difireffed for the ufage I had received, and if I would tell him who it was, he fild he would make him behave himfelf. He then told me to come into the room. He faid he refpected me, and did not wifh me to be abuled. I tuld him I thought it hard that he fhould leave me amougft a parcel of intowicated people. I do not particularly recollect what I faid, but he toid me he hoped I would not impute that conduct to him: I told him I was not much injured, and therefore hoped he would not think about it. He faid his men were civil men, and feemed to wonder fuch a thing had happened. I think he then gave me fomething to drink. He took me into a room, the fartheft fide of which feemed to be empty. When I got in there, he demanded my papers while I lind been an affefior. White he was with me no perfon infulted me, indeed fime of them, wheri he cance for ward into the room where I was pullued off, out of the way. I then told him all that I had done, and seai ned with !im, but arotwithfanding that, he infifted on my papers; I then told him I had no papers about me relative to the affellimen:.

Giross examuation. Who were in the roum at the time the requeit was made for the papers?

I do not recollect any body pirticulary, but there were.a great many crouded into the room after me. -He infinted that I had the papers, I told him I had not got the papers, he faid I had, and he would have them. I told him I had no pherers alout me, but what related to my oflice of Coroner. I was $s$, inf; to deliver up to him my county tax papers, but he faid I had ot leer papers, I laid I had not. He then looked on thofe I had given hiul, anil fiw Hilltown at the top, then he faid Huho! my boys, we have got what we wanted, and then turned about and went away. He left the pochet book, taking the papers' with him. There was a confiderable nusian mate, and they mof of them followed him out of the room. They were gone but a few minutes till they rufhed in again as inard as they could ruilh, without frics, and fome got hold of me. I hey brought Daniel Wedner along witt them: fome bad piftols, guns, clubs, Scc. and fome fivords. They feemed very angry, and were pulhing upon me, while fome endeavoured to put them off. Wiedier came up to me, and infifled on the return of the rate 1 took of hin yellerday, he taid he would have it. I defired lim juft to acknowledge to the truth, Did not he give it mefreely yefterdny: this while a perfon had hold of me, fome of then ttepped up and dide it was fair: I then afked him, did I not tay I would not take the meafure of your houfe by force, but you gave me the rates with a free will? Yes, he fail, but I was not forced, and therefore I want it again. Sume of them then went out, and direatly others caime mand thook me very had : one came in and threatened me, and faid I thould be flot; foume brought in their guns and thewed them to me, and told me if I flould be feen in Mifford townilup on the buabiefs, I flould be fhot. Weider werit off. This perfon with the fivord threatened a good deal.
Atroarey. Whowa he?
He was called Ma:ks, the clder. I believe him to be the fame man I lave feen heri.-While I was in this converfation, William I homas came forward and faid he knew me, and that they thould not abufe me. That gave me an opportunity of talking farther, and then I reafoned winh them of the bad tendency of fich conduct, and told them that I really thought if I had the law with me, I thould perfuade them to allow of it. One of them who had abuld me before, came to me and acknowledged he had abuied me, and was forry for it, and wifhed me to forgive him. I think his name was Snith, but I an not fure. After pafling fome time in converlation, Fries came back again with the tranfcript, and delivered it me, and told me as near as I can recollect in thefe words; I muft go hane, and mull never come back again to affefs, or I hould be flut, and infifted on my promifing I would not do it. My reply was, that from the pains I had taken, I had left the townflip with a view of not returning to it, unlefs compelled by authority, and from their prefent treatment, if they ever catched inc going back without that authority, I would çive them leave tn fhoot me. He then told me, Foulke and you may iat form the government what has been done as foon as you pleafe, we can raife 1000 men in one day, and we will not fubmit to it.

Did they fay they were oppofed to all the laws?
They faid there were a number of laws they were oppofed to, and one of thofe laws was now putting in execution, and they appeared to think if that was fopped, the others would be. This was how I underfond it. The words were that they were determined to oppofe the laws, and not let them be put into execution; there were fo many laws coming on, it was time to flop them, and if they were known to oppofe them, they expected the others would not be brought forwards.

Cross examination. Was Fries prefent when thele words were ufed?
No.

Minday, May 6.

JUDGE PETERS (one of the Bench) ssoorn.
Attorney. Will your honour pleale to give the Jury an account of the circumftances of your iffuing warrants in Northampton county, and of circumftances within your knowledge previous to the examination of John Fries on the 6th of April.

Witness. The firlt time I heard officially of this uncafinefs in the counties of Bucks, Northampton and Montgomery, was fometime in Fe bruary, I camot precilely recollect what time. I had heard of it before as a piece of news, but this was the firit time I heard it officially : it was by depolitions being fent to me by the attorney of the diffrict (Mr. Sitgreaves) relative to a number of perfons. Afer that I examined fome witnefies relative to it, and upon the whole I concladed to iffue my warrants againtt the parties charged. Being much engaged in the diffrict court, the attorney of the diftrict drew up the $f, r m$ of the warrants for ray fignature and approbation. We had concluded, hy way of eale to the people, that thefe warrants thould be drawn up in a form of order for the defendunt to appear before fome jultice of the peace, or judge of the county in order to give bail for their appearance at the circurt court of the United States. Neither of us then knew of thole infureents, as it turned out afierwaid; to have got to fuch a bead. But I doubted nyyfli of the propriety of the form and fubftance of the warrants, hecaule 1 thought that the juffice, or judge before whom bail was taken, ought to be acquainted with the whole cale, and wught to have the proof of the fact before him, on which the proof of the warant was found. I bad fome drubte too, whether it was legally right fer perfens taken by ney warants to go before an infermor magittrate. For thuy $h$ a juftice of the peace of any flate has a right by the laws of the United States t) take cogritance in the firtt infance of crimes a a ainft the United States, and bind over the offenders to the proper court, yot I did not think tiat, as fucl juffice had not had the original cogritance of tha: mater, there would be a propiety in my ondering lim to tahe feconcha? motice of it. While I vas leftitation oa this point, I receined information of the length to which, at that time, this cppotition to the law hat aio rucd. I doubted very much, and tho chounte was afterwade destly commed to m:, whether the maviliate; of thefe cuntion, ad patic:laly Nirthampion, would cloofe to take cognzanee of fuch mitices, wis the magiftrates, one of them a juftice of the peace, the other a frate judgre, who had done themfelves much honour in perfevering to far as they did, in endeavouring to bring thofe criminals to juftice. But finally it turned out that they were obliged to abandon even every endeavour towards executing this bufinefs. So that the law, and the public authority, fo far failed as it refpected that county, that the judicial authority of the United States became entirely prolliate. I found that fome of the very perfons who were charged before me were magiftrates, and I wihh I could fay that they were the only magiftrates who were engaged in this bufinefs. Thefe were the reafons that induced me to alter the form of my warrants. I found that too many magiltrates were concerned in flattering the prejudices of the people, and engaging in feditious practices, and encouraying the people in their miltakes for me to truft them, and I finally found that there were but two magiffrates that could be depended upon, and they told me that they were infulted in the performance of their duty for the United States: of this I had good evidence. And farther: it arrived to fuch a pitch that I could not get one of thefe gentlemen even to iffue a fubperna to examine witnefies, and fave them the great trouble and expence of coming before me. This was the opinion of thote two gentlemen; one of them wrote me, and the other informed me, that they were afraid to perform fuch an act. They could not only not get perfons to ferve the procefs, but they could not get the witnefles to appear before them. This I do not bring as a charge againft any particular perfon, but as a reafon why the warrants were thus iffued. Another reafon was that thofe people had taken up the fallacious notion that they would not appear before me, and therefore I thought it belt, though this flould not have been my leading motive, to convince them that every perfon in this diftrict ought to obey a warrant iffued by me, and apyear at fuch time and place as I directed ; the whole diftrict being to be conlidered the fame as a county in refpect to a ftate.

The witnefs then produced the warrants, dated February 20, 1799. One of which was read.

The marflal wrote to me official fatement; at fundry times of the difitculties he met with, and at one time informed me that the prifoners had been refcued, by furce of arme. from his poffeffion. The account he gave me it is umecefiary to fate, being much fimilar to what has been given in evidence: He tork frme engagement trom thofe prifoners, particularly thofe of Lethi townthip, that they would appear before me, bhich, the prifoners themfelves told me, was chearfully given. I undertocd from them, and other chanmels, that they feveral times attempted to come doun before me and deliver themfelves up, but they were prevented by perfuns who interrupted them, and would not let them come.

Artonnet. Was Joln Fries brought before you after you got up there?

Yes: I had previoufly ifued my warrant againf him.
Was this the examination he ligred in your prefence? [Showing the wituld Finc's confeffion] which was as follows:

\text { The examination of gich Fris- } 6 t \text { A April } 1>09 .

The coaniman: confetfes that he was on the party which refcued the priforers fir m the marilal at Bethehem: that he was allio one of a party that touk fom the affefu:s at (Gaker town, heir papers, and forewarned thiem agaiult the execution of their duty in making the affeffnents. The papers were delivered with the confent of the affeffors, but without force; perhdips under the awe and terror of the numbers who demanded them, and were by this examined and delivered to the afleftors. He confeffes that at the houfe of Jacob Fries, a paper was written on the evening preceling the refene of the prifoners at Bethlehem, containing an athociation agreement of the fublcribers to march for the purpole of making that reicue, bat he is not certain whether he wrote that paper: He knows he did not fign it, but it was fubfcribed by many perions, and delivered to the examinant:-He does not know where that paper is-The examimant confeffes alfo, that fome weeks ago, he wrote (before the affeffors came into that townihip) an asreement which he, with others fyened, purporting that, if an affeffment mult be made, they would not agree to have it done by a perfon who did not refide in the townlhip, but that they would choofe their own affelfor within their townfin-A meeting has been held in the townhip funce the affair at Bethenem, for the purpole of making fuch a choice : the examinant went to the place of elention, but left it before the election opened. - The examinant further acknowledres that his motive in going to Bethlehem to relcue the prifoners was nut from perfonal attachment, or regard to any of the pertons who lad been arrefted, but procceded from a general averion to the law, and an ineation to impede and prevent its execution. He thought that the alts for the affefment and collection of a direct tax did not impofe the quota equally upon the citizens, and therefore was wrong. He cannot fay who originally projected the refcue of the pifoners, or affembled the people for the purpole- The townhip feemed to be all of one mind; a man unknown to the examinant came to Quaker town, and faid the people hould meet at Comad Marks's to go to Millar's town. I he examinant fays that on the march of the people to Bethlehem, he was afked to take the lead, and did ride on before the people until they arrived at BethlehemThe examinant had no arms, and took no command, except that he delired the people not to fire until he hould give then orders, for he was afraid, as they were fo much enraged, that there would be blood thed. He begged them for God's fake not to fire, mind's they had orders from him, or unlels he fhould be thot down, and then they might take their own command.- That he returned the papers of the affelfors which had been delivered into bis hands, back to the affefions privately, at which the prople were much emraged, and fufpected him (Fries) of having turned fiom them, and theacened to fhoot him, between the houle of Jacob Ines and Yuaker town.

JOHN FRIES.

Taken 6th April, 1799, before Richard Peters.

Witness. It is my confant pracice to tell a prifoner that he is not bon. to be evidence againf himlelf: I did not make any promile or theats to extort it from him, but he chofe to make a voluntary confeffice, which if they do not choufe to do, I commit them without it. I I am paticularly delicate on this fubject of confetion, and I do not like to encourage it.
fudge Íredell. The gentiemen of the jury will oblerve that the law requires a judge to examine a prifoner, and it is left quite at the option of the man to confefs or not.

The council for the prifoner hoped, as it was a cafe of treafon, upon which the law and conftitution was extremely cautious how evidence was admitted, the jury would confider that proof of the overt act muft be given by two witnefles independent of any confeffion the prifoner might make.

Witiness. The prifoner appeared to me to be not at all difinclined : his manner was that of a man not having done any thing wrong, but perfectly collected, and poffeffed of his faculties. It was read to him afterwards, to which he accorded, and, thinking a part not fully enough explained, added the latter part.-I have now brought it to my recollection that there were three magiftrates in that cowinty, inftead of two, to whom we were peculiarly indebted for affiftance.

Cross examination. Were any others applied to befides thoie three?
Some were, but we fourd much difinclination to do the bufinefs, and therefore thought it quite unneceffary to apply farther.

JUDGE HENRY, again called.

He was alked his lituation, and the particulars of the oppofition being fuch as either to difable, or affright the magiftrate from theirduty.
He depofed that he was an affociate judge of the common pleas for the flate: He iffued a number of fubpereas about the 15 th of January to make fome enquiries refpecting the oppofition to the tax law : thefe were iffued at the inftance of Mr. Eyerly, one of the commifioners, as he and others could not proceed in the execution of their duty and particularly in Lehi townfhip. The witneffes generally appeared much afraid at opening themfelves: and he could fay that among the people, there were many much oppofed to the law. I agreed to meet a number of perfons at Trexler's, commonly known as Trexler's town : there captain Jarrett appeared with a part of his company of light horfe. Shortly after the arrival of Mr. Eyerly, Mr. Balliott and myielf, the people feemed to be walking about, and looking in at the window, and feemed to make game at us, and mouths: I oblerved Henry Shiffert in particular ;-they were monlly in uniform.

Attorney. Was it mufter day ?
No: I underfood it was the general converfation there that Jarrett meant to difiplay his confequence, and to intimidate.

Cross examination. Who did you hear this from, was it from the light horfe?

No : I believe it was from Mr. Trexier.
Attorney. Did the witneffes feem to be afraid?
Yes, one man in particular appeared to be in great terror: when he was called up to give his teftimony, he cried like a child, and begged for God's fake that we would not afl him, for that the people would ruin hiin when he returned home. Indeed all the witneffes were much agitated.
Did you or did you not difcover a general oppofition to the execution of this law?

Yes, IIdid.
Court. Was you not apprehenlive of danger ?
Vies I was from the threats which were given.

Do you inagine there were any mariftrates in the county that went fo far as you?

Yes, feveral of them.
Cross examination. How many witneffes did you take the cxamination of, at Trexler's?
I think eight or nine.
Did they do any thing to injure you except make mouths at you?
No, I fent for the captain, and requefted him to keep his men in order, for all I wanted was to examine witnefles. There was no farther than infult offered to us.-The captain effured me, he would do all that lay in his power.
Cross examination. How far is Trexler's from lower Milford in Burks ?
Ten or twelve miles.-From Lehi to lower Milford? Thirty.-From Hamilton to lower Milford? Thirty one.-From Bethlehem to lower Milford ? Sixteen. Upper Milford in Northampton, and lower Milford in Bucks join each other.

JACOB STERNHER, fworn.
Teftimony tranflated.
Attorney. Where do you live?
In Macungy.
Do you recollect any talk in your townhip of the affeffors coming there to meafure houfes ?
Yes, it was faid that they were to meafure them.
How long ago ?
They talked in the winter about it.
What was the talk in your neighbourhood refperting the conduct of Millar's town, when the affeflors came there to meafure the houfes ?

I was told that one man (inadmiffible)
What was the general talk ?
I never went into company, and therefore I cannot \{ay what it was.
When were the houtes meafured in Macungy ?
About three weeks ago they begun to meafure.
Do you know if any houfes were meafured before the army wert up into that country?

Not that I know of in that townhip.
Was you at Trexler's before judge Henry ?
Yes.
Did you hear any threats araint judre Henry, Mr. Eyesly and Mr. Balliott by the people there ?

No, I did not.
Were there any there, who faid they would come to harm, if they continued meaiurng the houfes?

No, I did not hear any.
Did you hear any of the people fay, while thofe gentlemen were there, tha: the athifiors lhould not cone to meafure their houfes?
ies, I heard fone people fay that they were not willing to have their houles meafured jet, and they wilhed it to be told to thole gentlemen.

Was you not delired by the people in Millar's town to inform the af-. fefiois that they thould not come into that townhip to make the affeffment, or he would be burt, or meet with an accident ?

Yes, a man told me to tell the affefior fo.

Did the perfon fay any thing about piffols and a fword?
Yes, he delired me to tell the alfeffior that there was a man there who had piftols and a fword.

Who did he fay the man was?
He did not mention who.
Mr. CHAPMAN and MTr. CHILDS were called again at the fuggeftion of Mr. Dallas to be afked how the mealurement of a houfe was taken?

It was always in every inflance given by the owner, we never meatured any hnufes. Size, length and breadth was told us, or the proprietor had ten days to fend it in: we left a note for thofe pecple that were nut at home.
Did the people who were at home in Milford me:tion the cimenfions of their houtes?

Yes.
Mr. Chapman proved the leter which was mentioned in his evidence to have been witten by him to the commiffioner.

Mr. Sitgreaves produced and read the warrants under which thofe perfons at Bettilhem were held: allo the commillion from the Prefident of the United States, appointing onic of the commiffoners under that aut. Mr. EyERLY again called.
Cross cuamination. How falda Fox live from lower Milford?
In i.wer Suchon towithip; about ten miles.
How were tie principal and aflitant affeffors appointed?
At the time I received the notice from the frift commifioner that was appointed in the commifion, the commiffoners were to meet at Readiug oa the zad of Otnber. Aiter a board were met, every commiffoner was defired to make a plan of his divifun, and to diade it into fuch a fuiuble numiter of affiment diffictis, as to have the law executed in a 3eatonable time: at the fane time each commifioncr was reçuefed to make out lits of perfors qualifed for the office of affefers in each divifione As foon as this was dene, as the law gives a power to the Secretary of the Treafury to reduce the number of affelfors if too large, the clerk made cut a lift, and fent it to the Siccretary of the Tecaliery; a lift was alfi, entered in the Cominifioners book. Some few alierations were made in fome diftricts aftervadi, bit at the time the board was fitiong. After this was done, the form of the warrant was agreed upon by tie $C$ cmmiffioners, and ordered to be printed. They wee then filled up, ard cvery warant ligned by all the Commifomers. A rude was then adep:ed to call all the afefios together in each difriat, and the Cummifioners was to meet and qualify them and give them intinuiors.
Mr. Dallas. I prefume a record was kept, where is it.
I do not know; it was teft in poifieflion of the clerk, he lives at Readiag.
Aier the proclanation was iflued by the Prefident, was there 1.0 a meeting of the Commaliones with the affefiurs in fome townflige?

I do not kinw.
Has there, to your knonledgre, been any refifance to the cpeationio of the law funce the iffuing of the proclamation?

I do not know of an --I was in Hiladelphia.
Artorsex. Was the country in a pacific flate, except where the army machech.
No.-After the Prefident had iflued his proclanation I wrote up to the prisicipal afeffor in Northampton county, and to Mr. Eallist, to recuct them to go on, and have their returns malle in a certain time, and to give notice to all the other affelfors fo to do. I received anfwer an from Mr. Ballintt that he had received information that it was impoffible to do the bufinels in the execution of the law.
Attorney. Did you cmiavour to get the bufinefs executed?
Yes.
Did you fucceed?
No.
Did you attribute it to the negleci of the affeffurs?
No.

To JUDGE PETERS.

Attorney. Did you not difover manifer figns of terror coming from the difricts where the amy had not maiched ?

Witness. les, in many inftances, fume very ftrong, it was even attempted to raife troops to oppofe the army if they went up. There were one or two inflances of teftimony given to me that troops wese endearoured to be raifed, and nothigg, I believe, but the rapidity of the progref's of the troops prevented its exccution. I did believe that unlefs the army had gone through the whole ccunary, there would have been the mult atrocious infances of violence.

Did not fome of the witneffes give their teftimony uader great reluctance, owing to lear ?

Ices, I ladi, in fome inftances, to flate the prosecion of the United States, and their determination to lay hold of perions who fhould threaten, in urder to ilimulite them: fome fa:d, after they had given their teflimony, that they were affaid to go home. I can really fay, that, in general, thicy were the moft unwilling witneffes I had ever examined. I got evidence that tome of them were forming ahiociations for actually oppofing the tronps. Onc man was even afraid becaufe I was in his loufe, afking for fome reficthment, as, he faid, he thould be fufpect; ed fur harbouring me; howerer, atier I had exprefled my own fecurity, he feemed fatisted.

Mr. Dallas save notice that, though they winhed to give as little trouble on the part of the defendant as jasfible, yet he flould produce two or three wituctes in onder to fiew that this indifonition, which was manifefled to prom: the alfelfuent, was oning to the mecramey thofe people were in, of the redl exiftuce of the law, aid that the prianer limfelf had declared that it was no liw, and that they had no idea of oppofing Congrefs by fuce of arms, but that they wified for time, in crier to afcer- "r. ain its real exifence, adad if the law was actually in firce, that they wiflch, agieeable to their former cuftom, to appoint afieffors from ther own wifective townihips: alfo we mean to fhow that Fies was perfectly accitcicent aiter the proclamation, and that Mitchich was entircly mifaken as th the expenfiuns fard to be ufed by Frics at the mecting at Conrad inarks: Howeres, as we win to hace time pre:ionfy to examine the mitate fi, we man to bring, we flall not be able to produce them at this fatre of the trial.

Mr. Rawis, then opened the conftational defmion of treafm, ds comititing of onl: two parts : " levging war againf the United States, ard aidurg the enemies of the United sitates." As it is only the finf of thefe feccies of treation the prifoner is chargca with, it is cnly neceffary to ai-certain what is meant by levying war againft the United States. Mr. Sitgreaves has flated that, levying war againf the United States conflfted, not only in a broad fenfe of rebellion openly manifefted, with an avowed intention of fubverting the governnent and conflitution of the country, but alfo with force of arms, or by numbers fufficient for that purpofe, to caufe an imprefiion of terror: thefe, either one, or all together, ufed to prevent the execution of the laws, or of any particular law of the United States from motives, not of a fecial but of a general nature-is treafon. This pofition I believe is perfectly correct, and has already received the fanction of a court of the United States, refpecting the infurrection in the weftern parts of Pemufylvania. See 2 Dallas 348 . Mitchel's cafeThis doctrine is laid down in terms flurt and concife, and is fuch as is founded on the particular authority of all the priters on Englifh law.
Page 355. Bradford-attorney. The defign of the meeting was avowedly to oppofe the execution of the excile law; to overawe the government; to involve others in the guilt of the infurrection; to prevent the puniflament of the delinquents, $& c$.
Patterfon (Juftice)-1 he firlt queltion to be confidered is, what was the general object of the infurrection ? If its object was to fupprefs the excife offices, and to prevent the execution of an act of Congrefs, by force and intimidation, the offence, in legal eftimation, is high treafon; it is an ulurpation of the authority of the government; it is high treafon by levying war. Taking the teltimony in a rational and connected point of view, this was the object. It was of a general nature, and of a national concern.

Let us attend, for a moment, to the evidence. With what view was the attack made on General Neville's houfe? Was it to gratify a fpirit of revenge againft him as a private citizen, as an individual? No:-as a private citizen he had been highly efteemed and beloved; it was only by becoming a public officer, that he became obnoxious, and it was on account of his holdug the excife office alone, that his houfe had been affailed, and his pertion endangered.-They were arrayed in a military manner; they affected the milita.s forms of negociation by a flag; they pretended no perfonal holtility on General Neville; but they infiffed on the furrender of his commillion. Can there be a doubt, then, that the object of the infurrection was of a general and publ $\mathbf{c}$ nature.

With relipect to the intention, there is not, unhappily, the flightef por. fibility of doubt : To fupprefs the office of excife, in the fourth Survey of this ftate ; and particularly, in the prefent inftance, to compel the refignation of Wells the excile officer, io as to render null and void, in effect, an ait of Congress, conftiuted the apparent, the avowed object of the infurrection. Combining theie facts and this deingn, the crime is bigb treason.

This you will perceive, gentlemen of the Jury, is not preventing the execution of a!! the laws, or all the autbority of the government, but of "an ait of Congrefs." It is an ufurpation of the authority of the govermient, and thus it is levying war, and is bigh treason. Taking it in this point of view, this was the very object of the infurgents at Northampton, and was of a public, of a general, and not of a private or fpecial nature. In the cale I referred to, the prifoner ated different from the prifoner at the Bar; he acted in a lubordinate flation; he does not appear to be a firt character in that treafonable enterprize.

Gentlemen, the law thus laid down by the court upon that occafion, was derived from the Englifh authorities to which I fhall now refer you. 4. Blackftone, p. 81. defines that branch of treafoin of which we are now treating-" Levying war againft the King (fubfitute here the U. States for King) is, pulling down all enclofures, meeting houfes, prifnns or brothels'-Although bawdy houfes are illegal, yet by any individuals not authorifed, taking the authority which alone is veled in the government, it is an ulurpation of the authority, and the act being of a general, and not of a fpecial nature, is treason. Lord Chief Juftice Hale, whofe name will ever be endeared by the piety, the humanity, and the found legal learning which characteriled him, has a chapter upon this fubject of levying war againf the King. I. Hales pleas page 105. He fays to march with colours flying, drums beating, &c. if on a matter of a public or general nature, is high treafon, but if on a private quarrel or for a private purpofe, it is not treafon. Treafon in levying war, by this definition, confifts of two forts. Firft, marching exprefsly, or directly againft the King's forces: fecondly, interpretatively, or obftructively; doing a thing of a general nature. Page 133. If to pull down a particular inclofure, it is only a riot, but if to pull down all inclofures, it is levying war againf the King, becaufe it is generally againft the King's laws.
Fofter, p. 211. Infurrections in order to throw down all inclofures; to alter the establisbed law or clange religion, to inhance the price of all labour or to open all prifons-all rifings in order to effect thefe innovations of a public and general concern by an armed force, are, in conftruction of law, bigb treason, within the claufe of levying war. Infurrections; likewife, for the reformation of real or imaginary evils of a public nature, and in wwhicb the insurgents bave no special interest,-rifings to effect thele ends by force and numbers, are, by conftruction of law, within the claufe of levying war.
I. Hawkins, Chap. xvii. Sect. xxiii. p. 37. is much to the fame effect. Douglafs, 570 . in the cafe of Lord G. Gordon. The cafe there on the part of the profecution was an attempt to force the repeal of an act of Parliament, and this was called high treafon, although the defendant was not convicted. Keyling p. 70. on the cafe of Meffenger; Appletree and others, and 75 , ibid.

It will probably be faid by the defendant's Council that this fhould be fimply conflidered as a refcuing prifoners from the cuftody of the Marlhal, and that is not treafon, and that a number of crimes of a lefs degree muft be committed in order to make it treafon, as Arfon, Buiglary, and Murder. But I would obferve, that when thefe crimes are committed, one or more of them, they are not component parts of treafon, but they lofe their qualities and their name in the abforbing crime-treason. So when general Nevil's houfe was burnt, it was faid only to amount to Arfon: to that it was anfivered by Judge Patterfon, were it not for the treafonable purpofe with which this was done, it would be fo, but the guilt rofe to treafon in the intention. Admitting it is a crime, and worthy of a punilhment, the queftion is, whether, or not, it muft be confidered as one of the means made ufe of to obtain the end in viers. 1. Hale $\mathrm{r}_{33}$. If a man break open prifon, except where a perfon is convicted for treafon, it was ruled to be ouly a great riot: if feveral were refcued thereby, it was a riot and refcue, except thofe perfons refcued were convised for treafori, and where it was without ary paricular visur to the perfons thamlelves, and where the prifoners were unknown, then the relcue becomes a part of the treafonable act, and that, with other fact:; conftitutes the perfon guilty of treaton: In 4 Blackfone you will find an anfwer to what Mr. Dallas faid this morning ought to be in favour of the prifoner : to wit, an ignorance of the exifence of the law.

Suppofe every man who would profefs himfelf ignorant of the exiftence of a law was exculpated from the oblervance of it, or from the confequences of breaking it, to what would that doctrine lead! It would be for the interelt of every man who wifhed to oppole a law, to kee; bimfelf under the flelter of this want of knowledge, in order that he might fin with impunity-without knowing it. This is a miftaken fact, and an error in point of law. I make thefe obfervations, not becaufe I fuppofe that the defeace will be ferionfly fet up, or that, did it exift, you would lee in the leaft guided by it, but under the impreilion that when you come to examine all the faits, you will difcover that it was not fo.

Unlefs thefe points which I have laid down are controverted, I hall not trouble you with more points of law, and hall leave the oblervations I am farther to make, to a later period of the cafe.

May it please your Honors :

GEMLEMEN OF THE GUR,

IT has become fo uncommon in the flate of Pennfylvania to be employed in a caule, upon the ifre of which the life of a fellow creature depends, that, I an confident, the court and juiy, as well as the council on both fides, are prearat to grive a folemn, candid and patient attention to the peefent invelfigation. It is, sentlemen, a queftion of Life or $D_{c} a t b$; and if what we have heard is trae, that the priloner is a hufband, and a father, it is a queftion whofe importance extends bejond his own life, to the exiftence and well-being of a miferable family. If I hould manifeft therefore, an extardenary fillcitude to fecure the attention of the jury, as long as the occatis thatl reciare, thefe confderations would, I think, furnith a fufficient excale : yet, permit me to add to my juftification another remark. It is not only the life of John Fries, and the well-being of his fanly, that are at take on this trial ; but, we all know, that the inprefions made on your minds, and communcated to the pabic by your verdice, may reach the lises and families of many more uahappy men now under midictments for a hminar crime. I mult confels, that I feel a citasel by the propest : for, it it appears to awful, fo interefing, as it cidendy de; the court and audicuce, how mult it affect wh wore the comen! for the porer, harged with the de elopement of every princtitand of wey for, that can tend to an acquital ? As it riates to the Come! for the pantion, the difitultics are comparively fonall. They hav had an exaunty amp to explore all the fats ; to calcu-norant of the man and of his connections. Till you were impannelled, we knew nothing of the evidence to fupport the profecution; and could; therefore, be little prepared to encounter and repel it. Befides, in all our enquiries for the means of defence, as well as in our exanination of the wituefles, we have been embarraffed by the foreign language in which the parties have fpoken. That fome of you, however, as well as the oppoite council underfand the German, has been a fource of confilation to us ; fur, it is your province to decide on the facts.

But thefe are not the only obitacles which we have to encounter. I am fure I fhall not be mifuodertood when I fay, that the profecution appears to be frongly marked with the authority and infuence of government.

It is, I grant, incumbent upon the government to exercife its powers' for the punifhment of crimes; but it is effential to a fair difcuffion of every acculationi, that the acts of the government hould not be entimated as proofs of the prifoncr's guit. Thus, though you find by the proclamation of the Prefident (which, doubtlefs, he thought, with a wife and upright intention, was required by the extraordinary circumftances of the times) that the difurbances in Northampton were deemed overt aces of treafon by his advifers; and though this denunciation was followed by the march of a confiderable army for the exprefs purpofe of fubduing and apprehending the traitors; you will recollect, that you are to decide whether trealon has been conmitted, from the evidence of the witnefles, and not from the opinions of the government. Again: great inconveniencies have been experienced by many meritorious citizens, who relinquilhed the purfuits of bufinefs, and the pleafures of domellic life, to affif in the fupprefion of the infurgents; but you will not allow the irritation and refentment proseeding from this fource, to transfer from your judgments to your pallions, the determination of the caufe. Far be it from me to contend that outrages have not been committed, which are difreputable to the fate or fociety at large, and to the character of Pennfylvania in particular ; or to endeavour to fhelter from the punifhment of the law, the infligators and perpetrators of fuch offences. Every citizen is interefted, and is bound to affift in detecting, profecuting, and punifling the offenders; but every citizen, let it be remembered, is fill more interefted, that even the greateft criminals floould only be punifhed in the manner and to the degree which the law prefcribes. However we may differ on fpeculative points of politics abroad, however we may be difpofed to approve, or to difapprove, the meafures of adminiftration, and however wa may controvert or affift, the conflitutionality, or the expediency, of particular laws, all party firit, all perfonal animofity, muft be abandoned when we are called upon to act as miniflers of juftice; or we flall, in the indulgence of a moment's vengeance, overthrow thode barriers which are our own fecurity, and the pledge of fafty to pofterity.

Whatever you may have thought, whatever you may have faid, whatever you may have heard, in other icenes, mult now be obliterated from your minds. The character of private citizens, with all the privileges of private opinion and feeling; is here exchanged for the character of public functionaries, with all the reftraints of law and juffice. Your opinious as private men, will only be regarded according to their intrinfic merit ; but your verdict as a jury will be forever obligatory, bearing all thọ authority of a precedent.

Though, then, a proclamation has iffued, an army haz marched, and pos pular refentment has been excited, we claim an unbiafled attention; and circumfcribing your view of the fubject to the evidence, we confidently expect a fortunate refult. What has happened in England upon a fimilar occafion, we think will happen here. The Britifh Privy Council announced a traitorous confiriacy to the Britifh Parlianent. The Britifh P'ariament declared that the party recognized and confirmed the charge of high treafon and thus the wlole weight of public atthority in that country, legriflative and executive, inflituted a profecution, which was, afterwards, conducted with the greatefl zeal and talents-with fuch zeal and talents as the prefent profecution has difplayed. What was the cvent? A jury (that ineftimable palladium) without fear, and without favour, examined and pronounced that no treafon had been committed. I allude to the recent cales of Horne Tooke and Hardy.

I fhall, I prefime, be excufed, if I istimate to you fome other difadrantages under which the prifoner's cafe labours; for, it is not merely neceflary to produce evidence, to explain, extenuate, or refute the charge; we muft guard your minds againft any previous bias, any latent pre-determination to coivict. The accufed gentleman, and his companions, you will recollect, are not upon their trial among perfons, with whom they have heen accuftomed to live. This is a difadvantage, which every candid man will acknowledge. They are to be tried, likewife, by a jury, felefted and retumned by the marfhal, the very officer who has been perfonally mfiulted, and whole appointment depends on the will and pleafure of the executive magintrate-that magilfrate by whom the ofienders have already been deferibed as traitors. I mean not to caft the leaft reflection upon the laws of Congrefs, mor upon the officers of the govermment; but to make a general remark on the defective ftate of our judicial inftitutions. The conduct of the marfhal has, indeed, been highly exemplary throughout the tranfaction; and when wihh fuch powers he returned fuch a jury as I have the honor to addrefs, he manifefs an impartiality and independence of character, that entitles him to the refipect and plaudits of his country. Nor is it liete that the prifoner's difadvantages terminate: but I hope, 1 believe, that never 'till this day was the Prel's employed in a bafe and fanguinary attempt to intimidate the jury and council from a faithtul execution of their duty in a capital cade! Since, however, the jury have been fummoned; nay, fince the court have been fitting upon this very trial, there have been the groffeft, the moft infidious practices in a public newfaper, to warp your fentimeits, and to deprive the unfortunate prifoner of the benefit of the beft talents, which the bar of Pennfylvania can afford. On the other hand, a gentleman, whote abilities we all refpect, and whofe long relidence in the offending crunties muft greatly facilitate the progrefs of the proiecution, is affociated, without cenfure, and certainly without being anfiverable, in the duties of the attorney of the diffrict. While our ignorance of characters, and circumftances per. plexes the defence; his accurate information and experience enable hinn to probe every witnefs to the quick, and furcibly to combine and inturweave all the incideats of the tranfaction. But his motives are pure: for, if he does arraign; if he does conviet ; if he does punilh; it is becaute his patriotifin and public fipirit enable hinn to foar far bevond the little aftectivns of a neighbourhood.

Gentemen, in this fituation we appear before you as advocates fon the priloner. I declare that as far as my mind is capable of being impreffed by a fenfe of daty, I feel a terror left any thing fhould be left undone, or untid, which is effential to the caufe : and, therefore, complicated as the difcuffion muft neceflarily be, accept, I pray you, my fentiments under the following heads.

Firft, I will endeavour to eftablifh fuch points of law, as feem to me to be applicable to the farts which have been given in evidence.

Secondly, I will confider the general fate of the difcontents, and how far the reffue at Bethlehem was connected with the previous difturbances.

Thirdy, I will take a review of the conduct of the prifoner in particu: lar.
I. With refpect to the crime of treafon, I hold the conftitutional att in my hand by which it is defined. The gentleman who opened this profecution, has very jufly faid, that the words of the definition were borrowed from a flatute very much admired in the Englifh code; but I do not think that he has very juttiy added, that, becaule the United States have borrowed the languare of the flatute, they bave, alfo, adopted all the inferences and expofitions of the Britifh courts. It appears, indeed, that Lord Hale (I. Vol. p. 132) thought, that even the Euglifh courts had carried their decifions on the fatute too far; and emphatically warns the judiges from proceeding farther in the dangerous doctrine of "conftructive treafons." Speaking of paft cafes, he fays " thofe refolutions being " made and fettled, we muft accauiefce in them, but, in my opinion, if new "cafes happen for the future, that have not an exprefs refolution in point, " nor are expre: ${ }^{\prime}$ ly within the words of 23 Ed. 3 . though they may feem " to have a parity of reaton, it is the fafeft way, and :nof agreeable to the " wifdom of the great aft of 23 Ed. 3 . firf to confult the parliament and " have their declaration, and to be sery wary in multiplying conffrustive " and interpretative treaton, for we know not where it will end." It fhould be premifed, that in that celebrated ftatute of 25 Ed. 3 . on which is founded our definition of trealon, there was a provifion made, that if the overt act charged, or the crime fuppofed to be committed, did not come, fyecifically, within the words of the ftatute, the judges fhould not pronounce it high treaton, but muft refer it to the parliament. Hale, the great and foood, applauds the provifion; and when he fays, that the courts have ${ }^{+}$gone far enough, does not the firength of his expreffion imply, that they had gone too far? --" Be very wary in multiplying conftructive treafons, for we know not where it will end." Now, it is faid, that becaule we have bruught the words "levging war" from the Englifh flatute, we, therefore, ad!pt atl the interpetatitions of the Englifh courts; but I deny the propofition, becaufe I thiuk it is dangerous as well to the policy of our comftitution as to rights of individuals. In the fame flatute of the 25 Ed. 3. there is another crime, called compafling the king's death; and levyins war has been confrued to be an overt ait of that fipecies of treafon. Hence the gendeman will find that there is fome conffifion in the Englifin books on the doctrine of levying war, confidering it fometimes as a fubltantive and independent of treafon, and at other times confidering it merely as evidence of a traitorous delign againt the life of the monarch. It is impofible to concrive, indeed, any thing more abfurd than conftruc:tive trealion, as it has been applied to compaling the death of the king:

Any man who fhould ufe a fingle expreffion, a loofe word, among friends, or enemies, that could be tortured, by the moft circuitous procefs, into any tiing like a wifh for the king's death, was termed a traitor. In Blackftone's Commentaries, it is mentioned, that an innkeeper, ludicroully declared that his fon was heir to the crown; meaning that he was heir to the tavern, which had the lign of a crown; yet, the exprefifion was confrued into treafon, and the man fiffered as a trator. $\mathrm{I}_{1}$ another inflance, the king killed a decr belonging to one of his poor fubjects, who upon the firft impulfe of his refentment, wifhed the deer, horns and all, in the king's belly ; and the man was alfo hanged as a traitor. So far will conftruction go, and, in fuch a manner may a man's life be endangered! If countructive trealons are admitted in this country, no man will be fafe: It may deftroy my life; it may deftroy your's.

In England this fpecies of treation is confidered in two lights; levying war againf the perfon of the monarch, and levying war againf his authority. I with you to know precifely upon what forting this diftinction prevails in England, becaufe I thall aik you prefently, what fpecies of treafon ought to be conliflered as adopted by the principles, as well as the terms of our confitution. Levying war againf the perfon of the monarch conlifts in any attempt to dethrone him; either with a view to clange the governme:at, or merely to fupplant the perfon who adminifers it. The ast is unequivoca:, and meets the common ferfe of every man. Put levging war againft his authority, is fo indefinite, that any thing and every thing may be made treafon; the intempe:arce of a mob, as well as the hoffiity of an army. Independent of all tecluical reafoning, then, let me afk you, upon the fuggellions of common fenfe, whether you perceive more in the recent occurrences than a gieat riot; a lawlefs difturbance of the public peace, a daring refcue? Was there in the mind of any man, till the denumciation contained in the proclamation of the Prefident, and the masch of the army, an idea that treafon had been commited? Tiil then, the guilt in obftruting the exccut in of the laws was not denominated treafon, nor was the punifhment expected, death!

In order, however, to examine this point of law more minutely, and to apply it to the facts, let me olferve that from the Euglifl books (whole authority, however, is not implicitly adnitted) two general propofitions are to be collected:
Firft, The intention maft be to leyy war.
Secondly, War mult be actually levycil against the goiernment.
When I fay, emphatically, that the intention muft be to levy war, I mean that the intention, free of all confructive matter, mult be to commit that defcription of crime, which the gentleman concerned for the profecution calls "levying war." Without that piecife intertion, however criminal the intention may be in other refpects, the offender cannot be guilty of treafon. A man, or a mol, may intend to commit a crime; a man may be armed, or a mob may be arrayed, for the purpole; and the utmoft force may be ufed to accomplifh it ; but it is no treafon, unlefs the intention was treatonably to levy war: though it may be arfon; or it may be riot, tc. If the avowed object is to fubvert the government; to drive Congrefs from its legillative function; to feize the Prelident, &c. and inftead of the eltablifhed order of things to introduce anarchy, or monarchy; the act would be plainly and umequivocally within the meaning of. levying war.

[ 93 ]

It is true, that the Englifh books go further ; and confider an attempt by force to obftruct the execution of all lazes, or to compel the repeal of a particular law, as a confructive tiealion within the deficription of levying war. But the obfruetion of a.l lawis is, in fact, an attempt to fubvert the government, and to compel the repeal of a law, is a very different thing from a temporary interference with its execution. Conceding therefore, as far as the Englifh authorities go, and as far furely, as the interefts of our govermment can require, there is no precedent of a conftructive treafon to warrant a convicion in the prefent cale; the oppofition was not diretted againtl all laws; nor was there any fore employed to compel a repeal of the obnoxious AAt. In Foster 211, as read by Mr. Rawle, you will find the reference is particularly made to the cafe of forcing the repeal of a law, or laws, &cc. and not a word about oppofition to the execution of a particular law. What, then were the origin and character of the late rifigg of the people ? Was it not an oppofition given to certain officers merely from a doubt of the exifitence of the law ; or till the people had afcertained whether other counties conformed to the affeffments, or till the inhabitants of townflups were indulged in appointing their own affeffors? Let me alk you, whether thefe characterifics are wilhin the fcope of the law of levying war? Remember what Hale fays, "D. not let a parity of reatoning allure you; he very wary that you do not add to the caialogue of contruative treations. Judge Blackithone too, has been quoted by Mr. Rawle (Vol 4. p. 81) where he fpeaks of treaton as an "attempt to reform religion, or the laws;" but I intreat your attention to the difination which the paffage itfelf is calculated to eftablifh. Every one karws that the term reform the laws, means ropeal the laws. The current of Legillative power is uniiorm. Thole who nade, can alone annull a law, and if a reformation is produced, it mult be by applyine to the legillature. If the application is made with force, or menaces, the Englifh writers declare, and we may fafely allow that it would be an act of levying war. But where is the analogy betwec: that cafe, and the cafe of refifing a fubodinate office, while executing his part of a particular law?

Now gentleme:, I challenge the profecuting council to fay, in what part of the evide.ce it has appeared, that thefe infurgents went further than to declare that the law did not pleale them ; that though they did not mean to compel Congreis to repeal it, they had fome doubts, and wifhed ts afcertain whether it exitted or not; to know whether the country in general had fubmited to it ; to know whether General Wafington was tiut diffatisfied with it, and toiee whether they could not get the affeffor appointed by themedves. Under thefe imprefions many irregularities occurred, but $I$ afk the adverfe comacil to point out if they have difcovered through the whole courfe of the bufinefs, any infurrection exifting, any traiturous defign, till the meeing at Bethehem; or whether till that moment the peopere of Nothameton c sull be faid to have been guiler of any crime?
We are told that the cale of the wefterniaffurgents in 1794, is in paint; and that the decifions upon the trials that then took place, are precedents on the prefent occafion; batt, with great deference, I declare that it feems impolible to bring cafes mos diffimilar into view, where violence has been committed in both. $\Lambda t$ this flage of the argument however, I

Thall only temark, that whatever may have been the language of the judge, who then prefided, I am fure the attorney of the diftria will be good enough to recollect, and candid enough to flate, that the oppofition, though in its origin, excited againf the excife law, was conducted witi the avowed puppole of fuppreffing all the excife offices, and compelling Congrefs to repeal the act. See 2 Dadlas Rep. 346 .
Let us for a moment, gentlemen, trace the motives of the people, by lonking at their conduct not at large, but in the lawlefs feene at Bethlelem. What did they do ? why they refcued the marthal's prifoners; but the moment they had effected the refcue, did they not difperfe? Their whole object then was confummated ; for, I muff prefume that they contemplated nothing farther, as I fee them attempt nothing more; and yet the time was very favourable to accomplifh a more extenfive defign, if it had ever been meditated. Men intending to compel, by every hoftile means, the repeal of a law, when they had in their hands the obnoxious agents of that law (Mr. Balliott, Mr. Eyerly, the marfhal and others) would hardly have let the moment pals without fome effort to triumph in their advantage. It was, indeed rumoured to be their intention to difpatch Mr. Eyeily; but where does it appear? Was be not compleatly in their power? Was he not conftantly in their view, though he incorrectly fays that he was conftantly out of their view? No: I repeat that the rioters having accomplified the refcue, difperfed; and will you, under fuch circumflances, in a cafe of life and death, determine that they came to conmit treafon? rejecting the plain fact, and adopting a confrustive inference? But if they proceeded no farther than I have flated, let us again look to the law of England, to defiue their crime, as diftinguifhed from treafon; and you will not ceale to bear in mind that you muft eftablifh the difinction.

Fofter Sect. 2. 210 "rilings to maintain a private claim of right, or to deftroy particular inclofures, or to break prifons, in order to releafe par. tambar perfons have not been hoiden to amount to lerying war within the flatute.

Upon this principle a rifing of the weavers in London, to defroy all en-gine-looms, maclines, &c. did not amount to levying of war-mor the judg: es coniflered it merely as a matter of private quarrel between men of the fame trade, about a particular engine, which thofe concerned in the riot thought detrimental to them."

Now, if we fhould be fortunate enough in the courfe of this bufinefs ta Show that, however criminal thefe people may be, yet, that taking it altogether, their intention was only to acquire infurmation, to fee what really was the flate of the country, and to procure townhip officers of their own appointment: if fo, th sugh they achieved the refc:e, we have done with the indictment for treafon ; the verdict mult conform to the evidence, and the judguent to the vediat. That the offence is an aggravated mifdeneanour, I will not deny; but it ought to be dift.aguihed from Treafon; and, I think, I thall foon evince that it never was within the view of our legilhature to confider it as the treafon contemplated by the conflitution. Give me leave, then, to afk (and I beg, gentemen, as this is a matter of conftruction, that you, who are to fix the intention, will give candid attention) whether the facts prove more than the breaking open a particular prifon, in order to refcue particular prifoners? Was not the matter of 2 partial, local nature, to make a particular, and not a general refcue; for which a particular prifon (if it may be fo defcribed) was violated ? And as to the previous oppofition what was it more than a partial obftruction of particular officers, to prevent in a particular towrifhip, the executicn of a particular lav. At Kline's the people faid to the ex-affefiors, "we will not let you come into our townflip 'till we know whether it is a law or not ; and if we muft be affeffed, it hall be by affeflors of our own townifhip." A gentleman in bebalf of the profecution has told us, that we are to receive as authority all the adjudications given to the term "levying war" in England: But if I can produce an authority higher than the Englifh parliaments, or the Englifh courts to prove that the prefent cafe ought not to be included in the defcription of treafon, I prefume he will not rejećt it becaufe it is American : I mean the authority of our own legiflature. Before, however, I turn to the act of Congrefs, I will attract your attention, geatlemen, by one propofition. If the legillature has explicitly claffed an offence under a particular head in the penal code, it is incenfiftent and abfurd to fearch for it, and punifh it under another head. Fo: inftance, if the legiflature has declared that refcuing prifoners, not under fentence of death, fhould be punifhable only with fine and imprifonment, it would be inconfiftent, by arguing, in a circle, that a refcue with force and numbers, is a combination for the pulpofe of preventing the execution of a law, and that fuch a combination is treafon, by levying war. 1 Hales pleas 151. Keyling 75. Fofter p. 200. Sect. 7.

If the offence to which I refer had been treafon, it would not have confifted with the wifdom of the legiflature to make it a mildemeanour: and on this ground it is, that I now alk you to reflect, which fpecies of levying war, the direct or the confructive, was wi:hin the view of the framers of our conflitution ? Did they not intend to exclude every defcription of confructive treafon ? But to proceed; if I can demonftrate, that every thing which has occurred of a criminal nature, from the commencement of the bufinefs, to its confummation, and regarding every previous difcontent as tending to the particular refcue at Bethlehem (which is the utmoft the oppofite council will pretend) has been confidered by the legillature of the United States, (whofe acts I repeat, are entitled to more refpect than all the Britill authorities, parliamentary or judicial) as high mildemeanours, and not as treafon ; then I am entitled to infift, that the conflitutional provifion does not embrace the cafe; or if it does embrace the cale that Congrefs, poffeffing the power to declare the punilhment of treafon, has limited the puniflhment of one fipecies of the offence at leaft, to fine and iuprifonment. Liften to the act, "If any perfon or perfons flatl knowingly and wiffully obftruct, refift or cppofe any officer of the United States in ferving, or attempting to ferve or execute any mefne, procefs, or warrant, or any rule or order of any of the courts of the United States, or any other legal or judicial writ or procefs whatfoever, or fhall affiult, beat or wound any officer, or other perfon duly authorized in ferving or executing any writ, rule, order, procefis or warrant aforefaid, every perfon fo knowingly and wilfully cffending in the premifes, flatl, on convictian thereof, be inprifoned not exceeding twelve months, and fined not excreliing three hundred dollars." Shall it be contended then, that obfintutug the marthal, who was employed in ferving procefs, confitutes the crime of treaton! If it did fo, there was no kind of neceffity for this law.
I. were an ingredient in the whole of the conduct, while obflructing the marflal in the fervice of his procefs, that is not embraced in this le:gillative defription? But let us take another ftep : the procefs is exccuted, the prifoners are apprehended, and actually in the cuflody of the marfhal ; and if it is treafon, under the Contitution, to take them out of his cuftody, would Congrefs be juntifiable in treating the offence fimply as a mildemeanour? And yet fuch abfurdity is imputed to the national legiflature, fince in the 23 d festion of the fame law, it is enacted, that "if any perfon, or perfons thall by force fet at liberty, or refcue any perfon, who fhall be found guitty of treaton, murder, or any other capital crime, or refcue any perfon convicted of any of the faid crimes, going to exccution, or during execurion, every perfon fo offending, and being convicted thereof, fhall fuffer death : and if any perfon thall, by force, fet. at liberty; or refcue any perion who before conviction flall fand commited for any of the capital offences afortaid ; or if any perfon or perfons flall by force fet at liberty, or refcue any perfon committed for, or convicted of any other offence againf the U,ited States, every perfon to offending flatl, oa conviction, be fined, not exceedings 500 dotlars, and imprifoned not exceeding one year." 'Thus, if a malefa:tor was actually under the gallows when refcued, the re'cue would have been but a capital offence; and the fame confequence is now a tempted, where the perfons refcued had been admitted to their parole, and were in cuftody of the officer, merely upon mefne procefs. It was a mater of honour that made them relign themfelves to his cuftody, and it was, in effect, a matter of form that he kept them in cuftody: for, we find, that as he took their parole to meet him at Bethlehem, fo at the moment of the refcue, he took their parole to meet him in Pbiladelphia, which they have all punitually done.
Here then you find, gentlemen, that we have two of the prominent features of this cale reduced to the form of politive law: t , wit, the obfruction of the marthal in the fervice of his procefs, and the refcue of prifoners from his cuftody. But there is another circumitance to which I would wifh, likewife, to lead jour atter:ion. You find there was an indipofition to allow a partucular clals of oticers to make the affeffenents; and the people urged, that if it was to be done, it fhould be done by their own affeltors. In this important puint, therefore, the particular officers, and not the how, form the objed of refe:atment and oppofition. On this difinstion, I have the reipected authority of Mr . Bradford, the late attorney general of the Uniced States, for afferting dhat the offence was rict, not trealon. In hin argument in the United Sates $\varepsilon$. Mitchel ( 2 Dallaz Rep. 354.) he fates that "an ojpolition was lavely made to the appointment "of a particular judge, in Minlin conuty, and hewas forcibly driven from "the bcacil. But the offence was prsfecteed merely as a riot, upon this "principhe of defcrimination, that the detiga was not to prevent the go" verour from appoisti,s any jacio, but ozily to difilace an unpopular "indivilual." So eren if the urpppular aidifurs, inttead of beag forewarned not th enter the townhip, had been furcibly expelled from it, the chence would not lave been tication, but root.

I an arrised, howeror, $t$ the lath and coiclufive evidence of the fenle of Cuagelis upan this liojuct: from which it will be proved that the tame cautious, and in refige on wimment, the fane benevolent, legiflature, jad contidered all that the imgenuity of auy genteman caa fuggeft as criminal in the lawlefs career of the rioters, and defining the offence to be a mifdemeanor, excludes the idea of its being a treafon, Let us turn to the act commonly cailed the fedition act. Congrefs have there declared; that fine and imprifonment flould be the only punifhments for the offence which appears on the evidence to have been committed by the prifoner. lafk you, gentleriten, to reflect one moment upon the teftimony that you have heard upon this trial, while I anaiyfe the firf tection of the law: Has John Fies been guilty of a combination and confpiracy to obiruct the execution of the laws? In this act, his punifhment is prefribed. Imprifonment and fine. Did he intimidate a pablic officer? Here is the paniflment. Is there in the whole tranfaction any councilling, or advifing, or any efforts towards producing an infurrection, it is pumithable by this law. The lave contains thefe defriptions of offence: Firf, coinbination with intent to oppofe any mealiures of government, or to impede the operation of the laws of the United States. This offence, notwithtianding its generality, is ouly puniflable with fine and imprifounent. Secondly; an intimidation of perfons, who are applied to for the purpofe of executing a law, fo as to prevent their accepting the office, or having accepted it, to deter them from difcharging the duties annexed to it. This is the offence thai will be urged upon you : all the difurbances of Northamptom county; all the tittle tattle and alarms of commiflioners and affeffurs, will be arrayed againt the unfortunate prifoner to affee his life : and the aggregate will be $\sqrt{\text { fielled into the fize, and depicted in all the malignity of }}$ treafon, though the law fays it is nothing more than a mifdemeanour. "Yes," you will hear it exclaimed, "Fries is the leader; he is the very life of the miob : it was he who advifed, he who addrefen, be who alarmed, he who intimidated, he who refcued!" Did he fo? Then this law will punifh him for a high mifdemeanour ; but I can difcover no law to puniflt him for treafon. I ain feufible that if I err in my opinion, thofe who profecute will be able to difcriminate, between the cafe proved by the evidence, and the cafe defined in the fedition law. I have not the ingenuity to perceive it; and I hope you will only give that weight to the refifective arguments which they refpecively merit. Nay, I am perfuaded, that the humanity of the profecuting council, will induce them to abflain from any harfh expofition of the principle, as well as from any frained application of the evidence, involved in the controverfy. The law provides for combinations formed for all thefe purpofes, whether they have been carried into effect or not, the fiuple punifhments of fine and imprifonment. Simple do I call it ! refpecting this man, do we not know how exemplary it may be rendered. Suppole the judge was to impofe a fine of 5000 dollars, can 5000 dollars come from the purfe of John Fries? And if it cannot come from his purfe, then the power of remifion is in the chief magiftrate alone ; and unlefs he thinks that the public will fuftain no in: jury from the convict's liberation, his fentence of five years may be prow tracted to an imprifonment for life, and the total deprivation of the means by which his family can be refcued from wretchednefs and ruin. It is not threfore, a fimple punifhment. But, permit me to repeat, that every: defiription that can be given of the difturbances in the northern countios; is to be found in the law I have referred to ; and if the legiflature, which mult be fuppofed to be as wife, as guarded, and as weil-informed, as courts; or juries, in regulating the interells of the community, lias thoughe propeit trus to defcribe the crime, and prefcribe the punifiment, fhall we piefume to be more wife, and affume a power to be more penal? If the legiflature was contented to clafs thefe a ations with middemeanours, fhall the defirnation be expunged by this court, or abbitrarily transferred to the catalogue of conftructive treafons? Shall a jury fitting here ;--fhall a judge fisting there;-Lleclare that though the oftence is unequivocally pointed out by law, yet in their ideas of diftributive jufice, the penalty ought to be eallanced, and the man ought to be hanged! In every authoritative book, in regard to criminal cales, the mof liberal interperations are given to laws which mitigate punifhments. Then let us fuppofe that the leginature when the fedition law was pafied, contemplated the crime of trealio: without a view to the diffinction of direat and confructive treafon. The cianc is deimed by the conllitution, but the puniflment is not; and, therefore, at ealy alt of Congrefs, agreeably to the pover vefed in that body, atlixed the punifhment of death : but, it will not be denied, that Congrefs might at that time have inflited only the punifhment of fine and inuprifonme:t, as is the cale in the penal code of Pennfylvania. 1f, therefore, Congrefs has the power to modify the pumilhment and if we difcover in the Sedition att a full defription of treafon, whether direct or conflructive, ought we not to conlider it, upon the liberal principle of expounding penal ftatutes, as an intended mitigation of the punifhment, and a virtual repeal of the pre-exifting fanctions? If there is any inconfiftency in the two laws, fo that they cannot fand together, the former muff be prefumed to be amulled by the latter, and the greater punifhment is fuperfeded by the lefs, becaufe eniated fubfequent to it. The word intimidate, ufed in the Sedition act, is of extenfive meaning; it is not a mere feeling which would arife from faying you will fuffer among your fellow citizens; it is a feeling which operates upon the mind foom an apprehenfion of perfonal danger, and may be the effect of every feecies of force or menare. I Hale's pleas 3 and 6 Bacon 513. Thefe authoritics flow what arraying in arms is, with a view to commit a crime ; but prove that if the intencion is not treafonable, it is not treaion, however violent the aft might be, and whatever may be the military array of the actors; and the iarimidation to which the law applies, embraces every defciption of fo:ce that can poflibly be contemplated, in onder to accompl.fin the meditated purpofe;-the obftruction of procels, -the refcue of prifoners, the furrender of office;-or the refitance of a law. Fofter 219 Sect. 1no "Attacking the king's forces in oppolition to his authority upon a march, or at quarters, is levying war againt the hing. But if upon a fudden quarrel, from fome affront given or taken, the noishbourhood rife and drive the ferces out of their quarters, that would be a great mifdemeancur, and if death fhould enfue, it may be felony in the aflailants, but it will not be treation, becaule there was no intention againf the King's perfon or government."
x Hale's pheas 146 . "If any of the King's troops be killed, it is felony." Ai open reliftance to the juttices of Oyer and Terminer in the cointy of Surry was felony. Here a fudden attack upon the King's troops on their march, though this muft be confidered as a direct attack upon the governnent, yet, if any quarrel arife between them and the people, it is no treatin. So, in the prefent inflance, all the object of thefe people was to obtain a little time to procure information: To that we attribute their conduct toward Rodrick Childs and cther officers : it arofe from the innpulle of the moment, and though directed againt public officers, ought not to be denominated levjing war againft the government. The whole purpofe and extent of e:ery violent word or gefture, terminated in the intimidation of thofe officers. Do we hear a variety of men whifpering to Eyerly he was in danger of his life ? Look at the fact: he goes the rounds with the marhal, to ferve the procefs againf the very men, who are alleged to have pronounced the threat, yet no danger attends him : he appears repeatedly at the windows at Bethlehem" amidt the tumult, yet no outrage is offered : the active leaders of the mol level guns at him, yet not a trigger is drawn ! It was in hhort, a mere fytem of int:nidation, withut a defign to ufe force, much lels to commit treafon. Nay, I will pledge myfelf in faying that there was great art ufed'on the part of the prifoner to accommodate the matter with the officers in every ftage of the tranfaction, and to prevent perfonal injary or any kind of violence. The cale of the judgres of Oyer and Terminer, referred to in Hale, is furcly as frong as the prefent. Thofe judres wacie as much authorifed then, as the affeffors are now; and the non-reception, or acknowledgment of both, as public functionaries was the offence.

The acts committed darin's this feene of tumult, ought to be punifhed, and I hope will be punifhed; but as acts of riot and fedition, nọ: as acts of treafon.

I am fenfible that it is poffible to draw diftinctions, to refine upon the meaning, and pervert the language of the act : but on principles of litumanity, I am confident the gentlemen oppofed to us will abflain from a mere exercile of ingenuity and eloquence, while we, who contend in favor of life, have a claim to every indulgence ; a right to the benefit of every Ihade of difcrimination.

It has beea laid down by the oppofite council, that there muft be generality of object, in order to conftitute the crime of treafon. If an infurrection takes place, by which it is defggned to oppofe all the laws, it needs uo reafoning to convince any man that a fubverlion of the government is intended, and that this is treafon: But this I contend, is the only fpecies of trealon which ought to be recognized under a republican form of governmeat, and to which alone the language of our confitution can be fairly applied. I am jultifed in the pofition, becaule the legiflature has afferted it. If the conflitutional lancuage may be fatisfied in that manner, the diverfity introduced by the legiflature ought at leaft to be judicially refpected; fo that when the legiflature having provided the puniflment of death for levying war, provides a dlifferent punifhment for offences, which according to the Euglifh books would be conitrued into that very fpecies of treafon, we are bound to f!y that the Englifl conftructions are fallacinus and that taking adyantase of Lord Hale's advice, the framers of our conttitution have not only rejefed the pait decilions (by which they were never bound as the Enolih judges are) but bave guarded againt the accumulation of interpretatice tredon. When, therefore, I lay that to cppole all laws, and to relift all the authority of the government, is a palpable levying of war, which requires no technical aid to defiee or explain, I go as far as the terms cif the conftitution neceffarily demand; and I think we are not authrifed to go farther. I think I am right, alfo, when I fay, that the legillature has dintinguifed the offence committed b- the prifoner, from treafoi, and provided a diferont punifhment for it:

Recurring to the weftern trials, let me repeat that the direct, the avow, ed object of the infurrection of 1794, was to fupprefs all excife offices, and to compel a repeal of the excife lav ; but can it be pretended that on that occafion, or on any occalion, a verbal menace to an officer, the refcue of a prifioner, or a temporary refiftaice to the execution of a law, arifing from a doubt of its exiftence, was declared to be treafon? Where hhall we fopgentemen, if fuch confructive treations are allowed ? It is impoffible for human genius, or human ftudy to provide a barrier againf the confequences. The framers of our conntitution, the legillature of the union, one would imagine had taken every practicable precaution againft the admiffion of conftructive treafnns; but if we are to adopt the expofitions, and the principles of expofition, of the Englifh courts, the wildom of our own country has been exercifed in vain. If a forcible oppofition to the partial execution of a fingle law, by a particular fet of officers, is treation as the gentlemen allege, with a parity of realon, it may be pronounced, that a non-compliance with any lawful reouifition of an authorifed officer, conflitutes the fame crime. Open that door, and the mifchief will be carried much farther, will become more daugerous to civil liberty, and perfonal fafety, than any thing which, the metaphyfical difquifitions on the crime of compaffing the King's death, have generated in England. If any act that will interfere with carrying the laws and meafures of government into effect, is treafon, what a privileged order our public officers inftantaneoufly become, what an enviable fecurity they attain ! Upon the whole difcuffion of this point of lav, then, I conclude, that on the legitimate definition of levying war as applied to our form of government; and on the authority of the fmerican leginature, no treafon has been committed. There was no force employed againf the government; 110 general object to overthrow the confitution and laws; no direct attempt, by arms or intimidation, to compel Congrefs to repeal the obnoxious act : but the whole was a great and unjuffifiable riot-feditious in its orizin ; daring in its progret's ; and iniquitous in its effects.

I proceed to the confideration of another point of law, and enquire that fuppofing this cafe to be trealon, how is it to be proved? The firft clear rule is, that the overt act mult le proved in the county in which it is faid to have been committed, as on the prefent indictment in the count: of Northampton. 4 Hawkins ch. 46. fect. 18.4:5, 6. p. 454. It was mentioned by Mr. Sitgreaves, that the fifecife overt att, with which Fries is charged, was refcuing the prifoners at Bctiadicm; but this dees not appear on the face of the indictment. If, however, that act was treafur, then not only the act, but the traitorous ineention, muft be proved in the proper county, as the intention and the acl, are both effential to the crime. Now, for a moment, overlook the general narrative of difcontents and difturbances, difmifs from your minds all the previous, and all the fubfequent traniactions, and confining your ideas precifely to the affair at Bethlehem, pronounce whether there appearcd at that time and place any thing more than a defign to refcue the priforiers? It is, I afiert, my right to call for full proof of guilt, where the indictment flates that the guilt was incurred. At Bethlehem, then, from the conmenicemenit to the clofe of the tumult, who can trace an act of. levying war againft the United States? The truth is, that before John Fries came on the borders of Northampton county, the military array, of which you will bear a great

Leal by and by, had taken place; and the people had got to the bridge of Betllehem. But there is no evidence that any of the active men in oppofing the affeffors, were prefent at the bridge, at the time the refcue was contemplated; and from the firt convening at Schwartz's 'till the noment of their taking the prifoners, what were the views of the party, as declared to Meffrs. Heary, Balliott, and Eyerly? Why, that they came there fimply to relcue the prifoners. The fincerity of the declaration is corroborated by the powerful confideration, that if there was a defign to aminilate the laws, or to perfecute and injure the officers, the opportunity as I before obferved, could never be more favourable to enfure fuccels. Such facts feeak fronger than the tloongeft language: And is it not conclufive, that a refcue only was in view, when we hear, that in lefs than ten minutes after the furrender of the prifoners, the whole multitude difperfed, leaving the commiffioners, afeffors, juftices and marfhal uainjured and unannoyed upon the fpot? There is one incident, however, which, perhaps you may notice: one of the two perions who were detained at Bethlehem in the morning, on being alked how he came there, faid that he underfiood there was to be a meeting about thofe laws, and that he came to fee what would be done about them; but with this fingle exception, it is abfervable that not a word was faid at Bethehem refpecting the exiftence, execution, obfruction or repeal of any unpopular act; not a word efcaped but in relation to the refcue of the prifoners. In that refuye, the profecuting council fay they difcover the generality of object, which even the Englith doctripe calls for in the definition of treafon by 2 confructive levying war; and infift that the particularity of object, which would extcmuate and reduce the crime, is not to be found. Is it fo contended, becaule the demand of furrender, was not founded on a tie of confan:guinity? becaule an uncle, a brother, a father, a fon, were not imprifoned? This, furely, is not a legal idea of particularity. But all the lavir regards is to be found in the pecententafe. The party affembled with a view to releafe a particular fet of priloners, and not pritoners generally. Shankweiler was one who was there; three or four came with liin to lee that he fhould not be uled ill, and to offer bail for him. What was their language at the bridge? "They have taken our neigbburs; but if they have done wrong, they ought to be tried in their own county." That they thoutl be tranfported to Pliladelphia was the great objection-was the motive to the reflue : that they have been tranfported to Philadelphia, is a great inconvenience, is the principal difficulty in the defence.
Thus, then, in point of proof the profecution is defective: it is not merely an act of violence, but a traitorous intention that muf be flown at the place where the violence was committed. No fuch intention has appeared in evidence; while on the contrary we have pointed you to the parts of the evidence which prove that the people did every thing that they intended to do, and the monent they obtained their object, difperifed. With this view of the fubject, why does the government profecute for a rapital offence? If this prifoier is acquitted on the prefent indiAment, there is no probability of his efcaping with impunity: though his life may ve fpared; there is no doubt but the attorney of the dillice, will prefent a hill againf him under the act to which I have fo repeatedly referred.
On the principle of the law tliat I have flated, 'till the overt aft is sompleatly preved in Northampton, the intention as well as the deed, I take it you cannot go to another county for evidence, by proving there an independant and fubftantive act of treafon. It is immaterial to Fries, as it refpects this charge, what he did in the county of Bucks. He met at Kline's: and though I will deny the impropriety of his conduct at that meeting, no lawyer will affert that it amounted to treafon. He did not meet at Mitchel's ; but wherever he did attend, we cannot perceive any thing in his conduct, but a vague diflike of the land tax, and a fteady regard for the fafety of the affeffors. It is immaterial what he did, and what he faid, in the county of Busks: the offence muft be proved in all its parts in the county of Nortbampton.

And here, gentlemen, I am naturally led to guard you againft another inftrument in the fyftem of fate profecutions, called accumulative treafon, as dangerous and as unjuft an inftrument as conftuctive treafen, of which I have already fooken. Accumulative treafon, is, the artful combination of a number of circumlances, which in theit original, uncomected fituation were unimportant, but being thus combined become gigantic, and frightful to the eye. Mere indiferetions committed at different times, in different places, and under various impulles, collected into a malts, and exhibited at a moment, may be made to aifume the complexion of the moft odious crimes. None of the acts committed ont of Northampton ought to be brought into the account againf the prifoner, till, at leaft, the act of treafon has been proved, legally proved, to have been committed there. For thofe extraneous agts, if they do not amount to fubftantive acts of treafon, indictable where they were committed, he may be rendered refponfible under the fediion law, or under the general lav againt rioters. If his actions in another county ought not to be taken into view, the reafon is ftronger for excluding his words. Words fpoken may be an high mifdemeanour, but can never amount to treafon. 4 Black Com. 259. and. yet it is attempted to prove the prefent charge by the aid of loofe, equivocal, and ambiguous converfations. Witi refpect to fuch evidence, arifing under circumitances chat are not clearly fated, communicated without regard to the order and connection of facts, and depending on the memory of perfons argitated by terror, or by refentment, can it be neceffary to caution an upright and enlightened jury? Take them, if you will, the language of the la:s declares that they cannot conflitute treafon; but the language of humanity :nftructs you intally to difregard them.

Let me advert to another circumitance with refpect to the evidence. It is not neceffary laborioufly to diftinguith what is hearfay evidence and what is not: and I admit that the teltimony, which applies to a defcription of the general fate of the country, is not to be difregarded, becaufe it is of the nature of hearfay. Upon tive detail, however, of fpecific facts, the rule is flrict and bencticial. Whatever was heard from a fecond perfon, when that perfon might himfelf have leen brought as a witnefs; or whatever has paffed in refatiun to the pifoner, at a tume when he was abfent ; the law will not allow to be the loundation of a verdict upon the prefent trial. Included in this defcription is ceely piece of information, all the tittle tattle, that paffed between the fubordinate and principal afferfurs or commiffioners. Again : the affeffors told the commiffioners that the law could not be executed; but this is matter of opinion, which mult be founded on facts; and you mult take the facts, not the opinion, as your guide. Nor can a correfpondence official or unoficial, between prib-

Iit officers, be eftinnated as evidence on the trial of a third perfon. If it can be eftimated as evidence, then it will be always in the power of the officers of government, to fabricate and produce evidence that will inevitably convict an obnoxious individual. God forbid that ever this fhould be the cafe here ; but the temptations to an abufe of power are not wanting. Without meaning a reflection upon Mr. Eyerly, it cannot be overlooked, that he, who was the commifioner for executisg the unpopular law, had been recently an unfuccefstul candidate for Congrefs; and if a bafe motive could a\{tuate him, do we not perceive his opportunity, to avenge the defeat upon the active opponents of his election ? Official reports are neceflary to maintain the connection between officers of different grades;--the facts itated in them are binding upon the reporters, and the reports are themfelves fufficient evidence to be acted upon by the oficers to whom they are made : but was it ever tolerated, was it ever conceived, that an official fatement of facts fhould be conclufive in any cafe, even in a cafe of property, affecting the rights of a private citizen, in a court of juftice. The facts depend upon books and vouchers, conflituting an official record, and the books and vouchers, or authenticated copies, or exemplifications, can alone be admitted as legal evidence upon a trial at law.

There remains another point of law, to be introduced to the notice of the court and jury. I take it for granted, that no man can be faid to oppofe a law, unlefs the law exifts ; no man can oppofe a meafure of government, unlefs his acquiefcence is lawfully required. The judges will not view my polition in the miftaken light which Mr. Attorney did, that the commiffion of every officer from the affefior to the Prefident mult be produced, before any act in execution of the land tax law could be perf,rmed: No, Sir; I contend not for fo extravagant a doctrine : but I affert, that every man who refifts a public officer de facto, and in confequence of the refiftance is indicted, has a legal, fettled right to demand upon his trial, pronf of the authority of the officer. In the firft inflance, the party who refifts, does it at his peril ;-but if the perfon claiming to act as an officer, had no warrant, or commiffion, the refiftance was junfifable, and the defendant mult be acquitted. Let us apply this principle. The law being enacted by congrefs, it is an inconteftable, though fometimes harf rule, that ignorance, fhall be no excufe for difobeying it : but fuppofe that a man, calling himfelf an affeflor flowld come into my houfe, and infift on going from room to room to take the ratcs, without thewing me his warrant; and that in confequence of his refufal I thould turn him out, and he fhould profecute me; -what is the refiutt? If he was $d e$ jure an officer, I am liable to the penalty of the act; bat if he was not, then I am not only innocent, but entitled to an action of trefpafs againft him fur his intrufiva.

We have, with.this view of the cafe, repeatedly called for proof of the appointments of the affelfors, in conformity to the act of Congrefs. Such appointments could ouly be legally made by a majority of the board of comnimifioners for the divilion, at a regular meeting. Now, as the evidence proves, that one of the affeffiors was not fo appointed; and that bundles of blank warrants were left in the hands of each commifioner, to be filled $u_{\text {p }}$ with any names he pleafed; which taik in one inftance a commiffioner affigued to an affeflor ; fufticient is fhewn to juftify our exacting on a oupital trial, the bef evidence of regular appoiatinents, that the cale will admit : the beft, the only evidence, is the recort of the commifioners; which the lay directs to be kept by the clerk of the board. There can indeed, be no room to juffify the transfer of the difcretion and authority. velted in the commiffioners by Congrefs: it is not like the common cafe of blank certificates, to authenticate, minifferially, the figiature of a magiitrate, notary, \&c. which, I as a public officer have often filled up on behalf of the Governor : but it is the cafe of a difcretion, arifing from the judgment, information, and integrity of the party, who is confidentia lly appointed to exercife it ;-fuch a difcretion as is vefted in the Governor to appoint Judges, of which he could not have transferred to me, in the thape of blank commiffions, without, I believe, expofing both of us to the jeopardy of impeachuent.
2. Having thus delivered my fentiments upon the prints of laws, that arife on the evidence, I fhall now enter upon the confideration of the fecond propofition,-"" the general fate of the difcontents in the northern "counties; and how far the relcue at Bethlehem was connected with " the previous difturbances."
And bere I find, gentemen, that the fource, from which proceeds much if not all, of our political good, difcharges, likewife, much, if not all of our political evil: I mean the bafinefs of elections. You will recollect the teflimony of Mr, Horfefield.
That gentleman, when he wifhed to give you a defription of the origin of all the mifchief that we deprecate, pointed his finger emphatically, at the election of 1798 . Now, I pray that I may not be mifunderfood in the progrefs I fhall make through the feene which is thusdiclofed; let it not be luppofed, that I am depraved enough to jufify the mifconduct that has been exlibited ; becaufe I am frim enough to contend, that it did not proceed from motives dirceted to Trealon, nor lead to confequences that amount to Treafon. At the eve of our election, it is natural for the citizens of a free country, tn canvals what has been done by the public agents ; to applaud the good, and reprobate the bad : and in doing this they exercife a right ; nay, they perform a duty. No intelligible and candid man will fay that the conflitution of a reprefentative republic can be preferved in a vigorous and licalthy flate, unlefs the people, from whom it denies its vital principle, are vigilant and virtuous in the exercile of the ele tive franchife. For this purpofe they retain the right of opinion; and though they may ufe it upon miftaken, or erroneous grounds, if they ufe it fairly and peaceably, there is no power to controul or obftruct them.

I afk, then, what were the ofenfible caufes of difcontent? They will be delineated by the eppofite council as fpectres of the mof vifionary, yet mint horrible afpect : but notwithftanding any fincere abhorrence of the maner in which the difcontent has been manifefted, 1 cannot admit that it:- caules did not aford a legal ground for exercifing the right of opinio:1. For infance, the alien and Sedition laws. They are a novelty in this country, and their novelty might alone attratt the popular attevticn anct difpleadure. But were the inhabitants of the northern countics of Pernfylvania the onl; dicatisfed citizens? Perufe the debates, examine the files of Cingrefs, and you will fiud the moft pointed declarations of the public opinim, the moft unequivocal marks of diflatisfacion, throughout the United States. Exerciling the right of opinion, the people difapproved the laws, and the lav makers. Exercifing the right of Elec. tion they endeavoured to promote the fuccefs of thofe candidates, whio would regularly procure 2 repeal of the laws. Again : the flamp act was ftrongly objected to; and produced the nick name of "Stanplers," which was applied generally to the friends of governiment. Now, in my opinion; there cannot be a more convenient mode of taxation than an impofition on flamps; but that was not the opinion of the people of Northampton and Bucks. They had imbibed a prejudice againft a flamp act in the year 1775, and not confidering properly the ground of American oppofition to the tyranny of taxation without reprefentation, they confounded the name with the principle of the law. I repeat that I do not agree with them; but I contend that they had a right to fpeak freely on the fubject.

Again. The houfe tax was objected to ; not from the real, but from the imaginary burdens which it impofed; for if it had been intended to devife a tax for the relief of the poor, at the coft of the rich, for the benefit of the country at the expence of the city, there could not, I think, be a more ingenious plan than the prefent law exhibits. The oppofition muft evidently; therefore, have arifen from mifconception, or mifinformation. But if their opinion of the law was fincere; however erroneous, it is entitled to indulgence. The fallibility of the human underflaading, and the frailty of our paffions, muft be refpected in every wife and bevevolent fyltem of politics, or law. A man who honefly acts under a falle impreffion of facts, may be pitied as a weak man, but he ought not to be punifhed as a wicked one. Then, the rioters were under an éviderit delufion, as to the principle of the land tax, the purity of the government, and the compenfation of public officers. They had not the ordinary accefs to information, frice our laws are publifhed in Englifh, and moft of them only underftood German : and this being a queftion of property, they acted upon the firt blind impulfe of their avarice, proving the truth of Mr. Horiefield's obferiation, "that the Germans are fond of their money, and do not like to part with it." But fill there is a criterion which in applying a rule of law ought always to be regarded :-I mean the moral claracter, and mental attainments, of the men who are ar: raigned. If a difcontent exifts, we cannot fairly expect the fame mode of exprefling it, from ithiterate, uncultivated men, the fcattered inhabitants of a remote diffrict, that we may reafonably exact from men of education and manners, formed by the luxury and refinements of a metropolis : Thefe will take care, if they do exprefs their difcontents, to aroid perfonal indignity, and legal embarraffments; while thofe, without fkill to afcertain the limits of the law; as without delicacy to refpect the inviolability of the perfon, rarely act without being riotous, or complain without being abufive. Plain men, then, have but plain ways to manifent what they feel; and they ought not to be tried and condenined by a more perfect, and generally, a more artificial fandard. A diflurbance fimilar to the one under confideration is not uncominion in England; but the government, inftead of entering profecutions againft the difcontented, for treafon, has fometimes thought it proper to acquiefce in the withes of the people. We all remember the popular influence in depriving Lord North of the reins of goverument. The attempt of a minilter (Mr. Pitt) to involve that nation in a war with Ruffia, was a very unpopular meafure ; murmurs and complaints reverberated through the kingdom, and, finally, he was obliged to abandon bis project. The fhop tax was Sanitioned by all the braiches of the Parliamenit ; but it generated cld finimurs to loud and fo acrimerious, riots fo mumerous and fo outrageone, refifiance to lawful authority fo daring and fo injuricus, that the government itfelf might jufty be faid to be affailed; and the act of parliament to be repealed by foree ead intimilation; yet, not a lingle indictment for high treaion was projected. Ifere it is that I think rifings of the people, like the prefent fhould be viewed with the determination to punifh, - account of delingusacy, Ex:, alfo; with the dilip pition to mitigate on account of prejudice, or ignorance, In a country where parcy fipirit beats high, there thould be peculiar caution on the fubject: For, even ia the prefent cafe, has not the joy tefitioed by tie triumplant majority at the late election, been clated with the firmptoms of popular difcontent and hoftlity to the goverminent? Nor will it be demied that thére acually did arife in the minds of the people a ferious do.bt, whether the law was in exiltence or not; and although, I repeat, that ignorance is not a legal exculfe, yet you mulf take into view the fate of information, before you can afcertain the degree of guih:. Under this igoorance, in this ftate of do::bt, can the refufal to pernitt the affeffors to enter a particular townShis, be cunfrued into a fixed and deliberate intention of levsing war againft the governnent? Though the law lad been enacted, we find that tixe fubject of the law had been brought anew before Congrefs, and pecitions were fent in abundaice praying for a repeal. Thefe difontented people nigith have fuppoted that a repeal was effetted, or intended; though we, who were at the leat of governuent, knew the object of the revifion was merely to amend, and not to refcind the law. At the meeting at Kline's (actiag, probably, under the miftake that I have fugroefted) there iras an exprefs declaratim, that the people did not think the law was in force at that time: And here let me remark, that the prifoner, who is called the great parent of the difcontents, was not preient at Klinc's, which appears to have been the frott nep in the oppofition to the laud tax. Such was the flate of imfumation at that perind. Mr. Horfefeld has faid that there were general difontents prewinng tiroughour the country: but his allegation is too vague, ton comprehenlive, to be underfond or ated upon. The citize ins of a fiee government have a riglit, if they apBeland that a vomation of their ematlitutum is intended, of if they think thet any cacruachent is made on the thatwan of libery, or preperty, th cepicta their oninion ; but is is pracicuble fo toexprefs that opinion as met to eacounter from their puhtical opponents the charge of difontent and Sedtion? Itow. in the prefent inftance, was the popular difcontent aryefd? At fat petitions to the govermer:e were propoled, framed and fabfribed. 'This was the relule of Kline's meeting; and in this, I prefume, no lohility, mo lewing war, can be difonered. At every fubfequent meatias, whether coasend ley the affefions, or by the poople therePlows, the relaare on legitlative returefs was never abaidoned; though, it is the there was greatintemperance of manner and of language. The affelins were fmetimes interrupted in their jounics, and fometimes joflled in the comp; and the uameaning cipithets of Stamplers and Tories, were rudely appied to the friends of government. But however cenfurahe, whe is the trafion in in h proceedings? A rioter and a traitor are not fromimsus chanéters; and let us lay what we pleale about nick-names and liunder, the fociety that patiently fubuits to the fcurrility of the Philadelphia newfpapers, will never be difgufted or enraged at the indecorump or vulgarity of the northern infurgents. But the infurgents went further; they intimidated the dfeflors: and is that treafon? No; it is the very' gift of the offence for which the fedition act explicitly provides. Is it not the very phrafe of that act, that if any perfons hall combine to intimidate an officer from the performance of his duty, he fhail Ee deemed guily (f a high millemeanour, and be punifhed with fine ajid impriformant? Now let us go lep by flep through the evidence, and I defy the moft incuifitional ingenuity to diftover any thing beyond the defign, and the effeit, of a fyftem of intimidation. Is there any neual force reforted to? No! I find the bridte of one affenior feized, and his leg laid hold of ; but the man is not pulled of his horle, bor is the the leaft injued ia his perfon. I find that a wituefs thinks that he leeard the word "fre" given, and that he faw two men frons a niehbouring parch, prefent their rifles at ancther affeffor: well, did the rifemen fire? No. They had guns; their guns were probabiy, loaded ; and if any thing more than intimidation was meditated, how lhall we account for their net firing? But we bear a great deal of the perfonal jeopardy of the commiffonerç and affeffors; and yet who of them fuftained an injiry? Mri Chapman, Mr. Foulke, and Mr. Chialdi are, gene:ally feeaking, treated as men of merit and confideration; and, in particular wherever the prifurer met them, they were refpected and protected; as at Jacob Fries's and Robert's taverlis.' To repel the plea for favour founded on fuch correct deproriment towards the officers, we fhall be told, that the prifoner was an artful man, that lie was the leader; and it will be frongly urged againft hiim, that he called on the officers to furrender the public papers. Of his condut as a leader, I fhall feeak hereafter; and of his demand of the papers, it is furely finfficient to obferve; tliat in oppolition to the fenfe of the rioters, and at the rifque of his life, he returned the papers, privately, in the fane flate in which he hiad received them.

- Having fpoken of the Affefors, I would winh, likewife, to review the evidence with relipet to Mir. Frely, the commiffioner, and Cul. Nichols, the marnhal.
[Here Mr. Dallas eateredinto an invefigation of the evidence, to fhew, that although the people acted violently at the feveral injetings which Mr . Eyerly had called to explain the law to them : that although Mr. Eyerly accompanied the marlhal in his whole progrefs for ferving procefs, and that although he was conficucuotly pre'ent at Beihdem, no parfonal volence was ever offered to him, or to the mathai; and ath the ill-treatment whey encountered, amounted to no more than an actempr to intimilate thein, but which they both declared was wishout effect. Mr. Dallas theri continued as follows.]

And are we to be to told, Sir, that tiefe aifs without force, without any apparentobject but to intimidate the affeffors of a particulardiftrict ; that difitrict afts of incombiterate riot and filly fhall, when conniected and com: bined, conflitute a delicerate treaton, by levying war arainlt the United States Ii no treafo: was a atually perpetaved, if none was iatended; when the tranfations occurred I infift, that usthing previous to them, nothing ex post Iictn, can make the priloner a traitor; the intention at the time mu? mase been treafonable ; or the act can never be punithed as treafon.

Let las how, however, proceed to enquire into the circumflances of the refcue at Bethlehem, and its connection with the previous difturbances. I think the evidence is flrong in fupport of the affertion, that the fole, independent, confummate object of the affembling of the people at that place, was to reicue thefe prifoners. Is there any fatisfactory proof of a combination between the people of Northampton and of Bucks? I know that an expreffion is faid to have efeaped the Prifoner, that, in this general difcontent with refpect to the land tax, certain perfons of a part of Northampton would join the ịhabitants of Lower Milford: but let the foundation of his opinions be tefted by the facts, and it evidently arofe, not from negociation, confiriacy and compact, (as the profecution fluppofes) but from a general knowledge, which he poffeffed in common with: thoufands, that the land tax was unpopular throughout the adjacent country. It is enough, however, for the defence, that no combination, or correfpondence, is proved; fince the rule declares, that in legal contemplation, what does not appear, and what does not exilt, are the fame. You do not find the people of Bucks atterding any meetings but in their own counc; ; nor entering into the county of Northampton at all previoufly to their appearance at Bethlehem.

Gentemen, it might furely be expected, that a concerted infurrection for trafonable purpofes, prevailing throughout the three counties of Bucks Northampton and Montgomery, and cemented by common interefts and paffions, would have ieen inipired and conducted by one common council: but is there the flightef prouf of fuch a co-operation ? I am aware of the communication made by Captain Staeler to the fon of Conrad Marks; but the communication itfelf was merely accidental ; and amounts to nothing more than the requelt of one individual of Northampton to an individual of Bucks. I am aware, likewife, that a meflage was received at Quaker town (as one of the witneffes fays) mentioning the arref of the Northampton prifoners, and inviting the people of Bucks to afift in refcuing them. Who brought this meffage, and to whom it was delivered, I don't recollect ; but it feems, that a compliance was refolved on; and $\boldsymbol{2}$ ? paper exprefling the refolution, was prepared and figned by Fries, with a number of other perfons. But was the objeft of the invitation, or of the refolution to comply with it, treafon, or refcue;-to commit a rior, or to levy war againtt the United States? I repeat, that the fole, independant, and exclufive purpofe was to refcue a particular fet of Prifoners.

Now, if in the previous part of this tranlaction, nothing has ftruck your minds as traitorous in the acts, or the intention of the people, I beg you to follow me, gentlemen, with frict attention to a confderation of the object that was actually effected, and the means of effecting it. The ojject was to obrain a refcue; a refcue was effected, but it was effected with circumfances of military array : will this alter the original character of the riot? No , fir: --if the people did not repair to Bethlehem with a traitorous intention, their arms and military equipments will not convert them into traitors. As on the one hand, I grant, that the circumflaii: $:$ of military array is mot neceffary to an act of treafon, if the intention is traitorons, fo I infift, on the other hand, that the circumftance of military array will not conflitute treafon, without fuch intention.
[Here Mr. Dallas entered into an invelligation of the evidence in relation to the affembling of the people, their march to Bethlehem, an their conduct there. In the courfe of the detail he endeavoured to eftab-jifl, that the fole object of the rioters was to refcue the prifoners; that no injury was offered, or intended againt the marfhal, the commiffioners, the affeflors, or the $p \mathrm{p}$ fle comitatis; and that alihough the prifoner was forced into a confpicuous ftation among the rioters, his conduct had been marked with civility towards the public officers, and a folicitude to avoid the effufion of blood. On the lait of thefe points, Mr. Dallas concluded as follows:

and here permit me to remark, that if the conduct of John Fries was luch as to juftify his being felected as a fubject for eapital punifhment, I cannot fee the policy or juftice of the felection ; nor forbear from deprecating the confequences of the precedent. A good man may fometimes affect to join a mob, witi a view to acquirc and to cxercife an influence in fuppreffing it : or an intelligent and temperate man may, for a while, be allociated for an illicit purpole, witha furious and ignciant rabble, who will naturally look up to him as a leader : but in cither cafe, the power and the difpofition to avert, or to limit outrage, will be dangrercus to the prominent individual who diplays them; and his only fafety is in mingling with the crowd, whateyer may be the direction or the devaftation of the ftorm!

Gentlemen of the jury, I have now gone through two of the general propofitions, into which I divided the confideration of the defence ; and, in the courfe of my oblervations, I have anticipated much that related to the third propofition-the particular conduet of the prifmer. I fhould here, therefore, break oif, as I feel that my ftrength, and I fear that your patience are exhaulted : but that the proclamation of the Prefident demands a moment's further attention. By the laws of the United States it is provided, that, under certain circumitances, the Pefident may call out the militia to fupprefs an infurreetion, having previoully publifhed a proclamation, requiring the infurgents to difperfe. This proclamation is obvioully in the nature of an admonition; and if the admonition produces the effect, I afk, whether in the pefent, as in cvery other cafe, it ought not to produce imponity ? 1 hen I argue, on general principles, that if the rioters did peaceably retire to their homes upon this authoritative warning, they ought to be flectered from punihment for any offence previoufly committed. Nor is the argument without a fangion from the pofitive authorities of the law. I Hale 138 : And the court will recollect, that the principle is incorporated into the flatute, which is ulually called in England, the riot act. There mult furely, be fome object in requiring the Prefident to iffue his proclamation ; and the one which I fuget is equally benevolent and politic. On the prefent occafion it produced an immediate and decifive obedience to the laws. Befides when we recollect, that the Prefident has the power to pardon offences, to difcontinue profecutions, and to grant a general amncily, as in the cale of the weftern infurrection; why may we not confider the proclamation as emanating from that attribute of mercy, fince no fecific formula is preferibed, b; which it exercife flall be cxpreted, or anmanald ?*

* Gudge Iredell interrated Mr. Dallas, cbocroing that ke tbought it irregalar to make any use of the procianat:in ar a pardin, w:thout pleading i.. Mr. Dallas said, the: be only mea:it to iafor from the facts of the ranring and the dishersion, that the insurens ane moditated treason.

Mr. Dallas then procceded to point out the differences in the nature, progrefs and turpitude of the Northampton infurrection, a:id of the wellerii infirrection: 2 Dallas's reports 349, and analyfing again the cafe of lord George Gordon, he contended that upon that authority alone, the priloner ouglat to be acquitted. In the cafe of lord Gordon, the direct; the avowed object, was to obtain the repeal of a law; and as petitions and remonfrances were unavailing, a body of 40,000 men were convened and marfhalled to furround, intimidate, and coerce the Parliament. Riot, arfon, murder, and every fpecies of the moft daring outrage and devaftation, enfued; and yet, the only profecution for high treafon was infituted againft the leader of the affociation; aid that profecution terminated in an acquittal. View, then, the riots of lord George Gordon in their origin ; eftimate their guilt by the avowed objeit; agoravate the feene with the cotemporaneous infults and violence offered to the perfons of peers and commoners; and clofe the retrofpect with the horrors which the Britifh metropolis endured for more than eight days; and then fay, (exclaimed Mr. Dallas) what was the guilt of John Fries compared with the guilt of lord George Gordon ;-iwhat is there in the Englifh doctrine of treafon that has juffified an acquittal of the later ;-what is there in the American doctrine of treaton, that will juftify a conviction of the former?

Gentemen : I can procecd no longer. The life of the prifoner is left, with great confidence, in your hands. There are attempts to make hinh refponfible under the notion of a general confiriacy, for all the actions and all the words of meetings, which he never attended, and of perfons wiom he never faw. But this is too, too harfh, in a cafe of blood : It is inconfiftent with the humanity, the tendernefs of life, whicls are characterifics of the American people, and efpecially of the people of Pennfylvania. Nor is it called for by the policy, or practice, of thofe who adminitter our government. I believe that to the chief magiffrate, to every public officer, to every candid citizen, it will be matter of a gratif: cation, if after fo fair, fo full a fcrutiny, you flould be of opinion, that treafon has not been committed. Such an event will by no means enfure impunity to the delinquent ; for, though he has not committed treafon, thou gh the puniflment of death is not to be inflicted ; the violation of the laws may be amply avenged upon an indictment of a different nature: The only queftion, however, now to be decided is, whether the offence proved, is like the offence charged, treafon againf the United States. The affrmation muft be inconteftably eftablinhed, as to the fat and the intention, by the telimony of two witneffes to the fame overt act : but remember, I pray you, what the venerable lord Mansfield flated to the jury on iord Gordon's trial,-remember, that it is enough for us, in clefence of the prifoner, to raite a doubt; for, if you doubt (it is the principle of law; us well as of humanity) you matt acquit.

The council for the prifner then called the following witneffes. JOHN JAMIESON.
Couxcit. We wifh ycu to inform the court and jury, what you baory af the conduct of Jom Fries.

Witness, Sometime after laft February court, John Fries came to ing Fioufe; I had heard, on my way coming to Newtown, that there was tơ be a meeting at Kline's. I afked him whether there was many people there, and what they had done. He told me there was, and they had agreed not to allow the affeffments to be made in the townilhip as yet; he faid the seafon was, becaufe they did not know whether there was a law paffed on it or not; I told him I really believed there was, for though I had not feen it myyfelf, I had heard of it. He likewife told me that Mitcleel had undertaken to draw up an inftrument of writing, but he could not go through with it, and that he called upon him to affift himin to do it, which he did.-On the 6th of March, I had occalion to go to the townthip meeting on account of a pauper which was likely to become chargeable, calling at Jacob Fries's, I had been there but a fhort time, before a parcel of men came there, fome with arms, and ifome without. They called for liquor, freety. They then proceeded to make enquiry whether any body knew whether the affeffors weere going about the townllip or not : I do not know whether they got any iuformation or no, but they agreed to go up to Quaker town ; after they were gone a little while, Jacob Fries and I concluded that we would ride up after them : we went to the houfe of Enoch Rolterts. We went into a room, but nothing occarred there, and I the: a aked Jacob Fries if he would tide down to $\mathrm{D}_{\mathrm{a}}$ riel Penrofe's: after we had been there fome flort time, one of the famiIf told us that our horfes were getting loofe, fo we went out, and there we faw Mr. Rodrick, who halted: he appeared to be much frightened ; fo I. a:thed him what was the mater, he told me they had catched Foulke and Childs, and that he was afraid they would kill them, and infifted on my going back to try to prevent them being hurt: I told hin I would not, except he would too; he faid he would if I would engage they fhould not hurt him ; I told him I would not do that, for I did not know what they liad againf him. However, at his defire I went to town, and when $I$ got there, I think I was told they had Foulke in the flable; fo I rode up, and ralled him by name, and Ithink he anfivered me. At my defire, he came into the houfe : while we were walking along, I told him it was a pity he flould affefs the townflip till they were more reconsiled : I told him I thought the beft way to quiet the people, was to thew them the fmall affeffrents he had made, and promific nut to go about again till they were fatisfied. He faid he was willing to do that. We then walked into the rom, and foon after we were there, Comrad Maks walked towards us with a kind of fword in his hand, though I believe fleathed, and faid to Foulke" What, I hear you are going about this bufine ts again ; did not I tell you not to do this bufinefo, bur 1 camnt tell you in En?lifh like as I could in Dutch; but it is for the lake of thofe few doilars that you go about this bufinels." Foulke arf..ered timi that he did not do it for the fake of the money. Marks anfwered, "did I not tell you that if ycu cond not do withont, come to my houfe ad I woth heep you inur or hive days; but if you had to do this for half a cricin a day; the devil would not fend you about the townhip. I ihen told Marks what I had advifed Foulle : he faid if he would do that, he voold ufe him like a cememan. Then the affair of Captain Seavone* tonk place, whicb leeme ed th drav the atterition from Mr. Foulke. I faw John Fries Iooking over fome pajers, but I did not know what they were, I went away,-

A day or two after the affair at Bethlehem, John Fries came to me and told rac the circumitances, much the fame as was related by the marfhal to the beft of my knowledge : he then faid he did not know what to do with thefe Germans, for that they had got it grafted in them that general Walhington was oppofed to this law, and that, fo poor a man as he was, he would not gradre half the expence of a man to go and get his opinion on purpofe to fatisfy the Germans. The next knowledge I got about it, was from two gentlemen who came from Philadeiphia in order to carry the proclamation abour, and they gave me fome proclamations, defiring me to do all I could to get fubuifition to the laws. I fipoke to many of them, and there was a meeting called at Marks's on the Monday following. There were 150 people or more there from the three counties. It was agreed by feveral people that it would be beft to have men chofeng to form a committee, from the three counties, to confult what to do for the beft. This was agreed to, and four men were chofen from each county. I was one of four chofen from Bucks, with George Kline, David Roberts, and Comad Maiks. Dr. Baker, 'fquire Davis, and I think 'fquire Jarrett were fume. We unanimoufly agreed to recommend to the people, as near as I can recollect, to defiff from oppoling any public offieer in the execution of his ofice, and eijoined upon the citizens to ufe their influence, to prevent any uppofition, and to give due fubmifion to the laws of the United States, dated 18 th of VIarch.

Was there ary oppolition ai all when this was reported ?
I did not hear any body but did confent to what was done by the committee. The people of lower Miltord thought it would be neceflary to have the affefments takei. David Rober:s faid that he believed Mr. Chapman would agree for thcian to appoint an affeffor in their own townfhip. It was then agreed that we fhould ride to him to know; which we did next day : he faid he had onice made the offer, but it was now out of his power. He theia faid Mr. Clark had been frft appointed, and that he had not yet given up his commillion, and he did not know how another could be appointed now; that if Mr. Clark would go about it, it would anfiver the cad. On returning honic, I called at Frederick Henny's, and defired him to draw out fome German advertifements, and fend them over towards Malks's, to defire the people to meet, and confent to let Clark go about. I beliceve he did it. At the time of appointment, the people met at Nitehel's, perhe is there were about 40 there. John Fries, and Frederic Hensy were there. The people in general agreed to let Clark go about, I believe Fties and Henny did not vote. I went to Fries and afked the reafon: he fa.d he had no objection to the people voting for him, and he wified it was dine ; but as he was firft oppofed to Clark going about the towulhip, he thougit it would not be right in him to vote. I believe Henny faid about the fame.-I faw Fries again a few days before he was taken: he told me he had heard a report which troubled him more than any tling in his life: I afled him what it was: he faid that a report was in circulation that he was ullecting up men to affif the French : he faid, "damn the French, if the: reere now to come to invade this country, fo old a man as I am, I would venture my life againft them; but I want nothing to do with tham, Councri. Did Fries make any oppofition at Marks's ?

Witness. No, I heard of no oppofition.
lias his houfe been affefled ?
I do not kiow.
Cross eximination. Was there any propofition made there abont ficining a fubmifion paper?

I do not recullect any.-I recollect Fries faid that if he was called up. on, or fummoned, he would come forward and deliver himfclf up.-This he iaid at Marks's.

JACOB HUBER.
Council. Was you at the meeting at Conrad Marks's?
Witness. Yes.
What happened there?
It was after the proclanation, and we were choofing the men to meet in the committee, Fries and I got a talking together. He fays, now Jacob, you fee the error we got into by going to Bethehem. I anfwered to hum, that the affefors would have to go abour and affefs the houfes; he faid they fhould not affefs his before he gave them a dinner, then they might whe the affelfment of his houfe!; and if I am not at home, faid he, my fon will give them a dinner.

After this meeting, what was the general fituation of the townhip?
Quiet. John Fries was peaceable and quiet as any man coild be ; I never afterwards heard of the leaft oppofition.

Cross examination. Did you fee Gcorge Minchel at Maiks's?
Yes.
Was you much with him ?
Nu, no converfa:ion with him; he was clerk of the meeting. ISRAEL ROBERTS.
Council. Pleafe to relate to the courl and jury what you know of this affa:

Witness. After the proclamation arrived in our neighbourlood, there was a flatement in the next weeks' newfpaper, flating the conduct of John Fries, which I procured, ald took to Joln Fries. After looking over the paper, he feemed pretty fubmiffive, but faid nothing: he appeared, I thoughe much diftrefled in lis mind. I tuld him that I wanted to have ime converfation with him, relative to it. I then aked him whether h : had rightly confidered this natter? whether he had not run himfeli into danger inconfiderately, and told him the confequences as I thought misht attend it. He faid he never had condidered it fo mach as he had bithin a few days before. He faid he bad not dept half an hour for three or four nights, and that he would give all he was worth in the world if the mater was all fettled, and he clear of it: lie lihewife faid, if the governmant would fend for him, he would go with him, even if a little whid was fent.

What was the general fate of the townhip of Milford after the proclamation was read?
I donot know, I believe there was fome little oppoftion to the law.
Was any oppoftion made by the prifoner?
I do not know that there was.-l recollect that John Fries farther ex. preffed himfelf to me at that ti:ne, that he was charged with taking part tion to defend the country againf any invalion, if any army fhould in: vacle our land, he would, at any time lay all this afide, and turn out againft them, and particulaly France.*

There was a meeting at Mitchel's after that, to choofe an affeffor; Fries was there: he was anked to vote, but he faid he would have nothing; to do with it.

Couscil. Did you hear him expref: any doubts of the exiftence of the law?

Wirness. Yes, more than once, I heard him fay that he did not believe it was and eitablifhed law, and therefore he was determined to oppole it.

Couscit. What time did he fay fo?
Witness. I think it was the 5 th of March.
Cooss eammatimio. Where was lue then?
Not far fiom Jucco' Fries's tavern, on the road. He faid he would eppole it, till he had known other comnties had agreec. to it, then, faid he, we muft lubmit; but he would choofe lower Milford fhould be the lait.

Cross examination. At the laft meeting at Mitchel's, did there or did there not appear a dipolition to wait till they thould have affiftance from any other place.

Yes, it was faid that a letter had arrived to George Mitchel from Virginia, fating that there were a number of men, I think io,000 on their way to join them: that letter was traced from one to another, through fix or eight perfons, till at laft it came from one who was not there!

Were not fome of the company at that time in arms and aniform?
Yes.
Courr. Do you recolledt what was faid when the letter was mentioned.
I do no recollect, but they appeared to be more oppoled to the lav thain they were before.

Attornex. Was there any declaration, from any perfon there, that they had their own laws, and wonld fubmit to no other?

Not tha: I recollect.-At the meeting at George Mitchel's at which Mr. Foulke and Mr. Chapman was prefent, which was held for the purpole of explaining the law, there were a number (about 12) came up in unifurm, and armed with a tar and liberty on it. They came into the houle, and appeared to be very much oppofed to the law, and in a very bad humour. 1 propoled to read the law to them; they atked me how I came to advertife the meeting: I told him I did it with the confent of a few others: he atked me what buinels I had to do it: I told him we did it to explain the law. He looked me in the face and faid, "We don't want any of your damned laws, we have laws of nor own," and thook the muzole of his mufuet in my face, laying, "This is our law, and we will let you know it."- There were four or five who wifhed to hear it, but otiers forbid it, and faid it hould not be read, and it was not done.

* Fudge Peters sa:d ie: mest dr these feople the justice to say that from all be beara, and al! be sari, they were generally disposed against the French; be fiumd tene at ali in favour of them.

Cruss examinution. Did you fee Fries on the evening. of the $5^{\text {th }}$ pt March?

Yes I did.-He afked me if they had affefled my houfe? I told him they bad: he then aked me if I had told any body of it; I laid I had not : he then added that he had furbade them to come into the townfiup, as he did not believe it was an eftablifhed law, and others fhond be gone through with firf. I think he then added that they coukd not get hold of Rodrick : they had gor Foulke, but let him go, and added if they had got Rodrick they would have put him under guard for that night.

Di!! he appear in a good temper ?
No, he did not, and he feemed very much oppofed to the law.
Attonney. Was Fries' objection to the tax law, or to what partichlar law?

He did not exprefs his opprfion to any one that I heard, but the the law for affeffing houfes, that night : in a converlaion I had wath him b:fore, he appeared to be opoofed to the alien and fedition law aho.

Attorney. Did he feem to talk about its being unconititutional?
I do not recollect-I know that he expreffed himielf a number of tines, that he did not believe it was an eltablithed law.

Atrorney. Did he mean by that, that the law had ever paffed, or that it might be amended?

I took it that he did not believe the law had ever paffed; he feemed to duobt of is being enablifhed.

EVERHARD FOULKF.

Council. What was the cunduct of John Fries at Qunker town on the 6th of March.

Witness. As I was coning from the houfe of Jomes Chaman with the other alieffors (John Rodrick and Cephas Childs) when I came neaty oppofite Enoch Roberts's, ] faiv the prifoner at the Bar, and a number of others with their arms, (though I don't know that he had any, bit the others had.) Some of them held them neanly as high as my horfe's fide, on a level, with their arms hanging down. I fooke to them as I palled and rode on till I got nearly to the other tavern, David Zellers's. Wheir I got there, a number run out and cried "ftop." Some of them addrelling me by name, defired me to ftop; which I did in a pleafant manner. Before any of them got to me, l think John Fries came over frum loberts's; when' he was about a rod from $m=$, he called me by me name, and told me he had told me yeiterday that he would take me to day, and he was now come to do it, or it fhould now be done, 1 don't know which he faid. Captain Kuyder then ran up, and feized my horfe by the bradle, and a number of others came round me; the prifuer did not come himfelf. Some of the people there (Jacob and Juhn Huber) came and took Kuyder off, and be then feized me by the foot, and codeavoured to difmount me; but he failed. He then afain took hoid of the bridle, but Habers releafed me again. Fries came up and laid, "Foullie, you llall be taken, if you will get off, there thall no man hurt you." He trok hold of the bridle, and ordered Kuyder tohold it ; I rode up to the flable, got off, and went into the houfe. When in the room, which was very :hick of people, the prifoner came and demanded my affeffment papers. I told him that I did not like to give them up ; he told me not to heliwite, but to do it. In that fituation I gave them to him, and told him

4 was in hopes he would not take them away without giving them to me again when he had looked at them.-I then went into another room with fome of them, who exclaimed much againf the law. Huber faid they were not willing to fubmit to it yet. Fries then gave me the affeffment papers again unhurt, and told me that he had uled me better than I deferved, and that if I had a mind I might return him to court, which I had before threatened. He then went with me to the bar, and took me to my horfe through the mob, and held the bride while I got on, and I rode off.
Then you received no injury ?
No.
Cross examination. Did, or did not the prifoner at the bar in the courfe of converfation at Quaker sown exprefs any coniciouinefs that he had been engaged in a dangerous enterprize?

Yes, he faid he knew, or thought he had tranfgreffed the law in fuch a manner as to endanger his life, and that I might return him if I would.
Attorvex Did he feak of any force that was expected to affif him?
He did not that, he did the day before, when he attacked Roderick and me in the road. He faid there would be 700 men there to morrow morning, pointing to Jacob Fries's houfe.

Councrl. Are not you an affeffor for lower Milford?
I was appointed affeflor for the whole diftricte
What time were you appointed ?
I do not know.
Have you your warrant?
Not with me.
Was your appointment fo carly as November 3
I believe not.
Was it early in February?
I believe it was.-It was on the laf day of the court. (January 28.).
Was it the fame kind of warrant as other affeffors had?
Yes.
Who delivered the warrant to you?
James Chapman brought it to me at my houre.
When you were at Quaker town there was a cry for the papers from you, were thefe papers refpecting the rating of houfes under the land tax?

Yes.
When were you firft applice to, to become an affeffor for that digriat?
Perhaps about two weeks before.
Who by?
By James Chapman, and feveral other neighoours.
Do you know whether there was a meeting of the board of comminioners for the purpofe of appointing you?
I cannot fay:

Mr. E W ING,

$\Lambda$ fter the evidence on the part of the prifoner was clofed, rofe and addrefled the jury as follows:

May it please your bonors :
aND YOU, GENTLIEMEN OF TiEE FURT.

YOU are now gentlemen in the difcharge of the moft important duty, which poffibly has, or ever can fall to your lot as members of fociety.This is a caufe of the greatef magnitude, of the firf impreffion.-Its importance is derived not only from a confideration that the life of the prifoner is now at fake, but alfo from the precedent that your verdict will effablifh in fimilar cafes in future. From this view of it, it claims the highell and mof ferious attention that can be befowed upon it.

When I addrefs you on this occafion, I feel diffident, left my ideas hould not be cloathed with that perficuity, or clearnefs, that I could wifh ; or my fentiments delivered with that eafe or Elogance that might enfure fuccefs. I hall rely upon your goodnefs to forgive any innacuracy of Ayle or fentiment that your penetration may difcover in my addrefs to you.

When I addrefs you on this occafion it is with an anxiety of mind, which I never before experienced, when I reflect upon the ppffible iffue of this caule with refpect to the unfortunate prifoner at the bar.
The fituation of the public mind, now roufed to refentment ; the place where this fubject is made matter of enquiry ; together with the prejudices that may exif againft the defendant, all confire to form frong obflacles to the defence which I thall attempt on this occafion. But when I confider your ctaracters gentlemen, I am fully perfiuaded, that you will fuffer no circumfances of this kind to bias your impartial judgments, to deftroy that intlexible integrity which cliracterizes you ; or prevent this defendant from receiving from your hands (which is all he alks) a fair, a candid and impartial trial ; that you will hear his caufe under every prefumption of his innocence, until the contrary is proved by the mof uncontrovertible evidence-That it is effential to the very exiftence of every government ; that it is effential to the prefervation of life, liberty and property, that offences fhould be punifhed, and that the crime of trealon, the higheft that a member of fociety can commit, is what I will admit, but I contend that it is equally effential to the exiftence of a government, and to our fecurity as members of it, that every man indicted, fhould have a fair trial ; to have the offence defined with certainty, and proved in fuch a manner, as to leave no poffibility of doubr on the minds of the jury.

That this man has been guilty of a flagrant violation of the law, an offence for which he deferves to fuffer, and which the good of lociety requires fhould be punifhed, is what I readily admit ; but I do contend, and I affert with confidence, becaufe I think the law will bear ule out, that no act the prifoner has committed can be conftrued treafon, by the mogt rigid, or ftrained confruction of law.

Gentlemen permit me to obferve, that in proportion to the nature and magnitude of an offence, fo ought the evidence to be.-As the accufation againft this man is of the deepeft dye, as it is the higheft poffible offence againft the laws and government that he could commit ; fo thould the proof of it come from the pureff fources, and be of that nature as to eftablith the crime beyond the poffibility of a doubt.

He is iadicted for the crime of treafon :-llappy for us that we are not now left to the confruction of judges ;-to the opinions of men of any kind, or we might be led aftray in a variety of inflances, and at times introduce accumulative treafon. The people of this country, knowing the magnitude of this object, and the propriety of good fecurity againf fuch conftructions ingrafted into the conflitution, the definition of the crime, and tranfmitted to us unimpaired. Congrefs recognized the conflitutional definition, by ingrafting alfo the very words of the conffitution into the ae for the punifhment of crimes : they have there prefcribed the punilhment ; they have faid that the perpetrators of this crime fhall fuffer death. We are now to confider how far the defendant is guilty of treafon, as laid in the indictunent. I had meant to have gone more largely and fully into this fubject from the authorities of law writers of eminence; but my learned colleague has fo ably, in fo mafterly a manner handled this caufe, that lefs remains for me to do. I fhall endeapour to fhow you what is to be underftood by levying war againft the government of the United States, and think I can reft on that ground with fafety, to prove to your fatisfaction, that the prifoner has not been guilty of the crime of treafon.
The defence refts upon three grounds.
Firf. That he has not been guilty of the crime charged in the indictment.
Secondly. If he has been guilty of any crime at all, the act of Congrets' has fufficiently defined it, and prefribed the punifhment not to be capital.

Thirdly. I contend that the proclamation of the Prefident fhould operate as a pardon to take off the guilt of actions done previounly thereunto, if not continued in.

Judge Iredell here interrupted Mr. Ewing, refpecting the pardon ; and faid that a plea muft be put in, if that was infifted on, but the prifoner muft plead guilty to plead pardon. The proclamation was read by Mr. Eving, in which he obferved, there was no pardon promifed.

Mr. Dallas faid he had begun fpeaking on this point before, but was interrupted from explaining his idea : he thought there was much difference between an affemblage before and after an admonition to difperfe : it doubtlefs would have been treafon had they continued in arms, but their future actions put a conftruction upon their paft actions, and proved that they were guilty of riot, and not treaton.

Mr. Eiving continued.-This oppofition arofe from ignorance ; they did not know, that the law was in force; and the firf time they knew that, was by the proclamation, when they actually did difperle, and fubmit to the law.
The prifoner at the bar is not guilty of the treafon laid in the indictment, for Firft, there muft be a traitorous intention, and Secondly, that intention muft be carried into effect. In order to prove that, we muft trace his conduct through Bucks county, and then proceed to Bethlehem, where the act of treafon is faid to have been committed. In order to difcover what is meant by levying war, we are obliged to refort to the authority, or decifion of Englifh courts on the fatute of Edward the III. but thought every thing that has been done there, is rot to be confidered as a proper precedent for us here, yet there are fome rules and confructions in England that will apply to particular cafes here.一 Wherever a fet of men take up arms to oppofe themfelves, to the government generally : to fubvert the laws, or to reform them; in that cafe they are faid to levy war againt the government. The great criterion to diflinguifh what announts to this crime is the quo animo, or the intention with which the adt was done. The object muft be of a general nature, and not an affembly to do a particular act, this would not be treafon. I fhall now fhow by the conduct of the prifoner that his views were not of a general nature, and that it was by no means marked with that degree of malignity which the council for the profecation have reprefented. You will conlider that the refidence of the prifoner was remote from the feat of government ; and from that fource of correct information, which as a member of fociety he ought to have received, whereby to requlate his conduct. The people with whom he converfed were unacquainted with your language, warmly, and perhaps fuperfitioufly attached to old efablifhed laws and cuftoms of the place where they refided. Having been accultomed to be taxed and affeffed by men of their own choice; men whofe conduct they had a right to fcrutinize, and whom they had ufed to bring to account: You need not be furprized that thefe people would at leaft helitate at admitting innovations into their cuftoms: the ideas which fruck them naturally were, "From what fource can this law arife, that flould fend a flranger into our townfhips to make affeffments; a right which exclulively, as we think, belongs to us?" They did not feel fuch prejudice agairft this law, confidered as to its effects but from the manner of its breaking upon their view: The introduction of this new principle alarmed them, but they affembled :ot to oppole the law, but to gain time for information of the real exiflence of it. Under this delufion they laboured, becaufe they had not the advantage we have, of enjoging information, and the illiterate flate they were in operated as a great fource of their oppofition. This ignorance and delufion was peculiarly manifefted througlout all their conduct. Their firt meeting was held to confider whether it was a law or not; not being fatisfied about it, and difappointed in their information, they met again, in order to tell the affeffors not to come about their townhip to make the affefinents, until their doubts were removed : the affiffors went on however, and all this while the people were enveloped in darknels. They warn the affeffors; they tell them " we don't want to repeal this law by violence"-No, if they had, arrelting the alfeffors would nut have done if, they muft have gone to an higher fource; and if they had gone there with a determination to repeal or oppofe it, the act might have received the fanmp of treafon. I deny that they arrefted any of the oficers of the guvermment in the execution of their duty: we have repeatedy alked upon what authority thefe men acted; we have alked, and have not obtamed fatisfaction, and we therefore prefume the authority does nut exilt ; and where there is no law, there is no tranferefiom. But mepole they bad procuced their authority, to what would their oppoficion have amonated? To a riot, and no fartber. What courfe did Fries tahe in this teene? Humanity and tendernets, wheree er his interpofition was meceflary, and the was prefent, characterized him. So far from fuberang the guven-vrent : fo far from préventing the execution of its laws; fo far from injuring, or punifling thefe affefors while eatirely in his power: he prevented the very people who were with him from doing thole acts, and he himetelf was induftrious to releaie them, and lead them into a place of fafety. If conduct like this is to be conftrued into the crime of treafon; what act, I afk, will not by and by : if this is treaton, it is unhappy for us, for thoulands in the United States have been guilty of the fame thing. Becaufe a law exitts, muft we acquiefce implicitly - have we not a right as feemen, to think-have we not a right to object to it? It is impoffible that we fhould be all of one mind, with refpect to the beneficial confequences of a law-fome difference of opinion will neceffarily exift. The oppolition was manifefted in different places, but it was all to the fame law'; but the oppolition did, in no inflance amount to a traitorous intention, nor was it ever manifefled in their conduct from the begiming to the end. I afk you, if Fries ever took any active part in it, fo as to diftinguifh him as their leader? It has been declared that he oppofed the law, and likewife that he took men to Bethlehem to refcue the prifoners, but we do not find there was any command given. There was a difference of opinion on their way, whether they fhould go to Bethlehem or not: If he had commanded thete men, and had intended to levy war againt the gove:nment, fome of them would not have returned; but he would have led them on to the object without confultation. Trace him towards Bethlehem : there were feveral who could not pais the bridge, becaufe toll was demanded : when he came up he faid " count my men." No deubt he meant only the men of his own company, becauie we do not hear that he paid for more than his own. It does not appear that he had any communication whatever, informing him that fach a party were to meet there that day, much lefis can it be imagined there were any treafonable communication. He went up with his men, but we find while another company formed before the houfe, his men food aloof ; they did not form there in the ranks, nor did they come there for that purpofie. The conlideration that fome of their conntry people were taken prifoners, and they thought it was unconltitutio:al and oppreffive for them to be taken to Pliiladelghia to be impritcned and tried, induced them to intift upon the retcue. What did they fay? - We will bail them : if they are guilty, they ought to luffer." B.il is retifed: the marthal could not have granted that requeft, but they did not know that. When they found this their propotal was rejciteid, they deterunise they will have the men. Then John ines apeared-a man who had ufed the affeflors refpectfully: a man Whofe charater was that of humanity-he was chofen to go in to the marthal to dernand the prifusers. One faid he thould be commander of them ; batis does not appar that he did take the command at all ; but we hate of tio othes who cummanded on that du.. Fries went in and conveifed oa the releafe of the priigners with the marhal, who with great firmets faid, that they mut be taken fiom him. He went out again, and the men bing pretty warm, he checked them: went a fecond and thind time : all hio anm wis to prevent the fhedding of blood; he pledged himelf to the warhat that no harm thould come th him from him or bis company.

If th: object of thef people bud been of a general nature, men fo ob-

Caped their vengeance, or refentment, when they were fo much within their power : had their conduct been Stamped with trealin, they would not have been fatistied with releuing the priloners: the officers would have fuffered; but not one we find was hurt. One ffrong trait, worthy your obfervation is, that their view in going to Bethlehem was not to prevent the operation of the law, but limply to refcue the prifoners; and in this, their conduct cannot amount to more than a riot and refcue: an offence defined as well as its punifhment, in an act of Congrels. As the overt act muft be laid in the comnty where the offence was committed, and if it is true that treafon was not committed at Bethlehem, where fhall we look for it ? the gentlemen will not attempt to prove, I prefume, that the beginning of the treafonable act was in Bucks county, and its completion at Bethlehem. But Bucks has nothing to do with the prefent indictment at all, and ought not be brourght into view.

Mr. Ewing then referred to Fofter 210, and I Hale 143 and Lord George Gordon's cafe, each of which, he faid, far exceeded the cafe of the prifoner at the bar. But, he obferved, as the time and patience of the jury, to which he felt himfelf fo much indebted, and which had been to leverely tried already in this lengthy trial ; and as the defence had been fo ably handied by Mr. Dallas, and what remained would be, he had no doubt, well conducted by the jufly acknowledged great taients of another learned advocate, he fhould forbear enlarging. The verdict ycu give, gentlemen, faid he', will not only be of vaft moment to the prifoner, but will alfo eftablifh a precedent for future finsilar cafes, and it will be to your immortal honour if you preferve and decide with impartiality and firmnefs; while on the contrary, it will be a fource of thame and difgrace if you do otherwife, through the influence of prejudice or the operation of external circumitances. I can fafely truit the life of my client in your hands, under a confcioufiefs that thefe feelings of humanity, and a juft eilimation of the evidence, will outweigh all other confiderations, and thus will your righteous verdict gain you the gratitude of you country, the approbation of your own confciences, and the warmeft thanks of the defend. ant.

Mr. S I TGREAVES:

With submissisa to your Honours.,
GENTLEMEN OF THE gURT.

IACKNOWLEDGE the propriety of an obfervation which dropped from one of the council for the prifoner in the courfe of his addrefs to you : that is, that thofe who are concerned for the profecution in criminal cafes fhould not endeavour, by their eloquence or ingenuity to divert the attention of the jury from the truth, or to ftretch that truth fo as to give. them more unfavourable impreffions on the facts than they will bear: This I mult acknowledge would have been unneceflary advice to me, becaufe the views I thall be able to take of this fubject will be but feeble and imperfect. In the courfe of my limited and fhort experience, I hared heen but little converfant with criminal courts, and have paid but litutet attention to the criminal code, and neverl ave been ngaged in a cafe fo important as the prefent, my public darics having, for fome years paft drawn me from the bar. It may not be wondered, then, if I have not been able to bring into this court talents equal to meet thofe called to the aliftance of the prifoner. I muft therefore fay I liall not be able to do juftice to the cafe. I confefs I feel a defire that thofe perfons who have been guilty of this fecond outrage and diffrace brought on the flate of Yennfylvania, may feti the punifliment the law inficis. I hope you and every one who hears me will join in this fentiment, for on it hangs much of our peace and lecurity. I have no objection to going fill farthermy lot is caff in that part of Penifyivania where this unfortunate circumfiance occurred: I feel particularly for the good order, peace, ald profperity of that part of the fite, but I liave unhappily feen it in fuch a fituation that all the harmony of fociety was deltroyed, and if I were not to feel a frong delire that peace, harmony, and good order thould be reflored, I fhould be deflitute of humanity; for we all know that crimes can oaly be prevented by inflicting fuitable punifhments on the delinquents. I wifh, genterien, that the law fhould be executed againft thofe who were criminal, but when I fay fo, let me not fay that I wifh the prifoner at the bar to be executed: $\dot{N} \nu$, my earueft wifh is, that the general good of fociety may be procured: this man muft be tried by the evidence that is brought againt him, and upon that alone he muft ftand for his guilt or ianocence.

Having faid thus much, I begin now to premife one or two things which I think flould be altogether fet afide, but which has been much infifted upon. You have been told that the prifoner appears here on the charge of treafon, under all the difidrantages of denunciation by the Prefident of the United States in his proclamation. Any of the affertions of that proclamation are not to have weight on your minds, nor will it operaie argaint the prifoner: he is to be tried by the evidence only, and you are not to regard any thing you have heard out of doors before this trial commenced: nothing lhould operate to doom the prifoner to an harder fate than the law, fupported by fair teftimony provides. It is alfo as true that nothing contained in tina proclamation Ihould operate to the benefit of the prifoner: if it thould not conviit him, no more fhould it acquit him. The analogy which has been drawn does not exift between this prochmation and the riot ait of Eigland, as you have beentold, but even if it did, the inference would not be jaf. You were told that all who differfe on the reading of that act, are pardoned for crimes previoufly commited: it is not io. But more of that prefently. The proclanation of the Prefident was iffued for one purpoie, and the not act, in England, is read for another. The Preident bas no authority to call forth a military power but under certain cicumflances: wherever a combination thould form, which are too flrong for the civil power to quell, then the military may be called in to aid the civil, but with a humanity intending to prevent the effufion of hamaa blood, and to call out military force as feldom as pofible, the law has provided that a proclanation thall be previoully iflued, that the offenders may difperfe peaceably to their homes : but there is not a fyllable about pardon in it. The Prefident has the power to pardon, it is true, but he has not done it by thit proclamation.

The riot act, which paffed in the reign of George I. was enacted in onder to prevent tumultuous affemblies: if people refufed to depart within one hour afier it was read, they were guiltv of felony, for which they were to fuffer death, al!hough the affence before was only a middemeanour, yet the refufal to depart makes it felony, but it cannot be preterded that any fuch departure exculed them from the riot, but on the contrary, profecution and conviction frequenty takesplace forthat crime, althourh they fhould difperfe; and therefore it does not affect the merits of the cafe. Ihe proclamation is as a blank paper before us, and therefore we muft examine this cale upon its own independant merits.

Gentlemen, in fumming up this cafe on the part of the United States, the methed moft natural to adopt is, Firft. To confider the law as relating to this fubject.

Secondly. What was the amount of the offences perpetrated at Bethlehem, and.
Thirdly. Enquire whether the facts produced in evidence are fuch as to convict the pritoner, and make him guilty of the charge in the indictment as apillying to his particular cale.

Firft, wich refpect to the law on treafin. I hould have expected it was io well underflood that there would have been no difference awongit us, howr ever we might differ on its application to the prifoner, yet unfortunately there is, and we muft endeavour to meet thole objections. The fatement which was made to you at the opening by mylelt, and a ftatement by the attorney of the dittrict, I believe to be correct: I am confi:med in that opinion, and have no doubt it will be given to you by the court in the charge as correct. We are not at this day to diffract curlelves with theory: The law of Edward 3 of England, cafled by fome " the facred ftatute," and by others the pardiament who enacted it, is called "The Bleffed parliament," that law and our contlitution have adopted the fame words. 'The judges in England, as eminent for their patriotifm, as eminent for their tenderneds, and as eminent for their ability as any ever were in this country, have fclemnly lettled this particular in a variety: of inftances and unfortunat ely, young as this country is, there bas been the neceflity for a court of the United States for this diffrict to fettle the principle likewife. The adjudications under this ftatute were made by ment all well known for their love of liberty. We have no need to conjure up. a different expolition, or different form of conftruetion, than what has already been admitted in both countries: indeed it is what cannot be thaken at this day, It is, tbat all insurrections by a multitude of people suitb intention to usurp by violence or intimidation the laviful authority of: toe government in matters of a general and public concern, in wubick the ansurgents bave po interests aistiuct fromi the rest of the comminity is Treason. From the beft confideration I liave been able to give the fubject, I have formed this definition, which I believe comprifes the whole that can be faid about it, and I believe no more : I think this alfertion will appear to be juffified by the belt authorities. If this deicription is jult, the offence is cleatly lettled and amounts to " levying war arraint the United States." In the moft effential parts, I think this rule has been lettled by the council for the pritoner.

The Intentim, which conflitutes the gift of the offence, is proved to have been to fume general object; if the intention was to gratify fome.
pirate concern or intereft, even if there be all the apparatus of war, as gulls, fifes, drums, Sc. whatever viclence thould be comaitted under it, it cannot amount to treafon, becaufe the intention is not to a public matter, whatever cther crime it may ancunt to, and whatever enormities may be committed. This may be the cafe, in order to gratify fome particular paflion, or fome particular intereft. It is the intention, which diftinguifhes treaton from other crimes: Riot, is generally much like it, but not being of a public nature, is only a mifdemeanour : Treafon on the contrary, is the gieateft crime known to the laws of any countryLord Mansfield at the trial of lord George Gordon, expeffes the fame opinios. If this is a true pofition, it is certainly an irrefifable inference, that infirrection for the purpofe of fupprefing and preventing the execution of a public law, is to prevent or obtain a public object, and of courfe nuuld be high treafon within the rule of our confitution. Yes, this has been repeatedly denied, by the gentleman, to be high treafon; iay, he even went on fo far as to fay that in England, no fuch thing had taken place ; he fays it muft be a combination to oppofe all the laws; or at leaft, to force the repeal of a law. Gentlemen, I think I have flated enough, to convince you that this is erroneous: If treafon is the unlawful purfuit of an object of a public nature, then the fuppreffing of a public law is treaton. But I would not have you reft on my definition if I cannot bring you full proof in favour of it. See I Hawkins Chap. 17, Sect. 25. i Hale, ${ }_{133}$. And this pofition is confirmed flill further, by a piecedent of our own. = Dallas, 346, &cc. I confider this fettles the queftion beyond all douht, and it ought to reft fo forever, the decifion was fo ferious and fiemn in both countries. I fhall affume this as an acknowledged point throughout the whole of my enquiry. I thould have added the opinion of Mr. Erfkine in lord George Gordon's trial. Speaking on the trealon flatute, he fays, None of them have faid more than this, that war may be levied, not only by deffroying the conftitution, or the government itfeif, but by affuring the appearance of war, to endeavour to fupprefs a law which it has enacted.

It is certain that Britifl cafes go much farther, and if it was neceflary and the cale required it, it could be juftified by decifions in England upon points infinitely lefs frong, thian thole I have quoted : points which were fettled at a very early period, which neither the parliaments nor the courts have ever interpofed to change. Cafes of public grievances, whether real or pretended, whether they grow out of law, or out of practice, as pulljug down all enclofures, &c. which are the invafions of private right, from 3ts uniterfality-is ligh treafon. Again, ufurping the powers of the gowermment by pulling down all bawdy houles, is High treafon. The cafe referred to by Mr. Bradford in Mifflin county was, that a particular judge was driven from the bench : they did not oppole the fitting of the court, but they had a refentment againt the individual, and therefore the profecution was for riot. This will affift us in our farther enquiries upon the prefent pccation. This crime is faid not to be trealon but a refcue and bare obftruction of procefs, aud within the fedition law, or within a claufe of the penal code, and thercfore not treafon. But whatever nature an offence may be, of itfelf, if it is accompanied with this particular act of treafon, the act bccomes treafon : I willingly admit that a refcue of prifaners may be without treafon: a perion may be willing to rift the law rather than his friend fhould fuffer, and may therefore refcue him ; this would be but mifdemeanour: If ten men in arms go to an officer and refcue his pri? foner, if it be done in a private manner, it is no more than a mildemeanour; but if thefe fame ten menin arms go from motives of a public nature, then it becomes treaton. The intention therefore, makes the crime to differ.

It is faid farther that the legiflature of the United States have paffed a folemn opinion upon it, and that they have called it no more than a combination of certain fatts; a refcue, Scc. againft which it has provided, and therefure it cannot now be called treafon. I think this received a good anfwer by judge Wilfon; 2 Dallas 351, and the objection was \{olemnly over-ruled by the court. The fedition act was not made at that time to be fure, but if it had, there can be no doubt but it would receive the fame anfwer, and meet the iame tate by this judge if read in objection. But the firf fection of the fedition act defcribes a different fort of combination, and is not levying of war. There muft be of neceffity a confpiracy in levying war, but there may not be in an unlawful combination.
Judge Peters.-Whatever the crime would have been without a trealonable intention, with a treafonable intention would conflitute the overt act.

Mr. Sitgreaves.-The cafes in the books are ftrongly demouftrative of this particular. 212 Fofter. Benftead's cafe. "Certain unpopular meafures having paffed in the council, the odium was thrown on the archbilhop of Canterbury. A paper was pafted up in London, exhorting the apprentices to rife and fack the archbifhop's houfe at Lambeth, and accordingly lone thoufands went with a declaration that they would tear the archbifhop in pieces."

It was not attacking the individual, but the officer that became high treafon. The fame sith relpect to the attack on general Neville's houfe during the weftern infurrection; the attack on him was, becaufe he was an officer, and therefore being upon the office and not the man, it was upon the government, and high treafor.

Such is the general opinion of treafon ; the great enquiry will now be what was the intention with which the offence at Bethlehem was perpetrated? It is allowed to be a refcue; it is conceded alfo that there was an obfiruction of procelis: If it was fo it was part of the general fyftem which being of this public nature, obtains the magnitude and operation of treafor. Before I go into the examination of this, I will make an obfervation on what has been faid : that the overt act muft be proved in the county where it is laid. I heard this pofition, but I did not difcover any appication of it, and therefore I am at a lofs to know how to treat it. There exilts in England, and in the thate of Pennfylvania, a form in the direction to the grand jurt, which deferves notice; they are fworn to enquire for the body of the conititv. '1 his caufes confiderable difficulty particularly where fowething done out of the county is required as in ingredient in the charge, aid if the beginning of a crime was in one county, and its completion in another, the dififculty would be greater-; but even thofe difficulties are remebted. The idea of bis honour judge Peters the other day, appears to be found. That a diftrict is the fame as it refpects the United States, as a county is to a flate, and therefore; the grand juty mare drawn, not from the body of the county, but from the body of the diatrict, and the whole extent of the diftrict is equally connected with the venue if it be laid there. As to the evidence, therefore, I confider the crime may be laid in one, county, and proved in another. 2 Hawkins, chap. 46 , Sect. 182. I confider whatever rule applies in England or in our flate governments relative to counties, is the fame refpecting diffricts under the general governmeat of the United States; liketwife, if the overt act be proved in the county where it is laid, you may go out of the county for evidence to thow the intention with which it was committed. This, I thing, cannct be denied. In Fofter 9 , we fee that an overt act not laid, may be brought as evidence to fupport one that is laid, iu order to thew the intention.

With refpect to hearfay evidence, the rule of law is, that the circumflance of the oral teftimony is regarded, as it mayy tend to eftablifh other evidence, though of itfelf it be no proof. There are a variety of inftances in which it is neceffary to be admitted, though there is a rule againft it in others. In all cafes where proof is to be made by evidence of general reputation it is ufeful : fo upon this occafion, it is competent to us to prove the general flate of the country; if proper to thew the general fate of a country where infurrection prevails, it is as proper in order to dlew the general combination, the delign and intention, becaufe it may be the ouly effectual way of coming at that knowledge. For inflance : this information which was received by the comminioner in the difcharge of his official duty is proper evidence to thew why the law was not carried into effect, and confequently the criminal firit of the country. Popham's reports 1 ;2.
Mr. Sitgreaves then went into the cate of lord , George Gordon, which f:ad not been reprefented to the jury by Mr. Dallas to his fatisfaction' He related the circuinfances of that riot at length. He faid the acquittal of that gentleman was not a certain proof of dis innocence: doubts might have arifen on the minds of the jury as to the fufficiency, or character of the evidence, or there may hare been a contradiction of teflimony, by which all the credit of it would be taken away. Befides, it did nos appear to him that the aft of High treafon was conmitted ; the multitude who accompanied Lord George to the Parliament houfe did not go to compel a repeal of the law, or to overawe the Parliament, but from a report that the numerous fignatures were not rightly obtained, they went to Atamp truth on the infrument, and convince Parliament of the refpectabiJity of the figners. Befides the main point of evidence of what a perfon Leard Lord Gordon fay in the L.obby, was received doubtfully by the jusy. Many things went to make the teftimony not fo unambiguous as it ought to be on a trial for life or death, and on that account perhaps the learned judge cbarged them, if a doubt hung upon their minds, to acquit the prifoner. Upon the whole no inference can be drawn from that cale.

Gentlemen, another extraordiuary pofition was taken by both the council in defence of the prifoncr. It was laid that it could be no offence to refcue prifoners who were taken up for acts committed againft men who acted without authority, nor to oppofe men who had not authority to affefs under this law. It was attempted to be fhown you that fome of the affeflors had not received their warrants agreeable to the act of Congrefs, and thence all the outrages were tolerated! I do not fupoofe that the gentlemen engaged for the prifoner means to go bejond the cafe in which they are engaged, but I muft fay that their zeal on this occafion has iutreduced a dangerous principle-if the apoftle of any infurrection had cone reteking from the gore of Europe, and had preached up to youthis doctrine, he could not have done it more compleally than thofe gentlemen; agreable to this the whole country may raife themjelves into array againit thofe who de facto ezercile the authority of the goverument and the laws, yet if called to account the court muft be informed, if the ingenuity of the council can find a fault in the appointment of the perfons engared in the execution of the laws, that they have not tranfgrefled the laws and upon that account! Is not this at oncefapping the foundation of fociety, and by a kind of encouragement of infurrection, friking hard at the root of all goverument? This is an oppofition in my opiuion upon a dangerous and deftructive ground. I am not difpofed at this time to enter into any argument whether it is neceflary to prove the appointment of the officers, but admitting it is true, that upon the indictment of perfons for obftraction of procefis or obftruction of a public officer in lis dut $;$, is no offence without he prove his due appointment, yet it does not follow that facts given in evidence to prove an outrage, fhould require all that ftrictnefs of examination. You will obferve that the prifoner does not fland clarged with any thing but the refcue at Betheliem, he is not now charged with the offences he committed in Bucks, or any where elfe, much lefs with any thing where he was not preient. Thefe previous tranfactions are given you to fhow the intention with which the laft outrage was committed: it is only to fhew the tendency of the defign. Thefe gentleraen exercifed the offices, and it does not appear that there was the leaf doubt expreffed in thofe counties of their anthority, neither by the prifoner nor any perfon whatever who affociated with him, at any time or on any occafion : their oppofition was not founded on any fuch pretext, but it grew merely out of the lav, and therefore it muft appear that the outrage was an unequivocal fact, conducted with the intention, fo far as we can collect, to defeat the law. On thefe grounds there is no neceffity for proof of due appointment. But what are the objections, or what proof do they require. There is no pretenfions to a doubt refipecting the legal appointment of any officer, but the two affeffors at Penn in Northampton, and Milford in Bucks: Mr. Eyrely himfelf tells you that all the reft were appointed by the board of Commiffioners, and that at Penn, the affeffor refufed, and Mr. Balliot had the blank to fill up. Refpecting the other Mr. Foulke fupplied the place of Clark who held his appointment, and Mr. Foulke was appointed to allint him. How then, gentlemen, from thofe two cafes, could a general inference be warranted that the appointments were irregular, and upon that ground thefe outrages be juffified?

We have heard much about the danyer of following Englifh precedeits, and about the words bigh Treason. There is a fpecies of treafon in England which camot exift here ; that is, confpiring againf the life of the kiig, and fpeaking of mere words which have frequently been conflrued into that crime. It has been a queftion of great doubr whether words can be called treafon, but in that country or this, it is neceffary ta prove the intention with which a crime was committed, and therefure mere words, though it is true camot convict, yet if a man has done 2 lawlefs aft, we may exemplify the defign by words, even of the prifoner himfelf. With refpect to an action done publicly and notorioully, that is a matter capable of pofitive and abfolute evidence, plain to the fenies; thole who fee it can tell of it, but there can be no way of diving into the heart: if the party himfelf, from that recefs, fhould develope his defigns, thefe declarations made, either by himfelf or others who heard him, can prove the intention of his actions, and for that purpofe is good evidence.

Gentemen I have now faid all which I think neceffary with refpeit to the law on treafon. I am confident I have not done jultice to it ; but what I have omitted will be amply fuppfied by the attorney of the diftrict, and tleieir honours upon the bench.

I fhall now proceed to inveltigate the facts as they have appeared in evidence, and apply thie law to thofe facts, in order to fhow you what fhare of guilt the priloner tranfacted. In doing which I fhall only felect the moft prominent features of the teftimor:y which may go to prove my pofition.

Firft, with refpect to levying war. I think it will require but few words to fhov that there has been an infurrection in the three counties; that at Bethlehem there was a multitude of people in arms, amounting to the full fenfe of the words of "levying war with arms :" the infurgents had all the apparatus and accoutrements of a regular military force, and they went there in military array. This is proved by fifteen witnefles (not by t:ro merely). It is farther certain that this multitude of people perpetrated atrocious and lawlefs offences, and in contempt of all legal authority, after folemn, reiterated and repeated warning; that the marfhal, conformable to that humanity which characterized him, fent a deputation to them, requiring them to go home, and to abandon their purpofe; that he felected perfons who were moft likely, from their political opinions to procure the object, but nothing would do for them fhort of what they fet out upon, and the miffion failed.

We will next confider for what purpofe this outrage was committed: It was faid to be fimply for the purpofe of releafing the prifoners: this was the abftract and naked defign. If fuch is the fact, the prifoner muft be acquitted, but if he had an object beyond that: if it fhould appear that this was one link in the chain of oppolition to the laws, then it amounts higher; it amounts to treation. It is my purpofe to fhow you that their defigns were higher than a mere refcue, and that it did not flow from any particular regard to the prifoners in cultody, but it was a public oppofition, and one means ufed with a view to prevent the execution of a law of the United States. Gentlewen, the mere recital of one or two facts will be fufficient to bring this home to the mind of any man who is not determined to fhut his eyes arainft plain teftimony.

It is in full and compleat proof before you, that in the counties of Northampton and Bucks, the oppolition was almoft general, and that in the townthip of Miliord; all along the river Lehi, and both fides of the mountain, there was aa maion in oppolition to the law, uniformly conducted with lyitem, menace, and threais; that the perfons who thought proper to alfilf in the execution of that law, were previounly intimidated not to accept of it, and after they lad accepted, they were prevented from executing it, and in many places, until the march of the army, the law did actually remain unexecuted. I thall not flate to you the particulara of this evidence, but remark that the fyftem was general, and that it was accompanied with threats and menace, and that the friends of the law, and thofe who were peaceably inchieed, were prevented, under the influence of this terror, from fpeaking their minds on the occation; and even the magiftrates of the country were fo impreffed, or fo intimidated, as not to perform the duties of their office: That the law was completely proftrate, and perfous who would have given teflimony againf them for thefe proceedings were afraid to do it. In the courfe of this proceeding, it was repeatedly declared, that if any perfon flould be arrelted for oppofition to the law, that they flould be fupported. This fyftem of menace was general ; it was not an oppofition grounded particulaly upon the obnoxious characters of perfons who were emplojed in the execition of the law, but upon the law iticlf : There was an offer of a particular commiffioner to ufe his influence, that they might choofe thei: own officer, but that would not fatisfy their object-no, they faid if they accepted that offer it would be approving the law, and that they would not do. Mr. Ejerly the commilitiner, had been for many years the reprefentative of this diftrict in the Legillature : Mr. Balliott had been in the Legiflature, in the Council, and in the ftate convention, which proves they were men of contidence in their diftrict, and that the particular diflike now exemplified was not to them as men, but as officers under the law. One of the council for the prifoner went minutely into all their views, and the veins through which they ated, and endeavoured to palliate, or excufe the conduct of thefe infurgents; while, at the fame time he appears to know what were the views of government in profecuting the delinquents; but there is no neceffity to anfiver that, becaufe the prifoner is not on his trial for obftruction of precefs. I moff folemnly difavow that political party fpirit enters at all into this profecution, and beg the jury will difinifs all patty firit and prejudice from their ininds : However we may differ on points of law, we muft agree with them that the people had a right to examine and explain the law, and exprefs their diflike to this or any other law. Their opp fition to this law might have been right, or wrong ; it does not alter the cale, and God forbid that any motive of the kind flould inflence us to revenge : Thefe are natural rights under a free government, which every citizen has a right to exercife. We are not now enquiring into the nature, or grades of any, or all thofe particular offences; whether this parcicular outrage is a riot, or that a mifdemeanour, or whether it amounts to treafon, we are fimply fhewing to you, from the evidence collected, the weight and force of thofe facts; to wit, that there was oppofition to this law, and that univerfally, and that thele people did their utmoft, to endeavour to fop the execution of tine law ; and that thefe acts were in flrict union with the lafl act at Bethlehem, of the intention of wbich, the previous aits collectively are plain proof, for certain it is, that an act illegal in its nature, may reccive colour and complexion from one that is flititly legal. Suppofe a mun had reduced his thoughts on this fubject to writing, without any intention of communicating it to any perfon; fuppole in that writing has inteations are fully declared with which fuch writing was drawn ; then this att, though innocent in itfelf, would be competent evidence to fhew the intention with Which a fublequent outrage was perpetrated, and it would be in full proof to fhow that a violent oppofition to the laws in that country particularly to the act for the valuation of houfes, and that it was not f:om a perfonal or private motive, bat generally an averfion to the lair itielf, fo that a long time after the perised fixed for its execution, the law actually remained unfulfilled. In feveral parts the people returned to a fenfe of their duty and fubmitted to the laws, and hapy would it lave beea for the govermment as well as themfelves if they lad all done it ; for then this inceftigation would have been arevented : but in fome parts, the marfhal, and thofe who were with him, who weer not volunteers as has been in:linuated, but acted in conformity to their duty as public officers.-Thefe were infulted, arrefed asd obftructed as oflicers; The marfhal was abufed by numbers of periple at Millar's town, and he was not able, thourgh he touched Staikweiler, to execute proceis on him. Gentemen, all I afk of you, is to coneet the circumftances in your minds; the geieral courfe of erents which gave rife to what atterwards was confummated at Bethlehem. The prifoners who were refcucd were defirous of accompanying the marfhal to Philadelphia ; they would rather not be liberated ; - they were taken from various parts of the country, unknown to each other, and more fo to the perfons who refcued them: there was no privatc attachment, regard, or refentment; What ther-fore could be the motive of the infurgents? Could it be intereft? No, it would be bad policy to fiperid dollars to oppofe a tax law rather than cents to fupport it. Was it a private diftinct intereft they had, which did not concern the community? If not, agreeable to Juige Foller, it was treafon. I have faid that thefe prifoners were not known to the infurgents; I would make the exception of Shankweiler; but you will obferve that he never did furrender himfelf to the cuftody of the marthal, and though fome faid they were come to fee him as a neighbour, others to fee his partner, (accufer) &c. yet he was not de fucto in cuffody : It could not be to reficie him that this large armed brdy met, becanle he could have been fafe by keeping at home. But one folemn fait refipecting the others demands a folemn inference: The Lehi prifoners had cordially fubmitted to the law, and thus defired to recominead themfiches to the mercy of the government by penitence, and actually at laft gave the marfhal their individual affurances to meet him at Philadelplia : I ank then by way of inference what becomes of all the private cbject, or the ne:ghbourhood efteem neceflary to vindicate thefe infurgents? It was :oz for the prifoners' fakes, but through oppolition to the law thai they did this att, for it is plain that the perfons in cultody of the marfial were afiaid as much to truft themfelves in the hands of the mob, as Mr. Eyerly or Mr. Balliott were. They doubtle's had a treatonable, a rebellions determinatinn to oppofe the govermment ; the previous declaration of the party was, that "if any perfons were there in confuement who were oppoled to the law they flould be refcued," was a plain indication of their oppofition to tie law, and that this refcue was a part of the general oppoition. Mr. Sitgreaves then went into a review of the evidence relipecting the meetings at Upper Milford, and at Schymer's, where, he faid, oipofition to the law marked the condect of the people, but at Lower Milford, the prifoner at the bar by his own confeffion, eminently difplayed his intention ; thee witnefles corroborated the fact : "This was the third day he had been out on this bulineff; he had a firmih yeiterday, and would have another to day ( 7 th of March) if the prifoners had not been given up." This clearly proves that the bufinelis at Milford was confely connected wih that at Bethehem; thus being all parts of one whole, we former acts are tull and compleat evidence of the latter. In Lower Milfoul tiry retolve that the law flould not be executed yet, becaufe they did not know it was a law : In reply to this we may fay, it is inconcciablie to fuppoie that any people floould be fo flapid as to doubt the exiftence of a law, when the effeficrs were actually going about the country in conformity' to it ; this is incredible notwithintanding the charity we are forced to have for theic people's innorance. They farther refulved, that their townllip fhould be the laif to fubmie ${ }^{+}$to it, if it was a lav. Is not this as mucts as to fay, if others afift us in rebchion we will go on, but if ail fubmit, then we will allo. No thaiks to them. The affefors foumd it fo, for they were chated, infulted, and finally whiged to abandon the townhip, and yet, in that townhip the utmoli polfible mans were ufed to convince them of their earows. At Mitchel's it was propoied to read the law, but ia vain ; they "dia not want any damed laws." An offer was made to theng to chocfe their own affefur, which was likewife treated with difdain: They fet the mof Giemm warning of conlequeices at defiance, and defed even the government itfilf; fometimes vainly Hattering themideres, that they had all the people coming to their afiftance: they fet at nought the judicial authority, becaufe they luppofed they had aims and mumbers fufficient to fuppore their oppufition. At Quakers town they refolved to go to the refcue, and there we find them all declaing oppoftion to the kaw, and defiance to: the government: They were engaged in thefe acts when they reaived: information from Northampton county that the prifo!ers were in cultudy, and then they ligned a refolve to go to refue them.

Gentlemen, when thefe faits are taken into view, fo immediatcly preceding, and fo diretty pointing to what took place at Bethlehem, can you hefitate, as honeft meas defiring to do juftice, and feeak impartially between the prifoner at the bar and his country, that he went there, not merely to refcue prifoners, but to execute a part of the general oppolition to that law of the United States? If he has done fe, lic is guilty of Treafon. Let us now attend to the cridence whech frows out of the avowal of the parties chemfelives at Bethlehen at the time of the outrage. Thefe are previous indications, which certainly pint as truly to the intention, as the needle points to the pals.

Two perfons appeared in arims juft at the arrival of the poffe: the Marthal thought proper to take and difarm them: uponbeing queitioned, they anfivered they cane there in order to fee what was bett to be done for the country: They did not cone to allit shakweiler; they did not profefs to have any friendidip, for the primeners, but to fee whether the intereft of the country was to be promuted by tueaion and rebellion. Can there be a flronges proof than this that the object was of a public, and not of a private nature. Keifer faid he heard" it was to be made out about them laws." This is pofitive procf that it was to be fettled. that day, whether the haws or the pecple wese to be triumphant; it they ct uld overawe the marfhal, probably they thought they were to be trim:phant. It is true this was not the dechath of the prifoner at he bar, but of another perfon: upon this you will oberse, that where a great monber entark with one genemal object and deforg, the acts and detamatos of each are chargeate to all, and are proof agant each and all. 6 Terne. cafe of the king againf Sime. Thotigh a manders ne tact or far ofe word, yet abeting the object, it leaves bim equally refomblele for the whele with thofe sho actually fpeak or do. That this defign was of a public nature I farther prove, becaufe it was not this, that, or the cther pifoner they demanded but "the prifoners," withcut knowing who were in the cuffody of the marfhal : they would not go from the ground matil they had the whole of them. After the marflal had liberated them, fuppofing one was lefi, the demand was made for him, and the marnal was forced to give them proof that he was gone. Indeed the conference of Mr. Fries with the marthal is fufficient to flow the cbject, and furcly the applation of his own condut to his own cale will not be diputed. Jamiefon tells you that Fries' own ftery was comefpondent wibh that delivered by the marlhal: referring to the mathal's teftimony it appears that Fries, in comverfation with him, when he delisered up the prifones, expecty avowed that it was not out of any friendhip or atachment, but that his motive, was oppofition to the laws; that the laws were unconftitutional, aid that he would not fubmit to them, and for this reaton he had come to take the prifoners, and he wotild perfevere until he had them. The marhal told him " you will be hanged." He tieated that with contempt, and told him it was not in the power of the Govern. ment, for if they were to fend a militaty force, they would join in oppofition to the law with them, Now this is a delatation of Alt. File, their leader; their fonkefman; their reprefostative, aind hall we not give credit to it? From this declaration, and the concurrent teflimony, I think there cannot be difcovered a crevis at which a doubl is to cnter. Mir. Fries, when be came moto entry, talking loud, and with an importance becoming lis diguity, gave his gencral opiaion upon politic, faying that thole who were now at the lead of ahlaits, were all tor ios during the war, and in this way fund fand with the laws. I do not find fanlt wih the word "tories." I believe it bears analog: with the ridicul, us word "Stamplers," aud ony can tend to fhow the general difappobation exprefled againt the goiemment, but when a vaicty it things concur, of whacer little inporance they may be in themfelie; they are increated by their accumulatise weight, and thus become worthy af notice.

Gentlemen, it is fare her given in eridence that, dume the time they agaimf Mr. Fierly, Mr. Buhbtt and M. Memy, on wheh atcent hic the marhal defid them mot to then themfliew w the pegle : thefe rants of the poope are now in a daterous lituation, the objects of $t$ fentment. Which weitmert, we hase good teafen to caclucie was cocafoned by their ctices miader the government.

Mr. Sitgreares then anfwered fumc of the remarks of Mr. Dallas on the conduct of Mr. Eyerly, and explained away the inconfiftancy of his tefimony. He faid it was clear that John Fiies, the prifoner was an ati.e and influential charatier threugh this dark fene, in which he was recognized by all whowere there, cren by perfons who had not known him befure : he was not meiely an aider and abettor of Tireafon, though that would lave made him guiliy of it, but a leading man; a conductor of the riolence committed.
You will remember that when the marlhal fent fonward a diputation to thofe at the bridge, they were prevailed up no to latt, and attend to their propslitians: when they agreed and promited upon their honours not to pals the bridge until the return of their own deputation from the marthal ; though the horte did goo orer, yet the foot remained uatil the prifoner at the bar came up with his men. He inflantly appeared the prominent, the ative leader of the expedition ; le fetteal the toll with the kecper, and they all went over. When eamusl Tom upbraided Captain Stater at Bathlehem with breaking his word and pafliag the bridge, Lis aniwer was we came over with Captain Fries and the Bucks county perple. When the main body was coming up, he marched at the head of the footnen: when Mr. Mulloullen met them, the an?wer was received from Fries. It was he who was appoiited by them to go to the marthal. Here let me male a remark upon what has been dwelt upon as a circumlance much in his favour ; that is, that Fries always did his atmolt toward the prevention of violence. Let nut the merit of any man's ations be withheld: I agree in that with the council that he has avoided the effufion of human blood, and appeared tn endeavour to prevent every feverity, fo far as was compatible with the accomplifhment of his purpole : Nay, 1 will fay that Mr. Fries has thewn an Urbanity and Humanty towards the affelfors in Bucks county which has done him credit and honour. Dut let us not forget that every fact which difplays his humanity, at the fame time effablifhes his influences, and more-his authority over thofe who were with him. When he came into the room where they were abuling Mr. Cindes, he fays "point out the man who committed this outrape and he fhall be punilhed" when he was gone, they begau upor Mr. Cailds again. At Bethlehem, when he told the people not to go on yet, we find them ober him, and if he had carried it farther, they fill would have obejed him. Thus you fee, gentlemen inftead of this re:ndering himaliftance, it confims his controulover them and makes him principal in the tranfation. Aguin, amidn all his Urbanity did he not execute the whole of his parpafe? Did he not fay "Foulle, you thall be taken" notwithtanding the refiect he had before p:ofeffed ? Did he not, when he faid to M. Childs he was very forry, for what had happened, demand and obtain his papers? Did he not fay to the marfinal, my men flath mot burt you, b:at I will have the priforiers ? As much as to fay all this thall be done as eafly as poffible, but it flati be done. White we almit his humanity on the one hand, we flill find it coupled with his purpere, his determination to obtain his cbject. Twelve nitneffes prove that the prifoner was ative at Bethlehem fo far then it is in full proof by fix times the number the Conftitition calls for. He was not only at Bethlehem a commander, but he was there a volunv teer: he canse thare from a great diftance; he was induftrious, and made a great Sacrifice of his own private intereft to go there; he came out of his own county to accomplith the geineral purpofe for which they had affembled : he went there with all the infirgila of military rank. I have oblerved that he was cmphatically the great fokefman between the Marflal and the people, and therefore he alone was admitted up Itairs; he came out to explain to his men the fuccefs of his embaty : that the marthal had faid he could not comply : that he had arrefted thele people at the command of the judge, and at lat, when the mathal told him he could not deliere them without force, he calls upon them to the oret ; he tells them he would be their leader; bers of them not to fure fift; teils them they muft go through an armed paity on the fairs, and it he thourd drop, they mut fure again, and do as bell as they could for themfelves. In conlequence of his invitation, they went into the houle: and at that critical moment the marfhal delivered up the prifoner to them, to prevent violence.

I need only refer you to the teftimony brourht by the prifoner to prove that he was conllantly active in the grand bitinefs of oppofion throu's the whole courle. He wrote the paper at Kline's and at Eries' to inviee them to go to Bethehem; he warned the affefiors not to go on with their bufinfe, not even to another hule. He declared he had a great regard for them, but it was ayann the law he fhe: ed this baved; to which he faid he never would fubmit. He desed the aromament, telling how mane men he had ready. In conventation with Chapman, he told him the number he coold raif: ; Clatomat told hin it was impoffle; that they cond not c pe with the innor govern ment would fend "we'll try the: who is frongef" lee replied. He went away in a freat paffion when told that the affements wete roing on, then, faid he, it thall foun be as it is in France." He leems to maic anticijated all the horros of a civil war; for when told of the conteque:ces, he taid, if they once began, he knew mot whene it would end. He appared to argue the point with as much zed as whonh he th whot
 "You fhatl not go to another houfe" he faid : but fuding they did go, he attached them at Singmaller's, with a determination io take Rodrick pritoner, hit motakiug him, he let Fonke go whom he had taket, and promifedt: take them the next dar, he took two of them the next day, but let them so sim amie to defit from alleting; at the bane time declarine his detumination mot to fubmit to this law, but that it hould be repeated. 'I he paty then refolied to go to Bethehem, but they did not feparate, till he had procued from them the frgnatures to an engagement to g. aid accumplith the ir purpefe. When on the march to BethleFom, and met by yomg Marls, he was one who perented deir returnake and they achathy did pocece, and gut to Bethehem, where this feene combad.

Here than gentlenen the evidence clofes. We find this man is not of a yeldngicaiure ; he flill centinued in his oppofition even at the time tare was a wommedation to fumbt to the laws: at a meeting at Marks's it wis detemmed to recommend fubmifion to the offeers, and all the laws of the U1 ited States, and to desist from opposition to the lazt, I his is proof that there had been oppolition to the Lads in the thece sounties. Wheta thefe things were do e Mitchell afked Fries if he ever did intend to oppofe the laws. "Yes I din," was his anfiver.

In the teftimony of Mr. Roberts we have proved the general flate of oppofition, as well as the guilt of the prifoner : this w'tnels was called by the prifoner's council. To be fare he proved the prifoner's penitence and fubmifion. If he had not been guity he could not have been penitent. He faid he had not flept for feveralnights: an acknowledgment fo much the more pertinent to prove that he had been doing what he knew was wrong.

Geitlemen of the Jury.-I have endeavoured to flow you this fubject in all the points of view I am able, fo as to give you a right underflanding of the facts; and permit me to declare to you that I have not wilfully perverted either the law or the facts to the beft of my knowledge; yet it is poffible I may have done it, if fo you will be undeceived in thofe particulars by the court.-Gentlemen, you have a folemn duty to n.rform : we have all had a difagreeable and tedious undertaking I pray you to do it in fuch a way as may do juffice to the prifoner and the bar, and at the fame time confider how much the happinefs, the peace, and tranquility of your country, depends upon a fair, impartial and confcientious verdict, which there is no doubt but you will deliver.

Mr. L E W I S.

inith submission to your Honors.
gentilemen of the gurf;

IT is now become my duty to addrefs you on behalf of the prifoner at the bar, who is arraigned before you on the important iffue of Life or 1)eath: I do it with the more confidence, becaule I have not been alle to learn from the council for the profecution, a fingle inftance of Einglih law that comes up to the prefent cale, in good times or in bad times, fo as to denominate it Treafon, except in a determination during the bloody reign of Henry VIII, and that is mientioned among the ails of the time : I have not been able to find it under any exifting circumftances whatever, and yet any perfon who is the leaft acquainted with Englifh liffory or law, muft know that the excife law and the thop tax, as well as lome others, lave led to riot and infurrections, and a variety of trials have been feld upon them. It may be right to make the e:speriment upon the prefent cale ; but, unlefs this profecution is warranted, eftablilhed in good times, and upon folid grounds, I an forry to fay, but truth compels me to declare, that it is a burning torch in the hand of a madman; it is a flaming fivord in the hand of a tyrant, and has done immenle injury in Eugland. I hnow there is n:o intention in the attorncy in this cafe, to do any thing that is wrong; yet I wifh more reflesion had been ufeci, before the puffecution had gore on. Thus it was in England relpecting Hardy, Took, 'Thelwal, and -thers ; thofe who moit underftood the whole of the charges were mot fatisfied to call their crime a mildemeanour, though there was no direct point in ancient or modern law, warranting any other indictment, yet the experiment was tried, but an Englifh jury appreciated ic in its proper light, and they reflsed to do nothing which their ancellors had not donc, not even in the application of confrutive trealon ; and therefore after a mature difullion they returned a verdict oi hit Cuilt:. When, on the prefent cecafion, the cautes and proceediag; are duly confulered, I am litisfied you will fecl it a duty you owe to the prifoner now befure you, and to joul country, to pronomice a like verdiit. It is not becaule a circumfance any way fimilar to this has once taken place, and been argued upon the fame grounds, that therefore it is right it flould take place upon the prefent occalion; adopsing a principle of this kind has often made courts in arbitrary times, take gigantic frides over the fatute of Edward III, fo that a man could not know how to look, act, fpeak, or even think, without difficulty and danger. I have faid that I am not able except during the mandatory reign of Henry VIII, to find the trace of a fingle infance where refcue, under any circumftances whatever, has been found to anount to trealon, and if fucceeding ages did not confider themedves bound by that practice, I trult you will not fit here to eftablith a law, but to give it fuch a confluction as juftice demands of you. I have undertaken this caufe the more readily, becaule I do not undectake to jufifify, to palliate, nor to excule ; but I cenlure the tranfactions which have given rile to this trial as much as the council fer the profecution does: I an fenfible as they are, that thofe people viclated the law whthut caule; and I came not here to let up a mock excufe for them: No, it is my opimion that they merit exemplary puifhmen:, but that punithurint mul be confurmable to law, or, when once the lav is overturnesi, the confequences will be incalculable ; offences liegher than the plecunt may be committed with impunity by fome, while thofe of lefo: rata will be feverely punifhed in others. It is net for me to fay that the primer is entirely inurcent: To me, to the const, and to you it is titail; immaterial whether he has acted wiflly or fodidaly; guily or mancently, if net guilty of the offence upa whech he now Ham, un a hio deliverance. I may be afted here hoo: I came to defend a man; who I almited had violated the law, and in fome degree fie the government at defance. My reafons are thefe: It is the piisildere of ceery mato thate a fair trial, and not to be condemmed wheon beiny head, efrectally in aftairs of an highly criminal nature ; few man arable of definding themfelves before a court, and in a captal caic, firm the proturbation of their minds, fill lefs fo than man osier: And woe betide that cometry, where a man fo clarged thould not be entited to eevery afiftance that he can procure. By the: Ratute of Willim IHI, which is the frof that ever allowed connCl at th, the court were (bligelel to afiga council, who were obliged to 1 inder all the allifunce in their power ; the fame is allowed ly our att of ('ungel;, (p. in. Seat. ay.) Lor without that, he may be confidered ar condenaed unlead, a:d the public mind wound be left unfatisfied as to the iancence or guile of the accuferl. Thofe who have entertainod the furprate I have hineed at, at my being thas eagaged, have doubt-

Iefs acted from the beft of motives, but, not fatisfied with this, and wifh= ing to fpill the blood of a man before he is proved guilty, fome calumviating fcoundrel has, in a public print, had the hardihood, during the prefent trial, so impute to the unhappy prifoner's council, the bafe influence of gold, when all concerned know very well that the prifoner has not a farthing to give, and not a farthing, nor even a promife of any, was ever given to thofe who have undertaken his defence. I will fay no more refipecting this vile attempt, but that the law fays no publication fhall take place which may tend to infuence a court or jury, while a trial is pending, and therefure it is an high contempt thrown upon the court, and upon you, and the probability is that either the author or the publifher will be brought to anfiwer for his conduct.

There is one thing, gentlemen, I would wifh to caution you againf : there are many citizens who fuppofe that the troops will never turn out again unlefs a conviction takes place on the prefent occafion, and that an infurrection will foon appear again: but this is paying a poor compliment to our volunteer troops, to fuppofe they would not be fatisfied without fhedding blood: Gentlemen, let no arguments or confiderations have weight with you but what are fupported by law, and then decide, regardlefs of the confequences. Another matter I would caution you againf, is one with which I found very confiderable difficulty to copr, but at length I divelted myfelf of it, and I pray you to do the fame: I mean all kind of prejudice as to the party tried and trying. Our Connflitution, and our laws, are wifely calculated to preferve the happinefs and interef of ourfelves and poltericy : our Govermment is compofed of tried patriotic characters, and our political bark, with fuch men at the Jelin, need not fear a florm; but notwithflanding this, $' t$ is villified and abufed: Thefe are grounds for prejudice to work upon, and it is diffcult, I can fay by experience, to avoid its influence; but when we come to the facred temple of Juftice, even if to decide between $A$ and $B$, on a matter of trifing property, we are fworn to an impartial and unprejudiced decifion ; and how much more is it demanded of us in a cate of life and death? It is neceflary to enter that temple divefted of opinion or bias, otherwife there is not a fair fcope for our reafonable faculties to aat, nor can our confciences be acquiterd of guilt. I will take the l:berty of reminding you that your oath is "that you will well and truIf try, according to evidence;" this obliges you to expel every thing from your minds which you might have heard out of doors relpecting the whole bufnefs of the infurrection, excepting fuch only as is proved by the evidence. Your prefent fituation, gentlemen, inpoofes upon you a duty which is highly important ; important as it concerns your couniry, the prifoner, and likewife yourfelves: it concerns him, becaufe his hife or death is, in fome meafure placed in your hands; it is upon your ierdit it depends whether he flall continue with induftry to fpend the remainder of his life with his family and friends, or whether he mult leave them all, and be fufpended between heaven and earth to a gazing multitude. Your decifion is of importance to your country, becaufe we are now treading upon the dangerous, and, 1 had almofl faid, unbeaten ground of conftructive treafon, and becaule it may and will operate as a p.ecedent to future priseedingi. Nor is it feis imprortant to yourfelves becaufe, if owing to honef intention, and miftaken views you fhould go farther than a reflecting moment would dictate, in fome circumftance of a public nature which might possibly occur, the work would be irretrievably done, the reflection would come too late, and pardon would be out of the queftion.

I will now proceed to confider the particular cffence imputed in the indictment to John Fries, the prifoner at the bar, by which he mult be convicted, if at all. [Mr. Lewis, here read the indictment.] To this indifment he has pleaded not guilty, and you are fiworn to decide upon the iflue. The queftion is not whether he has, or has not been guilty of a riot, or refcue: he may have been guilty of an high mifdemeanor, of this or the other defeription, but the queftion is, has he ordered, prepared, and levied war againft the United States? That is the language of our confitution, and the act of congrefs formed thereupon. In order to infure the conviction of this man at all events, it has been flated to you, ana that with no friall degree of confidence, that, as the framers of our conflitution have adopted the words of the Englifh flatute, the courts are bound to admit the expolitions which have taken place upoin it, from time to time in the Englifh courts: though we have laws of our own, yet in order to know the true meaning of our conflitution we are to go back into the remoteft and moft dark ages of Englifh hiftory, to underfand its meaning! The Englifh ftatute, or the opinions of the courts of jultice are equally become part of the code in that country it is true, and it was as poffible for the framers of our conflitution to have extended the one as the other to this country, had they chofen fo to do, but their not doing it, is a prefumptive proof that it was not acceptable. To me it appears flrange that while the Englifh flatute is not in force here, the Englifh coniftruction of that flatute fhould! that is a pofition I never mean to fubfribe, but controvert it from the beginning to the end, of this cafe. As we have enacted laws of our own, and have not extended the laws of England to this country, we muft put our own confruction upon them, and not the determination of an Englifh court. Neither the Englifh laws, nor the opinions of Englifh judges are to be regarded any farther than is confiffent with our good, to appreciate which the fituation of the times when thofe opinions were given, and whether the judges were dependant or independant are important confiderations. I do not mean to fund fault with Englifh decitions in general : I believe that with regard to property, fince the judges have been rendered independant of the crown, it is as wifely adminiftered as the laws of any part of the globe are: but they were not always in a fituation to give impartial opinions, when they held their fation at the will of an arbitrary monarch, who could haften or delay caufes at his pledfure, to which the judges were the mof oblequious tools. Such has been the decifons of fome periods refpecting treafon. But it is not true that the very words of the Englifh flatute are adopted in our contitution ; they very materially differ : the ftatute of Edward III, does not provide that confeflion muft be made in open court if received at all: it does not fpecify that two witneffes fhall be neceflary to eflaLlith the fact, but it was left to the court upon principles of common lais: nor does it fay a fingle word about an overt act. Since, then, the two flatutes are fo diffimilar in important points, it would be very wrong to admit of the fame confruction in both. So careful was our government of the lives of our citizens, viewing the iujuries other countries had fuftailed by indefinite laws, they provided that the crime fhould be put in the indictment, and fupported by the teftimony of two witneffes In England there might be one witnet's to one overt act, and another to another.

But I flall now proceed to fhow what does, or what does not amount to levying war: in doing this, we are not to go back to corrupt times, under corrupt judges, nor do I think the obfervations of thofe judges are in the leaft obligatory upon our courts, but how far they will be refpected, in another queftion; we may reft affured they will be regarded no farther than reafon will fuggef. This I confider of importance, not only at prefent, but to pofterity. Moft of our laws, it muft be remembered, are from England, and were brough with our anceftors as their birth-right: this was the cafe wherever Britifh fubjects emigrated, but as foon as we became independant ftates, we enacted laws of our own, although in a great degree copied from Britill fates, but they became new under our confitution.
I think gentlemen, I hall be able to flew you, upon the opinions of men found in law knowledge in England, that the definition of treafon in our conflitution will not bear the conftraction that has been put upon theirs at an early period. We have an exprefs and diftinct meaning of this crime in our own acts of Congrefs. An act paffed 1790 (Vol. ı, page 100). Sect a flows what treafoi is, and particularifes wherein it fhall conlift. Sect. 5 defines the punifhment which fhould be inflicted on a refcue of perfons committed to cuffody, or in the hands of the officer. But there was another act paffed defining the precife circumflances attending this cafe, this was paffed after the declaration of the judges on the cale of the weftern infurrection, and from its being enacted fubfequent to all others upon this ipecies of crime, appears to me to be binding upon our courts: I mean the Sedition act. It appears to reach the prefent cafe in the fulieft extent; the language of that act is, whoever thall combine or confipire, &c. fhall be guiky of a high mifdemeanor: this ait does not fipecify the rumber: a townlhip, a county, or twelve counties equaily is within the law. Combining to prevent the exccution of the law: this reaches the action, whatever may be the number or force ufed: it is a misdomianor and flall be punilled with fine and imprisonment, not death. Whether the object finll or fhall not be effected, the law fays the puniflnment flall be the fame. Here then is a folemn declaration made by the legiflaturc itelf, the fame body that enacted the punifhenent of dealh to what they termed treafon by a prior law, and firely that authority lad the gratef right to put a coaftraction on, or make an alteration i: their on law. If there io a legal defintion of the crime committed by the prifomer at the bar, has act contains it: exery cale is here prosided tor by the panmache of fiee and mprifonmeat, and had a pofention then phere mate this at, a conviction

Under this head of Englifl conftruction, I would afk how it can apply to us, when we confider that before the act of William III, no perfon charged with high treafon was allowed council to plead for him, unlefs he ftated fome objection in point of law which made an argument neceffary, and even then he could not do it without firft admitting the truth of the fact charged againft him, and yet all the decifions of Englifh courts alluded to were formed before that period! Further. Not only was the accufed not allowed council, but if he had hundreds of the moft refpectable witneffes to prove the falfity of the allegations, he never had a right to bring them forward untill the reign of William III. Thefe decifions, gentlemen, of the Englifh courts, which are called up as precedents for us to regard, were formed under thefe arbitrary circumflances: No council allowed even though the prifoner was deaf and dumb, nor witneffes; if he could even prove he was hundreds of miles diftant at the time. Further, to thow what dependance can be placed on the fayings of thefe men, you will obferve that untill the time of William III. all the judges held their commifions during royal pleafure only, and even untill the furf of George III, the judges were never compleatly independant, and of courfe were obliged to fludy the royal pleafure ; their opinons being extorted before the trial commenced. The confequence of all this is plain, that no impartial opinion could be given. It was common before trial firft to clolet thefe dependant judges and bring them to fubmifion, if their mpinions ran counter. Bacon, the greateft, wifeft, but meaneft of mankind, thus fooped to become the tool of his mafter. Thofe who could not thus be brought over were defpifed, and more obfeguious perfons placed in their room, and it was not 'till they could have a decifion thus formed that perfons were brought on their trial for high treafon. And yet we are referred to thefe perfons to tell us what is the mexuing of our own fatute on treafon! Thus it was that many of the bef citizens of England fell a facrifice, and for no other purpole, many of them, tha: beraute they poffefed exaled virtue. During the exiftence of this flate of things, the judges would fet filent on their bench during a trial for life, and hear the crown officers, inftead of acts and expreffons of homanity to the unhappy prifoner, abule him with the moft oprobrious and infuling languare. Influenced by this meannefs, Sir Edward Coke, while attorney general, defcended to abule the great and good Sir Walter Raleigh, with the vie epithets of Traitor, Fiper and Spider of bell, Sc. turning away from him with the greatelt form: and this was the maner in which trials were commonly managed. See Fofter, 234 .

It was well known that the flatute of Falward III, made no provifion whatever refecting the charging of an overt act in the indictment, nor does it fay any thing about proof, but a flatute enaited in the reign of ld ward VI, made two witnelles neceflary in cales of high tieafon, but Fofter lays no great regard was paid to this better flature 'till near a century aiter, and the reaton affigned was that it was not for the fateif of the crown, or to the common well known rules of laral evidence. It was common wadmit one witnefs of his own havledge, and another by hearfay, if it was even from the mouth of that one, and at the third or fouth hand, and frequently the depotatis were taken out of court to be read, rather than bring them into open court. This muft appear an uncommon reprefentation of the adminiftration of juftice, but it is a fair picture of the times under which the decifions took place which are brought againft us. At the period in which the feven bifhops were tried, lord Cambden declares that junfice Yowel was the only honeft man that fat on the bench. Bleffed juflice ! I know that fince the judges have become independant men in England, there has been as much independance in their conduct as in any country; but then, as Hale tells us, thefe decifions had already taken place, and therefore they mult oeabode by ; but he takes care to caution future judges how they introduced new cales by putting new conftructions. The queftion now is, whether this court and jury are prepared to be bound by judges thus principled and thus circuinftanced, to form a decifion upon our own law:. I contend that thefe decifions are by no means binding upon t:s, we have the fedition law, which comprehends the whole cafe. In y Hale 132, and i Blackifone 69, it appea:s to be lamented that the independant judges of later days have no power to alter the rules of law eftabiifed in the dark ages of Englifl jurilprudence, othersife, we have reaton to believe, they would not be in exiftence at this day. Loid Kenyon, when council for lord George Gordon, declared, that he did not think the parliament of Edwa:d III, cver had any detign that confructive treafon fhould exif at all, or any wifh to leave room for it to be introduced. We are certainly, therefore, unentrammelled by every foreign rule, otherwife the quefion would be, what rules we flould adopt, and what not. It is a rule in law that fatutes affecting life, fhould nerer extend beyond the letter of the law, fo as to leave the poffibility of a doubt. If that is a rule refpeciing penal ftatutes in general, ab ndant more fo is it neceflary refpecting the high crime of treafon. Above all things, if bad times flould even happen in this country, and bad times may come here as well as they have in all other countrics, it will be of vafl importance that the law thould be known precifely: it will be of conlequence to a citizen to know on what law lie is to be tried, if he becomes the devoted object of any one's refentment, or commits a crime: it is of confequence that the flood gates of ufurpation and tyranny fhould atever be left open, and the liberties of our citizens be thrown away ad libitum on the uncertain ground of conftruction. I Blackftone 88. Fofter 58. we read that it ought to be "clearer than life ittelf."

We now come to examine the true, full, juft, aidd reafonaole meaning of our own treafon flatute ; for $I$ do not admit that conftructive treafon ought to exift at all. A line is drawn, and if we ever crofs it, where are we to ftop? Treafon againf the United States, we find, confifts in "levying war againint them, &c." The queftion is, what is levying war? Levying war may fairly extend to the three following things:

Firtt. Where a body of men take up arms, and array themfelves in a mahal manner againf the governnout, with a view to put an end to i:: exiftence. This is its plain natural meaniug, but cannot be faid to hase been tranfacted by the prifoner at the bar, and therefore requires no father definition.
Scondly. It is exprefst leveing an, if a pati of the union, throw Glall allygance and autbority of the Uinted Stitos, totally difregarding its laws and inflitutions, and act as a divided people as though they did not belong to them.
Thirdy. Where laws have been enacted by the union, purfuant to the Conttitution of the United States, and a number of people, being diflatisfied, flould, of their own authority, by numbers, or force of arms, tahe poffifion of the legillative or executive authority, and by this furce of arms or numbers fhould undertake to compel either of the departments of governnent to act as they dictate, thus robbing the government of its legitimate power, by afluming it themfelves.

No doubt the good of pofferity was intended in the conflitutional deGiation of treafon, and we are to touch it with a trembling hand indeed, leit it moulder, and grow into, God knows what. Now, as this is an ast which was deliberately formed, if we go upon the dangercus ground of conftruction, that camot be done fo deliberate: No, I fay it was to be handed down pure to poferity, and we ought not even to depart from a letecr of it. If liberty of conftrution is to take place in any degree, by fo much it tends to render the conflitution vague and uncertain, and we kn w not where it will end. If the conftitution only intended the three defnitions of levying war which I have laid down, it is clear that a man cannot overttep thofe conflitutional limits without intending to do it. Gu, beyond this, and you leave jurors and judges to make the conftitution any thing and nothing: a mere nofe of wax, to be moulded into any form at their will, and they may be excufed, becaufe left to exercife their own judgment upon it, but lord Hale has charged you not to do this, even though encouraged by a parity of realoning: agreeable to his apprehenfions, it is deducible that if ever we have a bad prefillent, pretidential encroachunent may wreft the conflitution to every thing that may ferve any particular purpole. But God forbid either flould ever bapies.
Siating thefe as exprefily levying of war, (and I know of no other) I call upon the profecutors to produce a fingle iuflance, except in the inconfilient reign of Hemry V III, wherein the refcue of one or more pitivers, by one or more people, has ever been faid to amount to treafun. I may go farther, and afk thofe gentemen whether a refufal to obey the law, and refilt the officers who came to execute it has eve: been called treafon but by themfelves? We find that universality, a defigin to pull down a.l prifons, &c. is requifite to make the offence treafon: it is only a general oppoftion to the government. But why are we to look for univerfality if we are to take a cafe like this, and call is icealon? If an ofitcer of the government, (agreable to this doctrine) froes to execute procefs, and that procels is relifted by one individual? does he net deny the authority of the government? Yes, as much fo as though 50 or ico were engaged in it : the whole intent the mal amens being exercited to refift it, it becones treaton. The offerce now chaiged confitutes nothing more nor lef's than oppofition to leğal authority. The pulling down of a fingle meeting houfe, a fingle bothel, or a fingle prifm, wats not allowed to be a denial of the authority of the gricmant in antent ulage, but when it was done with a general intent, $i$ i becance trealon. Now we contend that except the univerfality and generality of delign in the atit charged can be pointed out, it does nut amount io treafon. When I faid I know of no cafe whatever when refiting the execution of law amounted to treafon, I fhould have mentiomed the exception of refifting the militia lav: this muft be confidered in a light of refifing the army, becaufe it is part of the general army that this law provides, and oppofing the army in any way would be treafon, but refifting or oppofing any other lavs is only a midemeanor, except an attempt be nade to fubvert all laws. Gentlemen, I repeat the exhortation; beware of conftructive treafon; it is a dangerous thing to admit into our tribunals; it is like the fyythe of death, levelling alike the great and frall, the guilty and innocent: whoever reads its hiftory will fee war, famine and peftilence; a dangerous difeale without a medicine to cure it : beware how you eftablifh a fyftem in which your proreny, as well as yourfelves, are materially interefted. If it were pollible for pofterity to glance an eye on the proceedings of this day, no doubt but they would wonder, and await the important event with anxiety: It is putting your liberties into the hands of tyrants, if tyrants flould ever torment this country, to prevent which you are now called upon to effablifh a rule for preventing injuftice, fhould injuftice ever appear. Montefquie fays

4 Blackftone 75

The reafon of this is plain; it is the point made ufe of by a government when it becomes corrupt, and fhould be difoofed, by taking advantage of its power, to injure the people. Where conftructive treafon is not allowed, there can be no ground for apprehenfion from that dangerous weapon. But we are told that by adopting the words of the ftatute of Edward III, (which is not the cafe) we have admitted all the authorities of the courts of Great Britain. This I deny, we read the confequences of fuck a proceeding throughout the Englifh books: See Keeling 7. Hale 134. 4 Blackflone $75,79,80$. When once this dangerous principle was introduced, the courts foon ran to enormous extremes: and fhould you pronounce the prifoner guilty to morrow, it would be the eftablifhed law of the United States, fo far as a jury could do it. But there is one thing worthy of your notice : the parliament of Edwand III, from the experience they had, defined treation in as clear terms a: they could, they did not know but new cafes might arife, in which cafe they provided what no honeft judge could object to; they provided that if new cafes fhould arife, the judges flouid not call it treafon untill the the parliament had determined it to be fo; fo extremely were they afraid of conftructive treafon that they would not truft a judge, even if there was a fimilarity to former cafes, nothing was to be left to conftuction, or be called treaton by the courts but direct levying of war. But the parliaments were fo much under the crown that it could have been more lafely trulted to the courts. However we are not bound either by the flatutes of Edward III, or William III, becaufe, as Iftated before, they are nut in force here, much lefs the decifion of the judges or the parliaments under them: We muft put a confruction upon our own flatute. alone confining it to the exprefs word of levying war. This is an ir portant queftion, and you are required to deliberate fairly and fully, uninfluenced in any manner whatever, but by your confciences.
Judge Hale a p ry makes ditinction between exprefs and coalructive reton: you will there fee that the time whea conftructive evafon began and flourifhed, was in thofe dark, gloomy, troublefome and bloody days, when Eugland was drenched with the blood of her belt citizens; when the foil was enriched with their gore, and yet to authorities paffed at fuch times are we referred by the council for the profecution, and upon thofe authorities are we to place our Conflitutional definition of treafoin. Eibhancing fervants wages was one of the cafes thofe gentlemen relied on, and we admit that it was denominated treafon to rife for that purpofe. Suppofing that conftruction was not pronounced by the king or by his judges, but by the moit upright decifion, how might it operate on this cafc? Why, we admit that wherever a body of men in arms go and furround the legillative or executive authority, to compel the repeal of a law, it would be levying war: the wages of fervants in thofe days was fixed by ait of Parliament, and it could not be enhanced legally, but by an act to do it, and therefore any. armed mob, going for the purpofie of obtaining this object, is a treafonable affembly, becaufe the object is to compel parliament to alter the law. Another definition referred to, is the pulling dowa inclofures, prifons, &cc. generally. In referrence to that I would ak if the one now before the court is not a new cale? If it is not I am at a lofs to find a new cafe. It has even been held that any number of men affembled to refcue any number of perfons, provided they did not gio with a view of proffrating all prifoners, and releating pritimers generally, is only a great riot. It is a new cafe in England, and it is fo here, and therefore ought to be cautiounly hatded. 6 Hume to2. in the cale of Lord Stafford.

I fhall now proceed more particularly to flate my reafons for alledging that the crimes with which the prifoner is charged are fully comprehended, and punifment provided for them in the Sedition law. This I fhall comilider frith, as it relates to the relcue independantly: Seconely I hall make fone obfervations on the law, independant of the refcue, and thirdly, both togecher.

It is alinited, that the mele refcue of the perfons from the cuffody of the marhal at Bethleter, would not amount to treafon, and it would not be necefiary fior me to lay a word about that were, it not for the following realins. Speaking of pulling down meeting houfes, brothels, prifons, \&ic. the cime is detined: + Blackitone $\mathbf{1 2 9}$, "offences againft puibic juftice, is wistrucing the execution of lawtul procefs." . This, there can be no doubt, is an offence at common law, and perfons found guilty of a reicue of a perfon convicted of a crime, is adjudged guilty of the fame crime, and would be puniflable accordingly, had it nor been for our act of Congrefs, (the Sedition act) but that act reduces a refcue, generally, to miidemeanor. But agreeable to law, perfons reficuing others not committed for tretilon, does not amount to treafon. A cafe in 4 Blackftone 86. the party iimfelf was guilty of felony at common law by making efcape, but I believe it to be an entire new doctrine to make the ofence of the accefiories or adiffants higher than thofe who are reicued : Reicue of perfons for felony has been always felony, treaYon, treafon, \&c. I think therefore it is clear to prove that every exertion has been ufed to attempt to make trealon of this crime, by the gentionch, tut it is ascitur that they lave fiarched and tried in vaik.

But it is farther faid, that this bufinefs affurned a generality, and that the object was to defeat a law of the United States, for which purpofe a number combineil and confuired together, and more effectually to accomplifh this they refcued the prifoners, and therefore committed treafon. Were I to admit this I nuight call upon the gentleman to fupport his conclufions by authority, to fhow that preventing the execution of procefs, or releafing prifoners before they were carri ed to jail, is treafon. I repeat that the only cale mentioned is in the difgraceful days of Henry VIII. which I think is inadmiffible. But I deny the fact: I deny that there was any combination or confipiracy between the people of lower Milford in Northampton county and thofe of Bucks county at all upon the bufinels. Firft, the people of both counties were alike averfe to this law, and for fimilar reafons. I believe there are many unprincipled men who wilh to injure their country, and go about preaching up fedition to the people, which communicated in different directions, catch fire in the tame mamer, and perhaps at nearly one period; hence it is that their prejudices and oppofition may anpear from the fame caule, without parties holding the leaft correfpondence. I ank you whether there is a tittle of evidence to prove that ever the prifoner went into Northampton county till this circumfance occurred ? was there any communication by writing, or any other way? no, not at all. Upon wlat foundation can a conjecture arife then, that there was a combination? You are not to try by conjecture, or wild fuppofition : No, you are fworn to "well and truly try according to evidence." Does it appear, I afk you to recollect, gentlemen of the jury, that he was inftigated to this conduct by any intercourfe in any way held with Northampton county? No, it does not ; but there is a ftrong prefinption that the difcontents took root and grew to that flate without any combination at all. But whether or not treafin was commited in Aiilford townflip, is not for you at prefent to fay ; the overt act is laid at Bathlebem, and there it muft be proved, that ho levyed war upon the United States with a number, or by force fufficient for the purpole, and that with them he combined and confpired, $\$ c \cdot$. If he did this at all, he did it on the gth of March, for it does not appear that he ever was there before in his life; now if there was a confipiacy, it mult appear that he acted previounly and in concert with others, and the act would have been alike chargeable to all; but this coes nut appear. It is true liies was heard to fay "we will oppofe you, and all the people of "Northampton will join us," but this could eafly arife from his having heard that the people of Northampton were diffatified with the law, but it does not follow that, becauie there were difcontents in Nionthampten county, he flould be refyonfible for their actions, partirularly fince it all, at leait, depends upon conjecture. Ketling ig has a cafe to anfwer this, where rebellion exifted in two parts at one :ime, but it was determined that this might happen without correfpoidence, fince no fuch evidence appeared, aind therefore no notice was taken of it. Then, gentlemen, if I were fir a moment to admit that John Fries had committed trealon in Bucks county, which I deny, it would be immaterial upon the prefent cccalion, beraufe upon every iindictment for treafon, the overt act muft be proved in the courity. But it is faid that doctrine does not apply, each flate being to the whole United States, as a county to the ftate, becaufe the grand jury have the difurict at large to inquire for; and therefore it is immaterial whe her laid in one county or the other. If this be found law, dreadful indeed muft be the fituation of the people of the United States, if the government fhould ever fall into different hands from thefe in which it is now happily placed, becaufe an attorney may, at any time, keep a perfon, arraigned for a capital offence, in ignorance, till he comes to the place of trial, and of courfe not be prepared to repel it at a very diftaint place from where the act is laid. But this, I will be bold to fay, cannot be law. My reafons for thinking fo are, Firft, the law of Congrefs called the judiciary act, fect. 29, vol. i. page 67, fays, that in cales punifhable with death, the trial fhall be had in the county where the offence was committed:" here I would remark that the law takes notice, not of a State or a diftrict, but of a county, and therefore the analogy drawn by Mr. Sitgreaves, that a diftrict to the United States, is the fame as a county to a fate, is not in point. The trial is to be had in the county whlefs the judges fhall determine that it cannot be had there without great inconvenience, (See Fofter 194) but let the offence be where it may, twelve jurors mult be fummoned from the county, fee 237 of the fame book : if we examine thefe authorities they will appear different from what they were reprefented. 2 Hawkins C 46 , lect. 34 , is an authority to prove that upon a plea of not guilty to a fuecific charge as to place, $\delta_{\mathrm{E}} \mathrm{c}_{*}$ in an indictment, if the leaft variance appears from that place, it is fufficient to acquit the party, and is fatal to the profecution. It is not neceffary for me again to lay that you are totally to exclude from your views whatever the pritoner did in Bucks county, fince the charge is laid in Nortbampton, and fince an acquittal from that charge will not prevent a profecution in Bucks county. If it appears that no trealon was commitred by him on the 7th of March at Bethlehem, you mult pronounce him not guilty.

Mr. Lewis then reviewed the teftimony of Dellinger on the circumfances which led to the expedition to Bethlehem, which be contended had nothing to do with it, fave the quo animo. It appeared that they heard Shankwieler was to be there, but it is not pretended that going there upoi that acc: unt would be treafon, and particularly as Shankwieler was not in, cuftody, and it does not appear that the prifoner knew of any others being there at that time. Then the object particularly was to fee Shankwieler. When they came to the bridge, it appeared to them that two men were detained at Bethelehem, and it feems they went forward to refcue them. In this they were juftifiable; for if the law was violated, it was by Major Nicholls, in making an arrelt which the law did not authorize him him to do. They were illegally detained, and it was lawful for any body to go and refcue them. 2 Lerd Raymond, 130 . I am not difpoled to blame the marflal ; but I cannot jullify him in point of law : his lituation, no douiot, rendered it a prudent meafure; but it was detaining men by falle imprifonment, and was enough to alarm all the people of the flate. I mention the circumflance only to prove that there oan be no refcue, unlefs the perions liberated are legally confusd.

Inftead of Fries being guilty for that action, a very worthy man (the marlhal) was guilty of affault and battery in the act of detention. If this is fact, how does the affair ftand afterwards refpecting univerfality and defign? I have juftified Fries and the others in leaving the biidge to go up to Bethlehem, and the laws of their country will juftify them, becaufe it does not appear that they knew thefe people were diccharged. When they got to Bethlehem, it appeared there were a number of perfons under arreft; for, it does not at all appear in evidence that they ever heard before that Fox, Ireman, or the Lehi prifoners, were there: The gentlemen on the other tide only prefiume it ; but you, gentlemen, muft not go upon prefimption. "You muft " well and truly tiy, and true delivirance make, according to evi"dence." It does not appear they knew of it; they came from a great diftance, and from quite another part of the country than where the Bucks county people came from ; Fox and Ireman had been juft brought in, and none of them knew they were there : however, when they were got there, upon a laveffll occasion, hearing of a number of perfons being confined there, and that they were to be taken to Philadelphia for what they confidered to be no crime, they generally waxed wa:m, but Fries was conl, he endeavoured to pacity them: he had brought his fword with him, but when he was appointed an embaffidor of peace to treat with the marthal, he left it belind him.

The whole of the tranfation muft be viewed as a fudden affray, like numerous cafes mentioned in I Iale, Fofler, \&sc. where great and fudden riots arole. Where is the proof, I afk, of combination, of affociation or of correfpondence? None at all: they cane there to a man without the lealt trealonable views, for it was merely by chance they came there at all. There was much rage among the people upon the firt impreffions, the knowledge of the prifoners in cuftody made, and had it not been for the cool couduct of the prifoner at the bar, blood and maflacre would have been the immediate confequences, for no doubt liquor was operating pretty much in their brains. An altercation took place : they infilled on the prifoners, and in the profecution of his telegation, from the preremptery demands of the people, he made ufe of language which I admit was ungullifiable, and violating the law, fir which he ought to be punilhed, but not with death. I Hale $153^{\circ}$ But further: the perfons wese not in prifon, they were only in cuftody If the marflal : thefe are materially diftinct; the relealing of perfons taken to prifon, is only a miflemeanor while releating them after they are in prifion, which is in fome meafure the finctuary of the luw, is felony: 4 Blackfone $\mathbf{1}_{3} 3$. The breaking open of pritions generally is treafon, but ian cate is the releating prifoners before they ace taken there. Kecling 75. 63 . Lord Gondon's tialal, Demarree's wit 4 ftate trials 84 and 900 . It wuvid n:ot have been treafon, the: fore, if a number of petions had actually conipired to refcue thefe prituers from the marthal, nor even if they had been confued in a saol, inflead of a room, becaufe it wis nat a geicral delign to break opea all prifons, but gie only: but on the cuntrary they were not in prifon they were only in cuftedy of the cfficer who ferved the procels; how then, in the mane of realoa an coman twate with be made to amount to treafon when it would not, if they had been in gaol. But fays the gentlemen, we will not call it refcuing of prifoners, but a general obftruction of the execution of the law, and the means here uled was to lupport that general object. The refcue is of itfelf a fpecific offence, and of itfelf admitted by Mr. Sitgreaves to be only a mifdemeanor. If it is fo, how is it poffible to convert a mifdemeanor into a treafon, and thus to take away the life of a man when imprifonment only is bisdefert! But what ground is there alledged for this polition? It is faid that the arming aind arraying a number of men was with this intent. I deny the fact, and it has by no means been proved. The cales referred to in England are treation to a demonftration. Euhanfing fervant wages could not be done by force but by furrounding the parliament houfe, and this was juffly denominated waging war againf the king. Any rifing to alter religion miff be effected the fame way: Religion is eftablifhed by haw in England, and that law munt be altered by the parliament, therefore it could not befforcibly altered but by levying war. 4 Blackltane 8 I . Reforming the laws muf be done the fa:se, if at all. 1 Hank. Ci7. fect 25. fee Erkine in Gordon's trial 32. Whot ouly open rebellion, but refifting the laws as enacted is trealon. The lavs are a proof of the authority of the commonwealth, and reflang hoie las is making the parties independant of the commonwealth, and therefure a defiance of the authority of the flate. Lurd Mausfield in the charge on the fame trial fays, among other enumerations, that cormbitiations, $\& \mathrm{Fc}$. to arref the execution of militia lave: is treaion. This Arengly merits obfervation. Why does the learied and experienced Lad Ma:cfield particularly fpecify militia laws and no other? Why does he not fay to arreft the execution of any la:x? Why the militia lav? For the beft of all reafons, the fame reafon as the taking or attackins a fort or a caftle belonging to the king, becaufe that is the place where he keeps his military forces, and becaule the military is the frengel of the kingdom, and this is relifing the military authority. Therefore it muf be allowed that a refiftance of militia laws are upon a very different footing than any others, and in time of danger refifing this lav would prevent the militia being diawn into the field when there is occafion fur them.
Now, gentlemen, the fe things all confidered plainly thow that what is now attemped is a moel experiment, like modern philofophy. an entire new thing, laving the folitary inftance in the reign of Henry VIII, and it is cleir that the refilance of no law is trealon, but the militia law. I agree allo with the doctrine Lord Mansfield lays down that any attempt to oppofe the laws by intimidation and violence is levying war, and treaimo

It is umeceflary for me to turn to the books to prove that confel. fion of the party, or words fyoken by him, taken perhaps in the time of fear, are not to be regarded by you. This was fo plainly improper, that the law of William III, mak.ug two witnefles neceffary, or confeffico in open court, was entacted: Ineed only turn to our own laws (judiciary att.) There mu't be onc of two kinds of proof: the party in open court mult confef, for comfefion out of court cannot avail even if made before 12,600 vitueffes: or elfe two witteffes muft prove the fame overt act, and he muft be convicted upon that indiament, if any. If you are to go to all parts of the country for heated words, heard by any body, in any circumflances, I muff confider it as a very fcandalous abule of the flatute of Edward III. I think it impoffible to hefitate at what was the meaning of Congrefs when they made this act, and therefore flall barely recur to the evidence.

Here is a proof, that the prifoner came $u_{j}$ to Bethlehers, whe:e he acted in a certain manner; but the gentlemen concerned for the profecution, think that does not fufficiently indicate his'delign, and therefore they travel to Jacob Fries's, to Kline's, and a number of other places: now fuppofe you convict him, I intreat you to irquire from what evidence you do convict him? Is it from the overt act committed at Bethlehem, or from that and other circumftances together? If this is the broad ground upon which you go, do you convict him upon the evidence of two witnefles, to the fame overt act, tranfacted at the fame place? No, you do it upon the evidence of two, and a number of other evidence befides, on a variety of circumftances. Let me fuppofe for a moment, that two wituefies had come forward, and given an account of his conduct at Bethlehem, but that evidence 'was not fufficient to anfiver the indictment: you hear of fuch and fuch conduct at Maker town, at Kline's, &c. &cc. I afk, would he have been convicted upon the evidence of thofe two independent of any other? No, he would not. This is by no means agreeable to the Hatutes of William III, or Edward VI, and in my view totally jnadmilible. What is the confequence of fuch a verdict? Why, a man charged with murder, afiault or what not, may know who the witneffes againt him are, while one charged with treaton, the higheft poflible crine, may not know, if you can travel from town to town, and from county to county for the evidence ; if yoa can bring corrifondence, &c. from every part, of which the prifoner knew n thing until brought before the count. No man would be fafe in we admiffion of fuch things, but you mult form your opinion alune from the evidence of two witneffes telating to the act committed at Bethlehern agreeable to the indictment. 'H he flatutes, aiad our act of Congrefs mean and intend to prevent this kind of rambling over the wionle ftate for evidence, or indeed upon the doctrine of the genteman, nutwithfanding the act fays other wife, they can with equal propriety go throughout the L'nited States to colleit evidence to fuppert the profecution, which was never feen mor heard of befure.

I now coatend, gentemen, that the cafe of the pifouer a: the bar dees not come within the finsute of treafon; and I allo contend that it does come within one of two other acts, for the juticiary att 22 and 23 fections, page 109 , vol. i. fpeaking of reliftance of proceis and refcue, compleatly extends to the prifoner. No, fay the gen Smen, it is not a mere refcue, but a reicue for certain intentions and detigns. Have the Comgrefs diftingu:lied any particular delign, or bave they ant in this haw? No they hare nut: then permit me to fay where Congrefs hase not diftinguibied it, nor the books, it is not for judges nor juries to dittirguifh : it belonged to Congrefs to make or except fuch cafes as they theyghe priper, they have not thought proper ; aud au lane no right whenta to do it.

But leit any objection hoould appear of weight to except it from the judiciary act, there is a very grod law, but which has been finauefully villifed and abufech, called the fedition bill, providing fine and imprifonment for any high mifidemeanor, under which, as I obferved before, the very actions of the priisuer are defined. This att has pafied liuce the trials of the weflem mingents in 1794, fo that the upinions of the judges cefpeciung treation at that time, is mof clearly and fairl; fuperceded by his ant, which has pointed out, whatever has hert iofive caufed doubts about the meaning of treafon in the flatute, and thus put an end to auy judicial conflruction. That at provides, that if any perfons flouli, cunbine or configire together, to impede the operation of any laiv of the L'..ised Siute, or to intimidate ary perfous hutaing places or ofite:s whilu the United States-This lant, is one of the many little things culleited tugether, in order, that when brought men a mais, they may anaunat to treaton-it goes on, that if they hould advife, attempt, or procure any infurrection, riot, or unlawtul alltenbly or combinat:on, he or they thall be deemed guilty of an bigj misclenhiawr. The very crines which are here enumerated are charged upun Joln Fries, the priviner at the bar: webetber it is carri.d into effect or not. Now, if aly ait or delcription can be more juft than this, I flould wonder; it anivers precifely every part of the crime charged, and every concominant cincumitance. Now the queftion is, whecher or not, as the cunfliaution did not define the punidmeit of treatin, and as a mildemeanor is delinibed here, to be what fome have thought uled to be levging war, and as the puilhment is le:s, than what the other hav refpecting tieaton enacts; whether this flould not operate as a repeal of the former law, fo far as related to thefe point. As to the cales of Vigal and Mitchel, weflem infurgents, I thould douer whether it would affet them at all, wen if the law had then exifed, becaule the cicumflanes very much differed from the internection in Northampton county. Wells and Nevil were infipetors, and their office were fricily belonging to the United States, and were depofits of the Cinited Staies, and equally under the protection of the law, with calles or citadels: ita addition to this, the ofticers of gocemnent weat driven from their own homes, and upon pain of death, they dared nut approach their homes. Their oflices were buta by tie infigrents, and there was no law that tonched their cafe but the conntitutional act defunize teation ; on which account, they were uicid and conncted under it. I would introduce thefe ideas, to fhow you, that the decifions then fermed by the court, are inapplicable at this tine, fince the Sedition ant is insee pafied, and asrecable to theie circumflances, which materially diier fiom thufe of $179+$.
It io now time to clule. Gentlemen, the tath which you have to peiferm is very ferimens, and very important; but I will not infult your underflandurs, by laying more than my indifentibie duty clanis from me, in betiali' of the prifoner. You will, I have no dumbe, comider the cafe calmity, vifely, and deliberately. Lou hnow the law, under the diection of the court: and I have no dubb, you will decide according to the impulite of your combicience. I will outy add, that the prifoner secivect, and has held his life from ate autivaty of Hm, who is all-wif violated thofe equitable laws made by lis country for the prefervation of peace and order in focietr: he is therefure entitled to an equitable verdict: if he has done the acts named in the indictment, I have no donot, you will pronounce him guilty: if he has forfeited his life, go he muft, and if he is to go, it is not in the power of men to prevent it. I fhall therefore reft affured, that you will give a comfientious verdich, upon which you are bound to anfer.

Mr. R $\Lambda$ W L E.

AFTER his exordium, in which he exprefied the ianportance of his fituation as public accufer-he hoped that while his duty perenptority impofed upon him, the necefity of doing juftice to thie Unied States, he flould not lee divefted of candour towads the unformate prifoner at the bar, to whom he boped full juhlice would be done.

He propoled in the firf place to collect the detail of trambictions, the clear and unequivocal train tiey had been teilificed by the feverat witnefies, not villy called to fupport the profecution, but unhappily for the prifoner, corroborated by the witnefits called by bimmeat. In the fecond place he floonld apply the fef fatsts to the laws and Conflitution of the Uuited States: from both of which be thought it woild evident. ly appear to the jury that the prifoner was guilty of treafion in levying war againft the United States.

The prifoner ftood indicted for oppofing in a warlike manner, two laws of the United States, the one entitled " an act providing fur the valuation of lands and dwelling houfes," sc. paffed July 9,1798 , and the other entitled an act for levying a direct tax within the United States, paffed July 14, 1798. agreeable to thefe acts certain commiffions and affeflors were to be appointed to carry the pioviliois thereof into execution. It appeared in eridence that Mr. Eyenly, one of the witnefles produced, had received a commifion conformable thereto in a par: of Pennfylvania, which lie received in Auguf, 1798, together with a requef from the fecreary of the treafury, that he would find fuitable characters to ferve as affefors to att in the divifion anthoed to him. In the execution of this requef Mr. Eyerly found very great dificulties, alchough there was a peifect acquiefcence in all other parts of the union. Many whom he nominated declined on account of the unpopularity of thofe laws, aithourh Mr. Eyerly very indultrioull; and in a praife worth mamer endeavored to remove thate objections.
In oider to flow the general difficulties there was in the exec:1tion of thefe oficers' duty. Mr. Attorney recited the coltmons if Mr. Ejerly (page 47) and its confi mation by Mr. Chapmai), Mi. Henry and others. He alfo went into an examination of the teftimony demonfrative of the difficulies the affefiors fuund in the execurim of their duty and the i.ffult they frequently meet with, when c:graged in their paific eforts to explain the laty to the mitited rablo.

But forry was he to fay, that thefe commendable efforts were outweighed by the influence of certain leaders, among whom he found feveral captains of militia, and Fries with the reft : he throughout the whole feene appeared the moft poominent, and iuftead of attendin's to the grood advices given him by his beft friends, fiew in 2 rage and renewed his oppofition. A part of the effects of their hoftility was accomplifhed in preventing Mr. Clark from fuffilling the office rinich the had undertaken, and the general reluctance there was in ctieers, and iudeed finally the abandomment of the affeffiments; for it appeaced that, not only thofe who were unwilling to give their rates, refued, but thofe who were willing, were intimidated from do. ine ir. To, fuch a pitch was intimidation and diffaffection arived, that he wes fory to fay, the very Magistrates of the peace had fo far nebected their duty as to join the oppofition, and vearly all of them, fiom one or cther of thele motives, refufed to iffue procefs for the apprehention of delinquents, or examine perfons who oppofed the lans: and thole who did attend to their duty, found the greateft difficulties to procure the attendance of evidences, who were prevented by the impulfe of fear from coming forward. Many attempts were made to pacify thele deluled people, who were under the moft baneful advice, and the attempts accordingly mifcarried, even though propolitions were made in fome townufhips to indulge them with the choice of their own affefiurs.

Their towiì meetings were fometimes attended by military bodies, in all the parade of war, with arms, mutic, and colours flying, who cuntai, tly employed the moft violent and indecent menace towards the oflicers of the United States, which made even their perfonal fafety doubtful. In this flate of things, the marflal of the diftrict was difpatcled to lerve procefs on a number of the violaters of the public peace, and having ferved'eeveral warrants in Lehi townfhip, he went to Lower Milford, and thence to Millar's town, where the gentlemen who were with him, affifting in the duty, met with repeated infilts and even perfonal abute. The alfeflors were fill unable to proceed in mealuring the houfes, and finally obliged to abandon the bufinefs altogether; fome of them having been courpelled to refign on account of the oppofition they met with, and the threats which were thrown out, fo that they were in actual danger of their lives if they hat procected. While thefe officers were goist the tour of their duty, in defance of oppofition, the principal leader, and indeed primcipal mover of the mfurrection, John Fries, makes a diftinguithed figure upon the ftage: he was not yet apprifed that they had proceeded to aflefs the houfes in his townhhip, as fion as he learne that they had, deaf to the arguments and reafoning of Mr. James Chapman, he thes into a rage, and exclaims, pointing to a man near him, "If I were to fend that " man to my houle to inform them that the affelments were going "forwad, I thould have 700 men here by day light to-morrow, and " nit only that, but we have men in Montgonery, and all Northamp"ton cominty to join us." This, gentlemen, certainly evinces a general opponition to the law, as clearly as words can do it. When told tha the afliefliments were going on, it operated on him like an eleathr flock, and he fullenly retired having firf adverted, with threats, to the melancholly fcenes which has tranfired in France. He afterwards meets the affeffors at Jacob Fries's, to fome of whom he exprefles much refpect, but certainly not very much like a friend or a neighbor, if we confider the anger which he difplayed. No; it was not friendly admonition, it was the mark of enmity in difguife, and the fpecial declaation of war: this will be evinced in obferving the affair near the houle of Singmafler: (p.71.) Fries, with fome attendants, met three of the affeffors, one of whom (Mr. Rodrick) they endeavored to feize. Fries was at the head of the band, but miffing his mark, and taking Foulke he let him go, with a threat that they thould all be taken the next day: on the next day, when the affeffors were to meet at Mr. Chapman's, Fries, and his party, met at Jacob Fries's, whence they march in military pomp to Quaker town to execute their threat. They ride up to the tavern, and there, after difcharging their pieces, give an huzza to the much profaned name of Liberty. When the affeffors came into the town, fivolled with large drafts of guilt and whifkey, the latter of which it appears that Fries kept clear of, but of the former he had a large portion. Seeing Mr. Rodrick ride through the town, they ordered him to ftop, which he refufing, the cry of fire was given. Mr. Rodrick did not know who it was gave the word, but they levelled at him. However, gentlemen, on the other fide fay, they did not fire. This is the kind of defence which is held up to you: if they had fired, perhaps it would have been faid, they did not hit; if they had hit, that they did not kill, and if they had killed, then it would have been only homicide! Mr. Foulke next came, he was flopped by a number, and among them Fries appears. So far as relates to the prifoner at the bar, $t$ appears to have been his fudied object to abiftain from actual violence and outrage at all times; but his plans are regularly accomplifhed, notwithltanding his feeming moderation; and from his attention towards Mr. Foulke, and fome others, it was clearly proved that the officer, and not the man, was obnoxious. Fries had told Mr. Foulke the preceding evening that he would come to his houfe, and bring leien hundred men with him, rather than that the law fhould be executed.

The oppofition to the affeffors, the general tranfactions of the 6th of March, and the refolution they entered into to go and liberate the prifoners the next day, Mr. Rawle faid he confidered as the beginning it the treafon. On this day, (March 6th) the prifoner at the bar, the cool, deliberate leader and adviler of this aflembly, whofe minds and meafures were thofe of their leadsr, in which he exhibited bis power, particularly on the arrival of Mr Foulke, commanding hin to get off hus hirle, and come into the houle, when he demanded his papers; but, on that genteman making fome demur, he broke out, ordering him not to hefitate, on which they are delivered up, and then it was he made ufe of the declaration, that they would not fubmit to the law, till tbe otber states had fubmitted. "The law flaill be re" pealed; we wil not fubmit," he faid: this we have from a refpectable witnels. When the papers were returned, it was with a ftrict injunction not to proceed in the affeflueuts, accompanied with a bravado: "You may return me if you think proper." Having done this, there was another affefir who was to be alli, brought, and maltreated (Mr. Childs.) Fries gres to a neighboring houle, and accoffs him in a frietidly manner, telling him be muft go and see his men. When arrived, he leaves him amongh his men. It is unneceflary here to recapitulate the orgies of that tranfacion, in which the venerable name of Wallingtom was uled by their profane lips: they even extend their madnet's fo far as to call upen Mir. Cliths to fwear allegiance to them. Suffice it to fay, that the whole period of his flay was filled with hurling and abuife; but being a robuft man he was not hut. Whan Fies ieturbed they were quiet, and he expieffed concern at the treatment, and inquired for the man who did it, but foon he makes a demand of the papers, which teing given, he went out exulting at the acequifitins ; mean while Mr. Chids was again ill wifd, a d which again ceafed on the retara of Fries, who being difappointed i: their contents let:mans the papees. Wr. Chids, in this hituatim, dues what any man would din, promiles not to go into the townhip again to affers, and the affelments were perfectly fopped in Lower Millfurd. If this had been a mere local matter; if no promife of afilfance lad been received, if no preconcerted, but unexecuted plan had not heen deifgned, their koors might have reffed here, having aecompliflud their profeficd purpole of effectually peeventing the affefinents ging forward anowg them; but their views were more hoffile $t$, the goverment, $u$ der which they were protected, and which was that noment extenting its wings to flield them from affalt, in comarn witis their feliw-citizens. Their tiumph was incomplete; "notinns was du:e, while aught remained to do" was their langage; for, apm rearmas to the henfe of Jacob Fries, a melfaye was feat by Dillugr, at a lat haur, wive more geareal notice that next mornas they were the to Bothichem in order to refcue the prifincr:. Shankwelier and ohers were maned as the prifoners whom they were theicus. '1hic, sumbenen, is an importait proof of the fyflem with whith this retac was comacted, in which it is clear the peosie of Northampen and Buch were connected: thate people of Buta nere informed tha :a taia perfons of Northampton had been arelled by a Judzis' waic....: and were to be taken

The meffase is communicatco; and witha we:s on looding to this fleady purpue, all who were prefent, the prifoner at the bar drew up a writing, bending thole who fubicribed it to necet at Mullars town the next inominiz: What are the particulari of that infrument we are ignorant, it not having been produced to ni; but, I am forry to fay, upon his own declaration, that be never figud it: ia tiis he appears to defert his comrades, and leave them in 2 pedicament into which he had led them; for, having gone fo far, they would not think of abandoning their plans. The next morning they met by appointment; their proceeding would then have been flopped by intelligence given them by young Marks, but on confultation, the prifoner at the bar fays, "No, we will proceed as we come fo far." They proceeded until they came to the bridge.

During this period the Marfhal, who had been dififatched up to ferve warrants from the judge of the diffrict, arrived, and after a variety of inltances of oppofition, as related by himfelf (p. 37) by Mr. Henry (p. 24) and by Mr. Eyerly (p. 45.) He was going forward in the execution of his duty as well as he was able, but being informed of the defign which was formed to refcue the prifoners who had promifed to meet him at Bethlehem, by vitue of the powers deputed to a Sheriff, he procures a Posse Commitatus to affift him, on which account, owing to the generally diffatisfied ftate of the neighborhood, be was forced to fend to far as Eatton fir dome of thofe aids. The next day the Marflal was ready to receive his pritoners: two men armed then made their appearance.

Mr. Rawle here retorted pretty frongly on Mr. Lewis's reference to 2 Lord Raymond 1301 . adverting to the false inprisonment (as that genteman called it) of Keifer and Pauius at Bethlehem, previous to the commencement of the general outrage, in which he recited the evidence refipecing the arrival of thofe two men, and juftified the Marthal for his puident precaution to prevent the thediding of blood, becaufe, from his infomation, he appeared to be in a delicate and dangerous fituation. I would rather, Mr. Rawle caclaimed, fpend my hife in voluntary exile on the bleak thores of Botany Bay, than live at large in a country where a Marthal in the exocution of fuch an invaluable duty, flould be held up as an object of guilt : this is at once deftroying all that we hold dear-our judicial fythem, on which depends our fecurity. The act was laudable, becaufe it was an act of perfonal fafety and general prudence.

Mr. Rawle then proceeded to examine the evidence until the arrival of Fries at Bethlehem, contending that aeither the arrefl of thofe two men, nor that of Shankweiler paticularly, who had never furrendered himfelf prifoner at all, was the caufe of the affembling Fries and the party at Miller's town, their march from Milford, or their arrival at the bridge near Bethlehem: it was not till after their arrival at the bridge that the party were informed of the detention of thefe two men, when they fent to demand them. They were liberated, but in order to beg this armed force to come no farther, the Marhal difpatches four of his passe to reafon with them. But the object was not yet attainal, for while thefe two men were delivering up, the Marhal perceives the prifoncr at the head of his party, with a fword drawn, marching up with all the appurtenances of war, althoush the others had engased to await an anfiver at the bridge. They appeared to be inftigated t) pais the bridge by the arrival and exampte of Fries, and from that moment affairs aflumed the awful fpectacle which the Marhal had beea previsuly led to apprehend, and this John Fries who had obtained the rank of a Captain in tle Militia, which he ought to have ufed folel; $\because$ defend his country, proftitutes his command to the bale and dangerous purpofe of rebellion againft the government. All the evidence agree that the only leader; the only diffinguifhed charactur; the only ambaffador, negociator, and advifer that appeareci throughout the whole tranfaction was the priloner at the bar: It is he that goes frift to demand the prifoners: a recital of his conduct may be feen in Thomas's and Mitchel's teftimuny, corruborated by others. He declares, " Gentlemen, if you are willing que will take them, I will go fore" molt; none of you fire till they fire on us firft; till I give the word; " if I drop, then take your own command." To give him all the credit due to his humanity it is obfervable that he wifhed to obtain his object by intimidation, but if it was not attainable by threats, force mult be reforted to. No doubt there mult have been a moment when he attended to perional fafety; as commander, and foremoft man in a aarrow paflage, he muft have fallen firlt, he had a very fair chance of receiving a blow or a bullet, and therefore that precaution for his men not to fire became indifienfible. The object of thefe infurgents was not to commit murder, the prifonel is not clarged with it, but to prévent the execution of the law, and this was to be obtained better without a lofs of life than with it, but the expreffions of Wim. Barnet, reciting thofe of the prifmer, were" Stick, Stab, and do as good as you can, as I expect firl to get it."

Gentlemen, Treaton may fometimes, and indeed of en does call into its aid the commifion of acts horrid and atrocious, but fuch atrocities are not neceflarily component parts of Tiealon. Actual homicide, deffruction, or fecizure of property may, and often does occur : if the Marhal on that unhappy occalion had food out five minutes longer, I leave it to yourfelves, or to any difpafinonate perion to judge whether lives-more than the life of the prifoner would not have been loft, and fill the crime wond have been but Treason; But that it did not arrive to fuch an horrid fcene we are indebted to the judicious conduct of the Marfhal, who acted above all praise: influenced by the advice of two of the neighboring magitrates, whete powers were infulted and fufpended, and who muff, with himelt, have fallen a facrifice in the execution of their duts, he determues to make the furrender: "the refcue, faid Mr. Horriell, I confidered was perfect, other" wife the deftruction of human lives was certain: you are a ftiff Of"ficer. (to the Marflat) When I fee thefe guns levelled at the win"dow : when I hear thofe farage fhrieks, I now thi uk you will be juf"tifiable in giving up the prifoners." The Marthal, after much hefitation, acted very laudably in giving them up without farther oppofition. I grant that Mr. Eyerly and Mr. Balliot retired unhurt, but obferve, gentlemen, they were not the object; the likeration of the prifoners, and thus preventing the Marfhalexecuting procels, was their ouly aim, and when they obtained that, they delifed from farther violence.
I might with propriety apply to this Treafon words which were ufed for a different purpofe by Pope,
"All are but parts of one flupendous whole:"
A general plan of oppofition to the law was contemplated, and the releafe of the prifoners was but one of the parts, if not of "one flupern-
" dous whole," it was of one great system. Having obtained their ob. ject, they retired from their fucceffsful expedition, the trumpeter founding the triumphal blaft before the conquerors, in defiance of the legal authority of the United States, and thus departed, we hear no more of then.

Thefe are facts;-not founded on the teftimony of a fingle wituefs, which is fufficient to convict a man in common calies; wor are they confined to the teffimony of two witneffes, which is all the conflitution requires; but they are corroborated by numerows witnefles, produced in order to remove every doubt from your minds as to the material facts of the crime. There is no cale in our books more clear than the prefent, the evidence is fo uniform, that even the ingenuity and talents of the prifoner's counfel have not been able to conteft one fact that has been related; indeed the whole is fo fair, that the moft incredulous muft be latisfied of the accuracy of the charge, independant of the confeffion of the prifoner, which contirms the whole: it proves to a demonftration that his main object was nothing leis than to prevent the execution of the laws which all men are brund to obey.

Gentemen, the counfel for the prifoner have endeavored to diminifh the furce of that voluntary confellion by telling you that no man can be convicted upon his own confeffion out of Court, nor without the teftimony of two witneffes: the fame arguments have been uicd to nullify the expreflions, which we have produced proof that the prifoner frequently made ufe of, from which we evidently dificover lis intention. I allow that no man thould be convicted for treafon unlefs upon the teftimony of two witnefles, or confelfion in open Court ; but when all the facts necelfary to fubflantiate the crime proved by two witneffes, the declarations of the prifoner, as well as his confeffion may te produced as good evidence as to his intention, and this is not neceffary to be proved by two witnefles; this tends to fhow the deligus of his heart, which can only be known to his Creator and himfelf. Thefe declarations fhould be known to the Court, in order to difcover the intention with which the crime was perpetrated. In the cafe of Lord Gordon, the words faid to have been ufed by hum in the lobby of the hoofe was not rejected by the jury becaule it required two witnefles, but on account of the improbability of a declaration having been publicly ufed which no more than one individual could be produced to prove. We have proved by two witneffes that the overt at was committed by the prifoner, and have prodiced much corroborative teftimony, in which we have not been conlined to two, having heard it from twelve relipectable witneffes. If we have fucceeded to prove the intention, it is fufficient for the law, and if you believe the teflimony, it indubitibly fubltantiates the fact. *
I fhall now proceed to confider what is the law arifing upon thefe facts, in going into the examination of which, I fhall put out of the quelion two objections, one of them only has been produced, the other having barely been alluded to, rather than held up.

A proclamation was iffued by the Prefident, on which Fries did then go to his home, whereupon it has been argued that no inflance can be produced to prove a profecution boing commenced for acts committed prior to the reading of the riot act in England, if the mob thereupon difperied, becaule they had complied with the proclamation. It is right in part: if the people do not difperfe, the remaining mob are guilty of felsay: but I afk the gentemen has the defence been at all fet up on the grosad of compliance with the proclamation? In the riot at Drury Lase theatre by the fontmen; and that which was held up in which the ean of Difex and others were entaged, many of the rioters did difipere in confequence of the riot act being read, and yet were afterwand punifled for the enormities they committed while they were there. Alke trivial is the objection refpecting the undue appointment of afieflives. It is fufficient that fuch a perfonacts as commiffioner or affefits, if he uliups that power the caw has provided a remedy by other means than the dangerous one of an infurrection to know merely whether A. B. or C. are regularly appointed to ofice. There are legai modes of application to alcertain the fact; there is the whole buad of commuflioners, or even an higher power may be applied to, to afectain the authority, and no virtuous honelt citizen would think of oppofitios on that account. We do not think it neceflay to trouble the conert, lince it was fully in the power of the prifoner's council to have brought the commumifines under this act before them, but not having arailed themfictes of it, nor preffed it home to your notice, gentement, why was fucin a icare-crow infinuated, but to millead you? there can lee no doubt of the legality of thofe commiffioners, if there was, it wathdnot alleviate the crime of rebellion. But that was never ufed, newiher by the prifoner himfelf, nor any of the infurgents, as a grimud for the ichellion; it was not even a colouring for it, nor does it appear that the infurgents ever doubted in the fimallef degice, the legality of the appointments, their decharations were repeatedy' " $n$ " afieffors thall act in the townhip, nor thall any affefments be matie." Sod dubt was ever made of the powers ufed thy the officers, and thereiore the oppofition to the law is alone to be confidered.

Having difpofed of thine two prints, I wifin now to imprefs upon your minds a moft fulem comiction, to wit, That the law under which the primerer at the bar finads indicted, without being in the the true meaning of that pat under which the prefent crime is piaced, to wit, "levin! war againt the Licicel States." I would premie that the imtinament, wadely yecifly in the whal form, and that the only queflion mow i , what is that leng ing war with which the priSoner is charged?

To alcertain what is levting wat, it is meeeflary for us only to conimer what is the ta wre of civa and politica! fociety in the Unitod States. The government is the organ which the people collectively have thought it their duty and intereft to eftablifl for their mutual fafery-their will, publicly expreffed in the laws, is the legitimate will of the majority of the people: all our laws are the ads of this majoity, and it is a radical principle, which will not be controverted, that the will of the majority is always binding upon the minority, ald thould be acquiefced in quietly by them, whether the adminiftration of that government be in the hands of onc perfon, or of many; thofe, :he efore, who do not choofe to continue in that fociety, ought: to "Ithdraw quietly from it, rather than difturb the guict of the whole. Allegriance is a quict fubmifion and acquiefcence to the fupreme power-In monarchical govermments it is placed in the king; but the citizens of America know of mo allegiance but to the laws, for they alone are the binding principle by which fociety at large is kcpt in domeltic peace and fecurity. If, therefore, deviating from this allegiance to the laws, meatures are taken to difturb the public peace by a refiftance of the laws, accompanied by force of arms, or by the intimidation of numbers fufficient for the purpofe, and it be applicable only to a grievance of a public or general, and not of a particular or private intereft, fuch refiflance then becomes the crime of treason, and particularly fo if the views are to bring about the fulpenfion or repeal of $a n$, of the laws; for there is no particular kind of law liable to exception; it is treafon, becaufe it is an attempt to overturn the fundamental principles of fociety, by endeavoring to impole into the fyiftem the will of a minority, which has no right to be there ; it is creating a new agency, a new fipcies of legiflature, and eventually diffolving the powers legally ordaised. This definition may apply as well to any one law as to all the laws, for each is equally flamped with public approbation, and to none particularly is fanctity attached, all proceedug from one power, thofe stho undertake to refilt any one, may with equal propricty relif the whole, and treafon appeas to me to be the inevitable inference, otherwife it would be impolible to afcertain the limits at which this dangerous licentious conduct muff fop, we thould be at once thrown back into a fate of natural foriety; which God prevent. I afk the gentemen who argued for this difinction, to point out to me which law may be refifted with impunity! If one may be, the evil principle will goon to another and another, and where will it fop!

I have no occafion again to recur to the authorities we have produced which the gentlemen pats over as the acts of bad times, corrupt judges, a pootligate court, &c. The counfel with all their learning and indultry feem to be fatisfied with this general difcharge of our austhorities, but whatever might have beea the bafenei's of the attorney generals of thoie t:mes, the meannefs of the judges, the profigacy of the court, or the merits of the prifoner, we tand upon bood eftabliflied, and general ground, which is not pretended to be chligatory upon us merely beeaule it has heretof,re been decided, sor is it obligatory in Englard upon that account, ahthough you have been fo told, but we go upon it, becaute it is right. That Sir Walter Raleigh was grolsly abufed by Sir Edward Col:e as nutorious: it was the bad practices of thofe times, but this reference more regards the proceedings on trials, than the decifions: the decifions uniformly were, that ufurpation of jubbicic authority in a certain manner, amounted to 1 reafon. What! thatla man be permitted to attack the government by piecemeal ? to take out a plank here and a plank there, till our political fhip finks, and fuct conduat not be called a treafonable divifion of the government! With relpect to the authorities wherein it was ftated to be neceffary that the defign flould be to pull down meeting houfes, brothels &c. generally in order to conlitute high treafon, it muft be obre:vable that it was the aflumption of the legal powers which conftituted the crime ; to pull down meeting houfes as fuch, was interfering wih the toleration granted by government, and therefore treationable. With relipect to Bawdy houlfes, govermment, and not individuals, have a right to correet them, and if individuals pretended to correct the evil, they were attainted of ligh treaton.

We are told that no cale is to be found in which a mere refcue is called treafon. Hale 133 , in my opinino is an authority in point. Bethlelem was the prifon of the United States under the marlhal, there the marihal held feveral perfons in cuftody, and levying war, or attempting by force or intimidation to cieliver thofe prifoners out of his cuftody is certainly treation. Here we fland upon fettled ground we fay, and I appeal, gentiemen, to your recolleciion, that theee was no particular view to selieve any forticular perfon, but that the words were "Shankweiler and otherv" the chaim was general, and the object was general-the repect of the law was that object, and thefe were the means uied to c:btan it. This is declared to be treafon even by that great and virtuons man who is held up to your notice as guarding us to beware of introducing more conftructive treafons: Sir Matthew Hale, whofe vey mane carried auihority at the period of 1668 , and wan him, all the judges, upon mature deliberation, have declared this to be fomul hav. A; Burglary, Arfon and Murder may be made the means of treatim, fo may refici ; Treafon muft have fome means: finmetimes the molt atrocious, fometimes the means may be newly inseated, but becaule newly invented it cannot lefien the crime with relfecit to the murder of sir Theodofious Buaghton, by capt. Donnelan in Euglaid, becaule it was merely by a draught of laurel water (which in that country is poinoin) -a new invention for murder, the coumbel might have argucd againf the conviction becaufe no former cale had occarred, as well as that the innocence of this refcue flould be held up, becaule new. But there was no fuch thing. A Atrong and importart patt of the combination was actually carried into effect, aisa it inas wat ablitely neceflaty to prove the refcue in order to fuce the thealion: it has been evidently flown to you in the trandathous at ()iaker town, to that the refcue was only a part, and the termation of the semeral plan fo far as it proceeded.

I hate no meed to take up more authorities to prove that this is trea$f, i:$ it was fo wore the hirth of our conftitution: this principle was cuesal with the rerin ( Ehard III, in 1340 . I take it to be a true and incontrosett,ble principle, tiat when we find an act, on which previous decifions hate been made, thefe decifons have been acted upon, and we fhould think proper to pafs that act by engrafting it into, and making it a part of our conflitution, thote decifions are of courfe adoyted as our direction, whereby we are to underfand the applications of that act. I woald barely obferve that while thole gentle men are telling us that we are not to have recourle to thofe volumes of laws, (which we ought all to be acquainted with, as rolumes of fcience, explanatory of the code by which we are bound) they themfelves 1 efort to the fame fipecic; of authonity, to endeavor to prove that treafon under the att of Edward III, is nut treafon in America. We have heard much about conftructive and interpretaive treafon, and confructive levying of war. Agreeable to the form of government in England, the king is recognized as king in two capacities, one in his natural, as king, and one in his political, as fovereign: now, when that part of trealion called compaffing the king's death is mentioned, it refers to lis matural capacity; but when of levying war againt the king, it refers to his political capacity, and it was therefere nceeflayy to fhow the difinction between diferent fipcies of trafon: this latter is termed confruative treation ; but from the varicty of its modes of introduction, cannot be fo well defined; bue its exifence is necefiary in order to fupport fociety and prelerse it fecure: this is what is terned levying of war; it may confin in oppolition to the king's forces, or by threats or force attempting to compel the king to remove his minifters, or alter eftablifled laws. If you expunge what is direct levying of war, there can ro fuch thing as treafon be found ; either the law is wrong, or the argunents wifed on the other fide. Gentlemen, the law is eflablifhed, but the argument's vanifh like vapour before the morning fiun; what, then, in England is calied conftrusive levying of war, in this country molt be called diacet leving of war. The framers of our confitution were as learned, and as wife as any gentlemen now at the bar; they certainy faw that this was the only kind of diect of levsing of war that coutd exifl in this country, and therefore if they had not intended that what was called conftultive in Eughand thould conllitute what hey called "levying of war againft the United States," they would act lave introduced the crime at all: this is an abfudity they never would have becn guilty of.

The learued genteman admits that reffinace againt one particular law may be termed confontive ticafor, and may be the crime of treafon here : he fays that refifiance to the militia law would be a reflamintupen the principle dependance of the government, a:d therefore ticaton; gomemen try our arruments by this tef, and fee whether rofittance min the prefent occafon is not equaif: 5 . Ian geu what is to become of the militia, the fanding amy, the eventaman, erthe cisilpower ittelf, if sou are uable to raife revenue? Who will finit, wha will tranfatt your cuil concerns if they are not paid? If by oppoling revenue haws the go verment itfeif as weli as the army is fundanematiy umdemined, is it not at leaf as much treafon as thonghthe mifitia haw abone were more upent; (but not more ettectually) atiacked? Nothing is fo much entithed to refpect and fubmifion as laws which ate the dinet means of twa is no more, but from necelift fubifance math be cbidiad from employment and labor, the defence and prefervation of the countryr nuft come from the revenue, and to deftroy that is to give a mortal wound to the government itfelf.
Mr. Rawle then went into a review of fome of the circumflances, alluded to by the oppofite comiel, which characteize the infurrection, and the trials thereupon in 1795, which he inffted, though thofe gentlemen would not :lliow it, were very finilar in circunflances to the ualappy allair now before the court, in which he drew the following parity between the cafes:

In $179+$, the diffurbance was to prevent the exccution of one law the excife law:

In 179), the hewfe and land-tax laws.
$\ln 179$, , fiver conntices were engaged in oppofition.
In 1799, but 3: Northampton, Bucks, and Montgomery.
$I_{11} 1,9+$, the excife oficers were attacked and prevented executing their duty.
In 1799 , the affeffors vere the fame.
In 17yt, the infergents collected into an army, in batile array, difwhaing their enfigns of triumph, with numbers fufficient to procure their ubject ; fay, 6000 men in lraddock's field.

The whect of 1,99 , was to do it in a limilar manner, and they a'tually dint, by the ir milita $y$ appearance and boafts of much larger incicale, imprefs a general opinion of their power, sufficient to acaccomplifh their purpote.

In I794, the infurgents made public declarations that the excife law flould never be executed.
In 1799, were not declarations of the fame nature made by the fe infurgents; for that other counties, and even other flates would fupport them, and it fhould never be done?
The object of 1794 , was to obtain a repeal of a law-the excife law.

In 1799, it was the fame, fo far as related to them-the houfe and direct tax.
In 1794 , the excife officers were compelled to promife, that they would not execute the law in that part of the country.

In 1799 , the fame promife is exacted, and obtained refpecting Lower Milford and other parts. There was fome difference, it is true, as the gentleman flated, fome of the officers at that time being banithed from their hemees, on pain of death. It was farther argued, that there was this friling difincion ; that Gcheral Nevil's houfe might be conideect as a calle of tice Linted Statsi, becauie it was an office of excife; but the analogy mill huilds gomi; it wat General Nevil's dwellinc--foufe, howewer, that was attuched; the atiack was made only becaute he was an officer entringed in the hiperintendance of a tax they dilliked: Mr. Levering's tavern an Bethebern was made the prifion of the Crited State:, and there was an exculuive officer of the Unised State;, it was as much to as any other prifon in the Union: this sas; the cafle, the fortefe of the Linited Staics, to protect which the manthal bed aftembled his posso commaituth, provided with weapons of defence. I confider this, therefore, a more violent breach of the law than the attack upon General Nevil's houfe; fo far as it went-admitting that no guns were fired, nor lives loft, nor was any houfe burnt, otherwife fo far as it went the cafe was rather flonger than the former. Happy is it for the prifomers that the fcene of riot was not farther from the feat of government: if it had been more remote from the power of government, we camot calculate upon the confequences, or increafe of revolt and excefs which would have been evinced. I will nos pretend to anticipate them, for I wifh not to inflame my own mind by the fad calculation, nor the minds of the jury; I only wilh the facts to appear in their native colours.

Why then can we entertain a doubt, viewing all thefe circumflances, that the prifoner is guilty of treafon? There can be none. We are told that the legiflatnre have paffed a law, entitled the Selition Act, which flows the offence of the prifoner; and that the opinion of the legillature was to bring under this law the conftitutional detinition of treafon, making it a mifdemeanor! To me, of all the weak arguments which have been brought in behalf of the prifoner, this is the weakef. This law, which has been cried $u_{i}$ from one end of the continent to the other by fome perfons as unconfitutional, is now to be brought into court th explain away what the conflitution politively defines to be treafon. If this ever lad been the intention of the legillature, there certainly would have been fomething like treafon, fomething like levying of war introduced into that bill, but we find no fuch thing; the words do no: at all ccour in it, and that it is not intended, I think is clear. Seltion and treafon are swo dithinct crimes, and two diffinct puniflomeits are euaded to meet them. The defeription of crime in the fedition act, is thole who combine with inteit to impecte the operation of the law, and thofe who intend to raife an infurrection-thete are to be confidered as guily of an high middemeanor. Now, thote who comsisire to commit treaton are not confidered guilty of treafon; the tradon muft have been carried into, effect. It camot be treaton for a man to compel, advife, or attempt to procure infirreition with intent to inpede the operation of any law of the United Statcis; but this is declared to be a mifdemeanor, whether executed or noi. Befides, the word "irciasonabic," is rot inferted in the fedition law: has, it a man be indiated for taking the property of another, unlefs the word filmons!'y is introduced, he is not liable to the charge. So in this cafe, the ast mut be traitoroufly done, or it is not treafon. To fiow the abfurdity of this doctrine, we need only for a minute fuppole, that in the commition of any oi the crimes faccined in the fedition at, lives thould be lat, lientes burnt, fo. The haws of the Linted Smates have periouly declared, that fuch offoders liwold be puifhed wih death, and facty it "ught to be carried into execation-mot be mitigated b; a linue hav th the mere penaty of $5^{\circ} \mathrm{co}$ dollars, and five years impanmeat. If this was the interion of the legiflature, mi ha it act, at bath, lee expected that they wumd have declared fo in the act ; but they hat manifefted no fuch intention, in that, nor in the prefent inflarce, with uefert to which, had they done it, they would have ove leaped the: conitiuntonal powers; for the confitution is an ark, into which the leginlature itielf dare not place its feet; if they were to do it, the judiciary have the power, and it is their duty to bring them back again, and fay, "You have gone too far:" They caa as much reftrain an uncountituional act, as Congrefs can make a confitutional act. This conffitution gave Congrefs the power to declare the punihment that thould be inflicted on what it had defined to be treation. Congrefs had nothing to do with the crime, and if they have declared it, as the gentleman fuppofes, they liave done it without authority, and it can be of no avail whatever. But no, they hase rather, in the act alluded to, declared what flould not be coifidered treafon, or removed doubts upon that head. This being the cafe, the fame opinion which operated on the judges in 179:, is fill in force; becaufe no leginative act has intervened to chasese it. Certain it is, that Congrefs did not intend to enact an unconnitutional puininhent for treafon; but if they had iatended it, they have not a right to do it, ner have they done it.
Now, gentlemen, whether thefe thinns are as we have reprefented, or not, are for you to judre, and decide upon your information, if you are fatisficd that the priloner at the bar was eugaged in the affair at Bethetein, and that affiar was conneceed with otier previous arrangenents, you must comict him, otherwife you muff not. We confider, and think the evidence muff prove to sou, that all are parts of the fane whole, were hegan long before the 7 th of March; and that they partly exifed in Nusthanpton and partly in Bucks counties. It mult be upma a full coivicition in your minds that the treation was committed by him in Nouthanpton county, that you can convict the prifoner: ard if you lase not that full comsition, I firmly hope you will acruit him; if yun lave, you are bound to pronounce bim guilty.

CHARGE OF JUDGE IREDEIL.

Gextifmen of the Jiri,

IAM perfundel ilat every parfo:, who has atiended to the prefem cory an ful dudinnortant cale upon which ware now c.lled to decide, mant be impredid with a jute refine for the patience and attention you lave fown, througt the lows peral which mformately has been tahen up; but this, though much perfonal inconcmiene mult have been coperienced, mat enly by yon, but by all conc-oned, is mavoidable; wine of we can cement that, in a cale of fuch moment as the coincides with that of the refpectable judge, with whom I have the honor to fit. Before I flate to you any obfervatioti, with regard to the facts which have appeared from the evidence, I flall previoully deliver my opinion upon fome points of law, fo $f_{\text {ar }}$ as they are unconnected with the cridences; thole which are, I that fpak to in their proper piace.

This, gentlemen of the jury, is an indictment againft the prifoner at the bar, for lerying war againft the United States; the firt inquiry therefore is, what is meant by thefe words of our conftitution. "Treafon againft the United States, flatl confift only in levring war " againg them," sc. Thefe words are repeated verbatim, i believe, in an act of Congrels, called the Judiriary Act, defining the punilhment of the ciine of treafon, purfuant to confitutional asthorityThis crime being defined in the conffitution of our countre, becomes the fupreme law, and can only be altered by the means thelean pointed out, and not by any ant of the legillature; and, therefore, the repetition of the words of the confatution in the judiciary act is quite uanecoffary, as the oilly power left to Congrefs over this cime was, to deficribe tie purilhment: the fame act, in another part, mates provilion for the methed of trial. Agrecable to their pover, Congrefs have defcribed the punilhinent, and theredy declared the cime to be capital. It is clear therefore, that, as the conflitution has defired the crime, the Congrefs, draxing is fole authority from that con:fitution, came: change it in ainy manier, particularly as it is fo declared; ore the comber for the pirimer fay, that the legillature have given it a legithative interpretainn, and that their ioterpretation is binding: (a) this comrt. They liy that Congrefs did int mean wim lade the dience charged upon the prioner at the bar, under the deffintion of losiag war; becauie the feditimatet defribes a tmilar offence, and be cant- a refoe is provided for in anowher act, the punifionent citemh iar, wow ther than fine and inerimment. Several amers my be give: themove thefe rbjection.:
fin, If Comefo had intided to interpret thefe words of we cond. The whate judicial power of the goverment is witad in the judepe of the United State, in the manner the conftamion de fribes; to them alone it belougs to explain the law and conifiation; and of thole at?, than th:s court ha: to make a lav to bind them. If this was ute an article of the comhtuion, but a more ani of Coreret, they could hot interpert the wemind of that ait while it wa, in wite, hut they may alor, amend, wirnduce explanato y fecions is is. In this we cote fom the parace of Encland, fom wience ver rethenad han; thereppen, in thele words: "Becaule other like ca!es * or declared at prefent: it is thought, that if any fuch does happen,

* the juddres sbould not try themwvitbout first going to the king and par" liament, wwbre it ought tobe judiged treason, or otberwise felony." On this point Sir Matthew Hale was very carcful, left conftructive treafon thould be introduced.

This, gentlemen, you will obferve, oaly relates to any cafe not frecifed in that ast. But, on the occalion now before you, it is not attempted, by any conftruction or interpretation, that any thing thould be denominated treafon, that is not precilely and plainly within the conflitution. No trafon can be connitted except war has actually been levyed againf the United States.

But farther, nothing is more clear to me than that Congrefs did not intend in any manuer whatever, to innovate on the conllisutional defin:ition of treafon, becaufe they have repented the words, I think, verbatim in their own act, with is $\begin{gathered}\text { ard } \\ \text { to } \\ \text { the refcue and obltruation }\end{gathered}$ of procef; which is mentioned in the at alladed to: it will not be pretencicil, by any man, that every reficue, or every offltuction of an ollicer in ferving procefs, or cwell boti whether, amounts to high treaton, or elfe to to crime at all: No; the crimes are differently fipecified, and relcue or obltruction of procels may be committed without that high charge. This, I thimh, was futficiently explained by the coundel for the United States. Suppote 1000 men rile in arms, avowedly to deflooy the governmen, and in the cescution of their defign commit murder, burn houifes, purlsin property, sco. does it make the defign lefs evident, becaufe they commited cther atrocious crimes in order to obtain their main vicws? Nio; it was to deftroy the government, and that cime woild be chargei upon them, being the higher crime, which the concomiant ones only tendel to aggrasate, as they were committed, not for the purpofe of committing murder, but to intimidate the govermment, and accelerate their object. With regard to what is fated in the fidition ait-combinations and conspirucies to raise an insurrction,--thefe, gentlemen, may be commited without the parties being guilty of treaion: men may combine and confipire for a private purpofe; polibly to injure an individual, mereIf to gratify fome private mutive: if io, they come within that act, and that oally. It is only when they carry their projects farther; when ther aim at die deltriction of the goverment, that the nature of the olience attains the aljeci of, and efientially becomes treason; and therefore it is neceliary in prose tire int chion, othernife there can be no treafon. Theic call be no leng; war without a number of perfons unite, and that number chinot ley war without fome previous intention; and therefore under tha, lav, here being no previous intention defined, but merely an unda ful combination, tice ast terned treas, in the conllitution, it is phain it is nut inteaded, nor is it of t'e nature of treaton.

With regard to the authority from which the opinion of ti, comrt is founded, and of which you bave heand much aheady, I that tronble you with a very few odervation. When this confitution was made, it was in the power of the who formed it cither to define sreafuis or not, or, if the: theyght poper on do fo, to do it ia what manner they chofe, in which they might have followed the example of the country whence their anceftors came, to which they were accuftomed, and in which they were moft experienced in their own feveral flates, where the crime of levying war was denominated treafon. I'believe this has been generally followed through the flates; in fome I know it has. 'This term of levying war is an Englith expreffion, borrowed from the fatute of Edward III; but notwithfanding this, the principal provifions refipecting treafon are taken from an act of the Britifl paliament in the reign of Willian III, which is principally calculated to guard the independence of the court againft the power of the crown, and the pifiloner againf his profecutors. Now, I mult confets, as thefe able and learned framers of our conftitution borrowed the act, in terms, from the Britilh flatute alone, an authority with which they were familiar, that they certainly at leaf meant that the Englifl authorities and definition of thofe terms fhould be much relpected. Thofe genalemen knew as well as any counfel at the bar, the danger of conltruative treafons: they knew how to guard thenfelves againtt the bad times of Englifh hiffory, and were equally acquainted with the better, and more modern decifions. Would it not have been matiral for men fo able, fo wife, fo cautious of their libertes, had they enteranined a doubt of their infufficiency, to have introduced fome new guards, fome new interpretations, and not to have left us in later times in the dark, expofed to fo much danger as the gentlemen of the bar apprehend? Gentemen who know any thing of that country, know that arbitrary times have exifted, and alfo that a number of decifions have taken place fince that period. I do not believe that any judge fince the revol.tion in Enland have ever confidered that he was bound to follow every arbitrary example of the Englifl courts, or the crown laws which had taken place in dark ages. Can any man fuppofe that, if a man was to be profecuted for either of the crimes referred to by one gentleman (Mr. Lewis) fo ablurd a profecution would be for a moment indulged by the judges of this age. No, they would highly refent fuch an infult offered to an enlightened court. Such inftances have ever been reprobated as much by the courts, as by the gentleman who quated then.

With refpect to this doctrine of precedent, I will take the liberty of fubmitting to you a cafe of a civil nature; fuppofe it a cafe of great moment ; fuppole in this court, or any other from which an appeal could not be had, a folemn decifion had been had refeesurg a title to a piece of laud; upon this adjudication a genteman wiiltes to purchafe this land, taking this title to a lawyer he is confirmed in the opinion that the title is grood, and that he is fafe becusse of tos decision of the court. On the faith of this decifion alone the man lay bis money out, and therefore it mult se inportant how precedentisare formed. If precedent is fo imporiant in a civil cafe, how nuch more to mult it be in one like the perem. If a cale is new altogether, and no precedent can be found, it ought to be much in favor of the prifoner, but if a folemn decluration has once been made that fuch anl fuch fats confitated a ce:tan crime, that declaration ongh: be aloute by, and for this plain reafon: every man ought 1 , have an opportunity to know the haws of his country (if he will take pains to inform limelf) left he flould involve himfelf in guilt ignorantly. The propriety and neceflity of this muff be manifelt, and if $i 0$, it is as ne:nefliary that the proccedines of our coirts thould be unitiorm, otherwife their can be no dependance upon their juegment. If, therefore, a point lias been fettled in a certain way, it is enough to direct any court to fetie a future cale of a fimilar kind in the fame way, becaute nothing can be more unfortunate than when courts of juftice derate in decifions on the fame evidence.
This leads me, gentlemen, to point eut to yin a confideration of great madinitede: this is not the firf time, as I have been informed, that thefe quetious have been difcuffed in the comes. During the trials of the perfons concerned in the wellern infurrection, they were difcuffed, and I hate no doubt with great ab:lity on both fides. Judges I'aterioin and Peters were then on the beach, and aiter all the difplay of fiplendid talents ufed in argument on both iides, and all the authorties perduced that men were capable of, from the beft judsme.it that coild be inmed, the court, without hefitation, declared i.s if in casor of the profecution. As I do not differ fiom that decifion, wy opinion is, that the fame declaration ought to be made on the points of law at this time. Vide Dallas's reports $355^{\circ}$.

It is, howe er, oljected, that atter this folemin decilion had taken place, the Lergillature, by the ledition ate, fetted the matter differently, and that we are bound by that act. This has been anfwered, fo as to retowe it beyond all doubt, and conceffions were made at the bar lefficient to remove the ferioufuefs of this objection out of the way. It "as acknowledged that if it had been an oppolition to the militia at, then the crime would have been treafon; or if it had been done to compel the repeal of an att, it would have been treafon. For my part, 1 cumct perceive what kind of fanctity there is in the militia act more than any other, that thwild make any oppofition to Wat act furkwarty ferious: all the ats of congrefs thow from the fame autherity, and all tend to the fame end, to wit, the hapinefs aid fecurity of the communty: individuals may differ in their views If the matiathe of :hem; fime may himk the militia law, fome Hec witure law, fome another, but the l, ofilature have thouglot atl thefo lana cqually buelary, and they haing though: fo, it is our another on the throne: in fuch a cafe the treafon plainly and unequivocally difplays itfelf, and there can be no doubt about it ; but this cannot occur in a republican form of government : men are feldom found who will be guilty of fuch open treafon, as to come forward, in the face of day, and declare their detign to deflroy the constitution or all the laws. No, if men of fenfe go to promote infurreation, whether they mean to deftroy the govermment or not, they mult be wicked; they go about their detign by more infidious means, att will be ufed, and pains taken to promote a dillike to a certain law, this evil prejudice is cucouraged until it becomes general among the people, and they become as ripe for infurrection as in the prelent cafe. Nor would the evil ceafe with the deftruction of one law: they may declare they mean to fop at tiat one act, but having deftroyed it, and finding their power above that of the government, is it nut to be apprehended that they would deftroy another, and another, and fo on to any number they difapprove of: if they wouid not be particular in one cafe, they would not in another. During the weftern infurrection the excife law was unpopular: in this cafe it is the houfe tax act, and if this is permitted, it will be impofible to know where we can rell fecure, nor how foon the government itfelf will fall a prey. This reafon may account for the introduction into the Englifh fatute book, and our conflitution, with the determination of the courts in both countries, of the principle that an attempt by force and violence to impede the operation of a fingle act thall be treaion, and under the defcription of levying war, as much as what flall at firft appear more dangerous, fince the effect may be the fame.

There is another prelininary point, meriting a few obfervations, that is with refpest to the proclamation of the Prefident. It was contended that, becaule that proclamation required the people to difperfe, and commit no more crimes, it amounted to a pardon of all they did before. It is fufficient to obferve heie, that had this olijection been ferioufly made, a plea of pardon upen the gromud of that proclamation muft have been preferred, or it could not have been admitted. But the plea was not made, nor if it had, would it have been effectual, becaule, if this did amonnt to a pardon, it did fo only on certain conditions; the attorncy of the United States and the party are beth allowed to flow whether or not the prifoner has complied with the conditions of the pardon. It is poffible allo that the paidon has not been offered in fuch a manner as the conflitution permits, in which cafe the attorney mutt be permitted to put in a demurrer. Of the iorce of thefe objections the court are to decide, and of courfe the plea mult be referred to them.

Again, this pardon might have been pleaded in due feafcin. Of this the comifel for the prifunc: were infonmed, and had time to confler, but they did not ch ofe to drail themblace of it. But if it had been propofect, nothing is more cikar to me tha a its infunticiency; for in my view, the proclamation contaned no pardon at all. The circimitances which gave rife to, and the nature of tie pooclamation, Ian this: Certain information wa lecesed by the government of a diffurbance having broken out in that part of the country, which baffled the power of civil authority, but as it is neceflary to prevent any infurrection with as little trouble as poffible, after inferior means have failed, the law provides that the Piefident flall make proclamation, inviting and commanding fuch diflurbers of the public peace to difiperfe in quietne's to their homes by a certain time: this muft be done before the militar'; can be ordered our againt them. This is in order to prevent more people joining the flandard of rebellion afterwards, and to admonilh others not to commit farther crimes, but there is not a word in the proclamation inplying an offer of pardon for any thing commited beiore.

The riot ait of Eiglaid was cited in fupport of this docirine, but there is no fimilaiiny in the two cafts: that act fays, a magiftrate fhall go to the mob, and endeavor to prevail upon then to difiperte, if he cannot do it, he reals the ast, and if they ftill continue combined, they are guilty of felon; but then this ielony is a crime created merely by that act, but cien that ant does not intimate that they flould be pardoned for crimes corminted before the magiffrate came, even il they do diferfe. Infances to the contrary migit be cited.
Having now, gentemen of the jury, fated my opinion in the beft manaer in my power on the law, independant of the faits, or the particular application of that law to the prifoner at the bar, I thall, agreable to my duty, fate to you in the beft manner I am capable of, the nature of the iffue which you are now called upon to determine. It is an iflue of an afpect the mof awful and important that any juror can ever be called upon to determine. It is your duty to diveft yourfices of all manncr of prejudice and partiality one way or the other. Difinifs from your minds as much as you can all which you might have luad or thought on this cale before you came into this court, and confine your opinions merely to the evidence which bas been produced. No extraneous circumftances whatever ought to have the leaft weight with you in giving yourverdict : you ought not, and I hope you will not take into your conlideration at all whether the fafety of the United States requires that the prifoner flould fuffer, on the one hand, or whether on the other, it may be more agreeable to your feeling; that lie thould be acquited. It is folely your duty to fay whether he is guilty of the crime charged to him or not. No man can conceive that the intereft of any govermment can poffibly naake it requifite to facrifice any imosent man, and I can rell perlectly fatisfied, which I have no doubt you allo are, that this government will not, and God forbid any confiderativis whatever fhould ever influence fuch an ation.

I do not think it neceflay to go into a minute detail of all the evidence which have been preduced, it would be only mifpending time. The general fcenes which panfed a: Bethlehem muft be fully in your mind; thefe fcenes are fuppored upon the evidence of twelve witnelie, but I think it my paticular duty to bring to your recollection thofe parts of that tranfaction in which the prifoner at the bar was concerned, leaving the relt as much as poffible out of view. Oa this occafion I muft requef the gentlemen of the bar, if in any in. ftance I fhould err in fating the evidence, that they will correct me; but I hall endeavor to be accurate.

The judge here flated the prominent fatures of the evidence given by Meffrs. Henry, John Burnett, Wiiliam Barnet, Winters, ColNichols, Schlaugh, Herefeld, Eyerly, Toon and Mitchel, fo far as related to the conduct of the prifoner at Bethlehem, which, he faid, he thought proper to fate firf, becaufe the offence charged in the inidietment was iaid to be committed at Bethlehem. Gentlemen, he continued, if you are not well fatisfied that the overt act of triason was commited at Bethlehem, and that that overt at is lupported by the evidence of two witnefles at leaft, you will not find the prifoner guilty.

Now, gentlemen, is the proper time for me to thate one or twi, points concerning the law of evidence, of which you have heard mich from the bar. As I obferved, there malt be twe at least to prove that the att of teafon was commited at Bethlehem. It is the opinion of the counfel for the prifner that you mult be consinced, not only of the fact by two witneffes,-not only that he was concerned in a certain aet, but that you mull have the evidence of two witneffes, at leaft, by cevidence drawn from the fame place, that it was done with a treafonable intention, before you can pay any attention to any other evidence whatever. The fact is, that when the overt act is proved by two wituefes, it is proper to go into evidence to fhow the courfe of the prifoner's conduct at other places, and the purpofe for which he went to that place where the treaton is laid, and if he went with a treasmable desis: , then the act of treafon is conclutive. In this I am fupported by a very refectable authority on crown law: Fofter in the cafe of Deacon, from which it appeais that it is enough, to prove that a rebellious affiembly of amed men wre there, and that the prifoner joined them. In order to prove to jou fuily the defign with which the prifoner went to Sethelhem and jeined in this great outrage, I fhall felect fome of the cidence refiecting thofe previous tranfactions; it is not neceffary to ftate the whole.

The judge here read the cridence of Jancs Chapman, Jolm Rodrick, Cephas Childs, and Wilian Thomas referiing the conduct of Jacob Fries, on the $5^{\text {th }}$ of Nach, amal refpering the meting with Foulke and hodrick near S:omater's and alin the tautactien; of the Gth, at (Quaker town which evidence lie faid fo conimed woth other, that 1:o doubt could be entertained.

We now cone to the confefion of the primer, vilumaty mad: on his eamiation before jode leters. il r is a mint on lay reland it was allowed that confeffion out of court and the proof of the wineffes fhould be fufficient to warrant a conviction; but happily our conftitution would not admit it, if an hundred would fwear to it; that danger is wifely avoided. Inflances enough are in the recollection of the court, of a civil and criminal nature where confeffions have been reccived, but the jury are to judgetrom other evidence how far that is to be regarded.

Evidence may fometimes be given which may be doubtful, and wants corroboration ; you will judge whether that is or is not the cafe at prefent. But if the confefion of the prifoner fhould go to confirm the evidence, if fwom to by two witneffes at leaf, it may be received, but unlels it does go to corroborate other teflimony, I do not think it admiffibe. You will confider whether any part of elis confeffion has not before becin proved by two witmeffes: if it has, it goes to corroborate what they fiy, if it has not, jou ane to difergard it. I think there ought to be great caution in receiving, as evidence, a confeffion which ang man makes himfelf, becaule it pollibly might be obtained from him by artifice or intimidation, with reiped to this confeffion, you have the teitimony of my honable colleague, juage Peters, that fie gave the pritoner delibenate warning, that he was not bound to convict himfelf, and that no intimidation was ufed. Whatever objection', then, the may be as to confefion in general, it des not apphy in this cafe, becaule it was voluntarily given.

The prifoner ou his pait introduced fome witnelies, thinking they would be favorable to him: one of them appeared to be fo in his teftimone, which I thall endearor to relate, the other three did sot anfwer his expectation [The judge related the evidence of John Jamiefon.]

With regard to the point of law fated refecting the fufficiency of B we warants, the evidence to this fact thows the general difpolition of that part of the country to relift the execution of the law, and prerent it by force or intimidation; nisi means of fhowing that, is their conduct towards the affellors. Thole who wese appointed to that office, to far as they had it in their power, howed a depofition to act as fucli. It is contended that their warrans cught to have been prodiced. With refpect to the blank comminion which there was a fufpicion was undafull filled up, thene orght to have been the books produced, but it was not material. 'ihs indiciment it will be obfersed, is not for any weftlance to the affefors, or obstrition of them in the difcharge of their duty. I fuppole it is not neceflary to fhow that thole officers were de fuct, engaged in the execution of the law ; that they were conlidered as affellor, and no fuipicion ever was entertainod but that thes were properly authorized to be afforors. This doubt if there was any, conld be removed by reference to a very refpectable authority. It was fulficient if the warants, given under the feal of the commilioner, were prodaced to the court.

The honorable judse cntered pretty largely into the examination of the objection uefecting Mr. Foulle.s appointment in the place of Nr. Clahe, which he contendel wae not material, fince the wartant $n=$ blled and be ated under it

With refpect to another point of objection flated at the bar, that the marfhal in detaining the two men at Bethlehem was liable to an action, he faid that under che circumfances of that period he could not, becaufe, under certain circumftances, he was warranted to call out the posse commitatus i. e. the power of the county, to affift him, if he was likely to be overpowered: it could not be prefumed that the circuuffance did not empower and warrant him to call them out, and therefore we may conclude that danger was really to be apprehended, and thofe apprehenfions mult be heightened by the arrival of thofe two men in arms. In the opinion of judge Henry, who was prelent, the danger was fuch as to juffify the act of detention of thofe two men. Was it with a view of depriving thele men of their liberty? No, but fuppofing them to become with intent to affift in the refcue which they acknowled ed they had heard was contemplated.

Gentlemen, in looking to the law on this point, I do not think it is encroaching at all upon the liberty of any man to take him in cullody : an officer in fuch an action muft be at his peril, and could only be juflified on the exigency of the circumftance: if he did it unecelfarily, a jury would teach hin to take care how he !ported with the liberties of his fellow citizens; but fuppofing, from grod evidence that he was in danger of affault, if he waited the United force of the af: failants, fhall it be contended as unreafonable, that the marfhal hoould take meafures of felf-defence while it was in his power, and detain what he might reafonably fuppofe a part of them? He furely ated the part of a prudent man, and was juftifiable in the act.

Before I difinifs this general fubject, I think it an indifipentible duty which I owe, to declare tiat, excepting the fingle inftance, wherein I do perceive fome improprity of conduct, in the filling $u_{p}$ the blank, commiffon, what has been difclofed in the courfe of this examination of the conduct of the commiffioners or affeflors, has reflected on thrife oficers the greatelt honor: at the fame time they acted with induinty, fidelity, and firmuefs, in the ciicharge of that duty they did all in their power to make it eafy to the people, accommodating themfelves to endeaver to give full fatisfation, undeceiving the dehaded, and removing the errors which the people had fallen into. If the perple fill continued in ignorance and oppofition, thofe gentemen acquitted themelves of blanc, and their conduct merited high praife.

As to the plea of ignorance, the law fays ignorance thail excufe no man, otherwite, how conld it be poffible to prove whether a perion kiew the law or met: if ignemane could excule a man of coines, no crime would be broicht to juttice, or there muft he, what is not to be apeeced, ime felfer:dent piont of the guilt. A compleat knowledge of the laws combot be expected to find every comer of our countr: ; but thus much we may lay, th remove thofe hinds of excufe; if a main does not know when a law is paffed, he knows how to obtain that information, and the haw ithlf; for if he cannot come to Plibadelphia, or fome other towa where they may be purchafed himfelf, be ha, onemeruity of ferang fora sime to time. But in the prefent cafe a d dubt conld have becn removed by application to the affeffors, whon wer cier reay ad willing to fhow the law, and therefore no

Having fpoken in commendation of the conduct of the commiffioners and affeffors, perhaps it is allo my duty to fay that the conduct of the marthal has been equally exemplary: he did every thing in his power, by fair and honorable means, to avoid going to extremity, and as long as he had a hope of retaining his prifoners, he difplayed a degree of courage which few men would do; he even offered to expofe his life to this armed mab, by proceeding with the prifoners to Hhiladelphia, which he would bave done but for the advice of three or four gentlemen with him, who thought it madnefs to proceed. He accordingty defifed, and in the event delivered up the prifoners.
This trial has iafted fo many days, that we mult be all very much fatigued; and I declare, gentlemen, I have frarce had power to examine the various points with minute attention, much lef's to prepare fo proper a flatement of them as I intended to hare dore; the fatigue I have felt many nights at soing out of this court has prevented me doing it: under thefe circumiltances I have no doubt of your excufe, which I flall the more rcadly meet, lince your iatigue muft alfo be very great.

Gentlemen of the Jury. The occafina is undoubtedly the moft awfol and important that ever could artit in any conuntry whatever: the great quellion for you t's decide in, whether the prifoner has been guilty of levying war agraint the United States at Bethlehem, in the county of Nosthimpoon, as charged in the indictment, or not-in order to difcover the nature of his conduct, you muft examine into the motive with which he went to Bethlehem: it is neceffary for you to camine the whole of his previous actions relating thereto: if it flould appear to you that the prifoner forned a fcheme, either on the way or at Bethlelem, by anj kind of force to obtain this olject, then, in my opinion, you ousht to declare him guilty of the charge laid in the indietmeat. On the contrary, if you think he had no public and cvil motive in view, in is not guilty of the crime.

Before I difmifs you, gentemen, I woun romind you of onc confideration which muft impref your mindis: a great and important end of bringing perfons guilty of public crimes to jufise is to preferve inviolate the laws of our country: men who commit crimes ought to be punilhed, otherwife no fafety nor fecurity can be had. On the other hand, it is of confequence, that no :man's life flatil be taken away mijufly; if a man is not guilty of a crime, he ourbit tot to be puathed for it ; and it cannot be tor the interen the conmy: in put a man to death for what he has not cumnitied : there fuc you are not to regard the confequences, but determine merely by the faes in a mamer for which you will be anfwerable at a future cha, as well as mofelf, for all the conduct of our lives, as weil as for the 1 erdity you now give.
Mr. Lewis fated a quefion to the court, whether the overt act had in the indictment in a certain county, muft mot be proved to the fatisfaction of the jury, beth as to fach and intention in be fane con:ti, or whether the overt af did min malede boid fact aid intentom. To which judge Trecell replied, :hat le corifilaci Foner's crown haw 2. Eittlines that paint-whea tion niteetes ase paduced, whech proves drawn from other countries refpecting the intention: this is the opinion of judge Fofter, and it is my opinion. But there is another thing: it goes to a point which is inadmiffible ; it is not for the court to fay whether there was a treafonable intention or act as charged in the indictment; that is for the jury to determine; we have only to flate the laws, we therefore fhould have no right to give our opinion upo: it. Again, if no evidence could regularly be admitted out of the comaty antil both the fact and intention were effablifhed where the crime is laid, the confequence would be, that there ought to be fome way of taking the opinion of the jury, whether they believed that the crime was commited at Bethlehem, before the court could proceed to extranzous tellimony! Thus cannot be done, a jury muft give verdict upon all the evidence collectively; if the evidence is admitted, then the jury is bound to relpect the weight of it: the competency of that cridence is for the court to decide, but the jury muft eftimate its weight.

The queftion for you to decide at this tine, gentlemen of the jury, is, whether upon the teflinuony of two witneflies there is ground to believe the act was committed, and wheiher, from the prifoner's conduct at Bethlehem or elfewhere, it is proved to be with a trealonable intention.

Judge Petfrs-I think the overt act and the intention conflitute the treafun; for withcut the intention the treafon is not compleat. If a man goes for a private purpole, to gratify a private revenge, and not with a public or general view, it differs materially. The intention may poffibly be gathered at the place where the act was committed, or it may not ; if not, evidence is adnuifible to prove it elfewhere.

The jury then withdrew, and the court adjourned for about tliree hours, when they returned with the verdict GUILTY.

Judge Iredell then difmiffed the jury, with the thanks of the court for their patience and attention during the very fatiguing trial.*

Mr. Wynekoop, the forman of this jury, made a flort reply thereto, and the court adjourned.

* This trial occupicd tbe unrcmittel attention of the comrt and jary from April 30 until Maj 9 , inchusioc, ( 9 dys) during which time the jury neever sephatated.

CIRCUIT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

Pennstlvania Disfrict.

JOHN FRIES was again arraigned on the indictment for treafon*, before the Honorable Samuel Canse and Richard Peters, Efquires.
The prifoner pleaded, not guilty.
Mr. Lewis and Mr. Dallas, before engaged to plead for the prifoner, on account of the conduct directed by the court, to be obferved by the counfel, withdrew their affifance; fo that the prifoner was left without counlel; and on being afked by the court, if he would wifh to have fome affigned, he did not accept the offer.

Thursday, April 24.

Before the jurors were fworn in, they were individually afked (upon oath) thefe queftions: " Are you any way related to the prifoner?"
*See page 17.

They all aniwered, "之or." "Have you ever formed or delivered an " opinion as to the guilt or imocence of the prifoner, or that be ouglit "s to be punifhed?" The anfwer generally was, "Not to my know" ledge." Some of the jurors faid, they had given their fentimen:s :enerally, difapre batery of the tranfaction, but not as to the pilioner artaudy. Thele vere admitted.
O.e of the juors (hir. Taggent) after he was fworn, exprefled himelf to the court to be very unealy ander his oash: he then meant that le never had made up his mind that the prifoner flould be hung, but very wifo hod fowhen his opinion, that he was very culpable; be did unt, when he tork the oath, conceive is fo ftiet, and the efore withed, if portible, to be esculed.-The court informed the juror, it was imporible to excufe him, now he was fiworn.

The cout infurmed the piloner, that he had a right to chailenge 35 without lhon ing caule, and as many more as he could fhow caule ir. Thitu-four were challenged, and the fullowing admitted and fwom on the jury:

Samuel Vihecler, Forman ; Henry Pepper ; John Targert; Cormhins Cunegys; Ephaim Chark; Thomas Bailey; Lawrence Caufn an; John Éde ; Chates Defler; Hemy Dubois; Itaac Dehaven; John lialinot.

> Cumse! for the I'osechtion, Mr. Rawle, Mr. Incrirsul.

Mr. R A WLE

Then opened the charge exhibited in the indictment-He offerved, that the jury muft be eware of the very unpleafant duty he had to perfonm: he felt an extreme dificulty of fituation-called forth by Jis duty to extibit a charge arainft the pifoner at the bar of the higheft magnitude, who now flood to anfwer, unattended by any legal advice; he felt impreffed with the neceflity of ftiching more thais 1 hatly chate st the line of his daty, which he fhould endeator to dilcharge as faitifully as poffible. And he trufled that, wh le the jury filt their elation to their unfortunate fellon-citizen at ine bar, they boidd, at the fame time, male all fuitable allowance fir any errors which might appear on his (Mr. Rawle's) part, though it was lincerely his defire to avoid any, either in laying down the facts or the law, which he fhould do under the direction of the court; and, he hoped, that the jury would carefully fift and examine the law and teftimony which his duty called upon him to adrance, in order to lubftantiate the charge.

Mr. Rawle then proceeded to open the chargeme faid, he fhould be able to prove, that John Fries, the prifoner at the bar, did oppole the execution of two laws of the United States, to effectuate zhich he was provided with men, who, as well as himfelf, were armed, with guns, fwords, and other warlike weapons, which, by their numbers and military appearance, were fufficient to accomplith their purpofe, which was, not only to intimidate the officers of the government appointed to cxecute the above laws themfelves; but to releafe fiom the cuffodr of the marfhal of Pennfylvania a number of perfons who were held in prifon by the faid marfhal, and to pevent him executing procels upon others. All this was done, as ftated in the indictment by a combination atd confpiracy to oppofe thole laws, by a large body of armed men, of whom the prifoner at the bar was the chief, and commander.

Mr. Rawle then proceeded, uncier the direction of the court, to fate the law.-The trealon whereof the prifoner was charged was; "Levying war againt the United States." U. S. Conlt. Art. 3 . Sect. 3 .

What he aked, was levying war againf the Urited States?
Ife conceived himfelf authorized, upon good authority to fay, levying war did not only conlift in open, manifen, and avowed rebelliun a yainft the government, with a delirn of overthrowing the conftitution: but it may confil in allembling together in numbers and by actual force, or by terror oppoting any particular law or laws. Again, there can be no diftination as to the kind or nature of the law, or the particular objeit for which the law was pafled, fince all are alike the ates of the leginature, who are fent by the people at large to exprefs their will. Furce need not be ufed to manifelt this fpirit of rebellion, nor is it weceflary that the attempts thould have been fuccefsful, to conftitute the crime. The endeavor, by intimidation to do the act, whether it be accomplifhed or not, amounts to treason, provided the object of thofe concerned in the tranlaction is of a general natare, and net applied to a fpecial or private purpole.

In order to effect the cbject of thofe embarked in crimes of this high nature, it is well known that various means are neceffarily employed; various acts may be pereseated to accomplith the main end: they may proceed, by the exccution of fome enormous crimes, as burglary, arfon, robbery, or murder, either, or all of them; but even if one or all of thefe crimes were committed, except the purpofe fhould be of a general matue, they may form diftinct and heinous offences; but the perpetrators may not be guiley of treafon. If a particular friend of the party had been in the cuftody of the marfhal; if even a nember fufficient for the purpofe thould fte, forward and refcue fuch a perton, it it was not witi a view to refcue prifoners general'y, it would amount to no more that a relcue; but, if genera', it is treaton. It is the views of ine party that fixes the crime, and therefure only the defign is necelin$\because$ t he known.

Io prove that this doctrine was well enablifhed in the United States. i.1. Hawle turmed to 2 Dallas, 346 and 355 , Hating the opinions of the cont in the cafes of Vigal and Mitchel, eharged with, and conbit di:r treafon. The attack on Gen. ## [ 180 ]

He obferved, that the claufe in our conflitution was founded on a flatute which was paffed in England, to prevent the ever increafing and ever varying number of treafons, upon the general and undefined oppofition to royal prerogative: the fituation of things was fuch, previous to that period, as to call forth from the flateman, from the philofopher, and from the divine, even in thofe dark ages, the mof vehement complaints: in attendance to thefe reafonable and juft murmurs, the flatute was paffed.

Mr. Rawle was then producing an authority, when Judge Chale faid, the court would admit, as a general rule, of quotations which referred to what conltituted actual or confructive levying war againft the king of Great Britain, in his regal capacity : or, in other words, of levying war againf his government, but not againft his perfon, becaufe it was of the fame nature as levying war againft the United States would be applied here: fo was that part called adhering to the king's enemies :-they may, any of them, be read to the jury, and the decifions thereupon,--not as authorities whereby we are bound, but as the opinions and decilions of men of great legal learning and ability. But even then, the court would attend carefully to the time of the decifions, and in no cafe mult it be binding upon our juries.

Mr. Rawle quoted Hawkins, B. i. chap. 17. fecl. 23. as an authority of authenticity to prove, that not only thofe who rebelied againft the king, by taking up arms with the avowed defign of dethroning him ; but thofe who withflond his lawful authority, and who codeavored to oppofe his government; who wilhftood the king's forces, or attacked any of his fortrefles-thofe, in fine, whofe avowed object was of a public and general and not of a private and perfonal nature, were guilty of high treafon. He allo read Sir Joln Friend's cafe from Holt, 681. and Damarree and Pinchafes' cale, 8 State 'Trials, 289.

Judge Chace begged the attorney to read only thofe parts of the cafes which referred to what could be treafon in the United States, and nothing which related to compaffing the king's death.-It would be found, he obferved, by an attention to the laft cafe, that becaufe the intention was a rifing to demolif all meeting-houfes, generally, it was confidered to be an infurrection againf the toleration act, by numbers and open force, fetting the law at defiance. This would be found to be the opinion in Folter 213.

Mr. Rawle laid, thus he conceived it-even if the matter made a grievance of was illegal, the demolition of it in this way was, neverthelefs, high treafon, becaufe of the people fo affermbled taking the law into their own hands; thus in Folter it would be feen that demolifhing all baudy-houfes, as fuch was high treation, as much as demolifling all meeting-houles, being equally an wfurped authority. He alfo read Douglas 570 , Lord George Gordon's cale, when it was Lord Mansfield's opinion that any attempt, by violence, to force the repeal of a lan, or to prevent its execution, is levying war, and treation.

He confidered, from thofe few authorities, that he was juffifable in faying that a rifing, with intent by force to prevent the executur!

of a law as well as laws in general, preventing the mathal executing his warrants, and preventing the other officers charged with the execution of the laws in queftion, amounted to levying war, agreeable to the conffitution of the United States.

Mr. Rawle then proceeded to flate the mof prominent facts which could be produced in the courfe of the evidence, in which it would fully appear, he prefumed, that John Fries, the prifoner, was the moft active in his oppofition to thofe laws and to every attempt to carry them into effect; that he in every inflance flowed his averfion of, and oppofition to the affeffors, and determination by threats and menaces to prevent them doing their duty, and tiat whenever any force was ufed, or terrific appearances held tip, he was the commander and gave the orders to his men who, at tintes in great numbers joined him: and that finally by threats and intimidation, equally the lame in the eyes of the law as force, he, the prifoner, did attain his object, to wit, the releale of a number if prifiners u ho were cunfined for oppofing the execution of the law, and were actually in cuftody of the marlial in a houle at Bethlehem, which by reafon of his having prifoners there, and his having an armed posse to protect his lawful authority, was to all intents a fortufs of the United states-and further that lie did, compleatly for a time, prevent the execution of the laws iutencled, in thofe parts, and thusdid bid defiance to all lawful authority.

Court, to the prifoner.
John Fries, you will attend to all the evidence that will be brought againf you; will attend to their examination, and afk any queftions you pleale of the feveral wituefles, or of the court, but be careful to afk 10 queftions wherein you may poffibly criminate yourfelf, for remember, whatever you fay to your own criminationg, is evidence with the jury, but if you fay any thing to your juflification, it is not evidence, the court will be watchful of you, they will check any thing that may injure yourfelf: they will be your counfel, and give you every affiftance and indulgence in their power.

Mr. Henry related the firf information he reccised ,f this oppofition to the laws in queftion, and their unwilliugnef, to fuffer the affeffments. That on application by Mr. Eyerly (the commiffioner) he iflued a number of fubpeneas to bring before hinn findry perfons to examine thefe facts, which he found incffectual from the iutimidations of a number of people who were met where the examinations were to be held. The witnefs, underftanding that the marthal was to meet a number of perfons upon whom he had executed prucels, thought it proper to go to Bethlehem on that day, in order to prevent any extremities that might he attempted. ## WILLIAM NICHOLS (marlhal) (fee page 37. )

Related the receipt of the warrants, which he produced, and the firf part of his progrefs; alfo the circumflance that occurred with Shankweiler, and of the commencement and progrefs of the affair at Bethiehem. Reafoning with the prifoner at the bar, and his fill perfifting in his demand of the prifoners, the wituefs faid that it was a cowardly thing to oppofe an individual thus placed, but that if he had 20 armed men, the priloners thould not be refcued. The priloner laughed at that : on telling hiun that an armed force would be fent up, he anlwered that they were able to come againft any force.

Court. Did he fhow any particular regard for thefe prifoners, or what was his afligned reafon for demanding them?

Witress. No he did not, he faid the law was a bad one, and ought not to be executed.
(Lueftion by the prifoner.*-When the converfation paffed between you and I , did I not afk you if theie prifoners could not be admitted to bail?-I faid I would come forward and ruk my life, that you ahould not be hurt-Was it fo or was it not?

Witness. Very poffibly, but I do not recollect it.
Had I any arms when I came up to you.
Not at that time.
The court then adjourned to dinner, firt having placed the jury under two livorn bailifts, and qualified each juror not to peak to any one tur fuffer any one to fipak to them, touching the matter relative to the trial of this iflue.

JOHN DILLINGER (fee page 37. )

Depofed his having left a meflage at Young Marks's houle for hith to meet the next day to go to Bethbehem, and that Stahler who fent him, faid it was very hard to let thefe men (the prifoners) fiffer by groing down to Philadelphia. Being at Bethlehem the next day, the witnefs faw the prifoner at the bar there : hearing an uproar, the witnefs went into the houfe, where he heard the prifoner (Fiies) fay; "draw near boys, don't be afraid."-I puflied the people back, as did feveral others thicre.

Judge Peters. Was it a common mufter day?
Witness. No, I believe not.

CHRISTIAN HECKAVELTER qualifed.

The witnefs relided in upper Milford townfhip-Soon after I received my warrant as anfeffor of the townhhip and was proceeding on the bufinefs, I was told by my neighbors that the people of the townfhip would not allow me to do i.: After I lad been to a few houfes, I was told if I went on, it thould be at my peril-this was the latter end of November I believe. I then returned home, and informed Mr. Balliot and Mr. Elliot, in order to confult them, what fhould be doine. They agreed to call a townflip meeting to collect the minds of the people. After it was held, I received from a deputation of three men appointed for that purpofe, information that I nouft defift, for there was no fuch law in exiftence. After that Mr. Eyerly informed me he had called a meeting of the people at fquire Schymer's, he took me with hini. A number of people allicmbled there, fome armed and lome without arms. Mr. Eyerly told them he was come to exdain the law to them. There was a queftion among them whether it was a law or not; fome faid it was not in exiffence, and that it was a law of his own making, for that he was able enough to make fuch a law himfelf: I believe it was agreed among them that they would not have their houfes meafured.

Corrt. Was there not frequenit threats thrown out?
Wirness. Yes there was: they alfo gave it as their pofitive dedaration that they would not fubmit to the law; this was their common opimisi.

Attornf.r. Do you know any thing of papers beng pafted up with fword, pilfol, or the eats, being painted or drawn on them?

JOIN ROMICK,

Depofea triat he wias an affefor, in Macongy townfhip-Not long fied I received my commiffion, a women came to me, and faid I fhould 1,st go on with that bufinef, before I was prepared with an iron cap: ansther od women foon after told me 1 fhould not veiture to that h.in:eris of meafuing houfes: I would come in bad condition with it. I tod her I dat not think it, bacauie they were all Chrilians there anout, and I beiieved clurifians would not hurt me. The talk was, that in fome honfes they kept hot water againft the affeflor came round to do his duty. After that I heard there, that there had been feveral meetings like complots, or conlipiracies to obfruct the affeflors, ou that accuunt I was frightened to make a beginning. I heard that Mr. Heckavelter was flopped. Hearing that there was to be a meeting at fquire Schymer's I went there, where Mr. Eyerly explained the law.

Atronsfi. After that, did the people let you go on?
Witness. No.
2. Was there any fedition papers put up near you?
A. Yes, about three miles off-uear Millar's town, but I camot tell what they were; I never read them.

JACOB OSWALD

Depofed, That he was appointed affefor for Lymu townhip: That about December, $179^{3}$, he came to about the ninth plantation, when he was flopped by the people.-I heard that there was to be a townShip meeting held, fo I went, and took two conftitutions with me, and the prochumation of General Wafhington to the Weftern infiurgents in 1794. I alf, howed them my orders, and the at of Congrefs. They thought Congrefs had no right to tax them: I fhowed them that Congrefs had a right. They faid, I ihould fop till the lower townhips began to meafure, as Philadelphia and Germantown; fo I was forced to ftop. The townfhip was not affeffed till after the light horle went up there, and then the liberty poles were cut down.

ISAAC SCHYMER, ESO.

Was an affeffor for the townfhip of Williams and Lower Sauchon; he depofed, That he was proceeding on his bufinet's; and, on account of the talk of oppofition, wrote to a neighboring affeffor to go about with him, but that he refufed on that very account: he then went by limelelf; at one place he was flopped, when tie man faid to the witnefs, he would abufe him if he pretended to meafure his houfe. The wituefs faid, he did jot mean to quarrel with him; he nuft make his returus to him in ten days. The man alfo faid, there would be danger in his going to take the rates.

In Lower Sauchon the witnefs allo met with onpofition: the men had gone from their homes; but a quantity of women were gathered there, and compelled him to defift.

JAMES WILLIAMSON, ESO.

Depried, That he was an affeffor in Northampton county: That foon atter he kad received the appointment, feveral of his near neighbors came and warned him not to go about the townhip: That he attempted many houfes, but they would give him no information; whereupon he told them to bring their rates in ten days, acconding to law: they anfwered, they would not bring them, they would make no returns: every one faid, he fhould offend his neighbors if he did. I then thought it beft to put up advertifements for them to neet together, on a certain day, to confult what it was beft to do: a very large party of them met. After a little time, three or four feem to winh to difturb the meeting. One of them afked for my authority : I howed them my appointment: they feemed to be much oppofed to what was done : I reafoned with them, but to no purpole; many of them faid, it was no law. I read the law to them: they were pretty well latisfied while I was reading, till I came to where the valuation was mentioned, then one of them cried out, it was a damned law, and they never would fubmit to any fuch law. I told them it was a hiw, and as loug as it was a law, we mufl fupport it ; they faid they never would, and figuified they would rather fight againgt it. I told them that fighting was attended with dangerous confequences, for that men loft their lives in it; but they faid they would rather die than fubmit to ir, or live under it ; they had fought againf fuch laws, and they would again. They told me, that I fhould nos go about to collect the returss, they never would fuffer it to be done; I thould let the bulinefs alune, and if any damage occurred to me by being fined, the towallap ihould reimburfe me, The whole body feemed to nfe and give there affent to this.

Court. What did you go in the houfe for?
Wir:i.jo. Why, Heary called me, and hid In uf cope atong:
A. Ded you hiow any of the prifones?
A. No; none of them.

Court. What did you go up to Bethlehem for?
Wirness. Why, old Marks faid, it was to fhow ourfelves; but I camot tell what for.
Q. Was it to take the prifoners?
A. I do not know myfelf. The people of Northampton were geing up to take the prifoners, and we went to fhow ourfelves.
Q. Were you armed ?
A. Jes.
Q. How did the people go away after they got the prifoners?
A. Why, thes got away as faft as they could: thote that were on horfevack rode away as fift as they could, and thofe on foot ran away.

PRISONER TO THE WITNESS.

When I came out to you and told you that the mathal had howed me his order, had I any arms, or a luond?
A. No. The laft time, when you told the men they mult refcue the prifuners by force, you had a fiword.

Court. 1):d you hear the people cry ont, they would have the p.ifners?
A. Ye: ; one Hoover, particulall:.

Parsoxrr. Did you ever fee me at any of the townlhip meeting, cacept at Kline's?
A. Inever faw the frinner at any mecting at all, as I was not at the meecing at Kliae', : I was only at the meeting at Mitchel's.

Witaress. After we had come fiom Bethlehem three or four days, I tede the prifoner that I heard the light hofe was coming up: the piloner daid no, it was all fet:led and quiet: if they fent a child of ten years old, he (the prifoner) would help the marthal to tale them.

EVERHARD FOULKE, ESO. (Payc 115.)

Depofed, That he was an affefor in Jower ?.Tiliord: That he proceeded on in the affefment until he net the other afleffors, and the principal alleflur, James Chapman, at Jacob lricss tavert, where they dined together; and after dimer the pilloner cane into the room, and faid, he was forry to fee them there upon thit bulanef: lie warned them not to proceed any farther; if they did they thould be hurt; and then he immediately left the room, whout even an anlwer. He then mentioned the circumfance near Singmatier's, as related by Mr. liodrick (p.71.) the prifoner feized the deponent's horle, bat let him so again, laying, he would take him the mext day: That they had, or 700 men in arme, and would come to his houfe and tate him. He heard the firing at Quaker's town; the curcumitances which occurred there he related. Having taken the affefincot papers, the pritoner retuned them, laying it was more than the witnels deferel.
Q. Did they day any thing about geting the law repealed?

A. I am not certain.-The other people faid they would fubmit; but not till after the other flates did: Fries faid, they would never fulmit.
Court. You are a magiffrate, are you not, frr?
A. Yes.
Q. Did Fries know it?
A. Yes; he had many times known me in that capacity.

Prisoner.-When I took you from the people to the back kitchen, and away out of the houle backward, and helped you on your horle, Did I or not defire you to go out of the way, fo that the jeteple fhould not fee you?

Witness. Yes, you did take me out the hack way, amal faid, Captain Kuder was then commadiar the people ia the fiont of the houfe: you did defire me to litep out of their wa:.

One pertion who abofed the witncts fiad, he hat fought for liberty, and would fight for it again; but he afterwands returned, feemed forry for it, and feveral times atterwards achnowledged his crime, and loped farqisenef. The general language of the people was abule to the "dimmed laws," as they called them.

ISRAEL ROBERTS (page 1 I. )

In feveral converfations with the prifoner, he heard him expref: his dinike of the law. Having procured the law, and heard the prite ner fay that he had never read it, he defined him to examine it, which the prifoner faid he would do, and afked leave to take it home. - The witniefs afterwards afked his (Fries's) fon, what his father thought of the law? he anfiwered, not much, he believed. At a meeting held (purhaps at Mitchel's, p. 65 and 6 ..) an attempt was made to read the law, but they would not fuffer it: one man faid, he knew the kw; anotleer faid, they wanted to hear nope of our damned laws, new wituld hear it, and, Itamping his mufket on the floor, faid, "This is nus taw; " we have made a law of our own, and we are determined to fliphoit in." -On the $s$ th of March I met John: Fries, when he appearad th be ary ill bamoured: 1 atked him what was the mater? he hid, the Whellons had been about, and they thould :oot do it. He atked me, if they had taken the dimentions of my bouic? I faid they hat. He whed me, if I had told any body of ta? I faid not. He femed wery murli oppured to the law, and finh, his ownhip lhom wot to arded al. ober parts were gore through.
$\therefore$ Mid you cer hear him any any the at ana:
A. I have heard him fay many times if there was a war he would be in it: if the French, or whoever invaded the rountry, he would oppofe them. Imentioned to him that government would fend up an army. He faid if they did, they would turn about and join them, he was of opinion.

Atronnex. Did yon ever recollect hearing him fay, that if a begiming was made it would go on well?

DANIEL, WIEDNER.

t. Did you, on the foh of March, fee a party of men marching down the wad from Jacob Fries's?
A. Yes; J faw a body of men march to Fries's, and then to (luaker town; fome were armed, and fime unarmed. I went after them as far as lijes's.
Q. Had they a drum and fife?
A. Yes; they had when they canc by my houfe, and by Jacob Fries's too.
Q. Did you dee the prifoners with them?
A. les.
2. Who appeared to have the command?
A. The prifoner and capt. Kuder.-They wanted fomebody to ga after the affefors: fo Gettinan, Marks, and two more went.
2. Who wanted them to go?
A. The prituner at the bar.
Q. What were they to do with them when they got them?
A. Why they were to bring them to (quaker town.
2. Weie any of thefe four men who went after the affeffors armed?
A. les.
2. How many of them were almed?
$\therefore$ I thirk Marlis and Getman were, or all of them; I am not fure. I think one of the four was the prifuners fon: I do not know whetlier he was amed.
Q. Did you not meet at Malks's the next morning to go to Beththem?
A. Yes. When we lef Marlis's, we went on towards Ritter's tavern, and before we got there, Marks's fon was coming back, and held up his fword for us to flop: he faid that he thought it was'all over before now; they were gone from Riter's tavern. Some agreed to go bath, fume faid fince they were gone fo far they would go through.
O. Of which was the puifoner at the bat?
$\therefore$. I think he was for guing on.
Cocrt. Was William Thomas anong you?

A. I cannot recollect.-We then went on to Bethlehem.

Q. Did the priloner go into the houfe at Bethlehem, and what happened there?
A. Why, he went into the houfe, and when he came out, he faid, the marfhal would not give up the prifoners without we fhould take them by force, and if they had a mind to take them, he would go foremoft. Fries and the reft then went in, but I don't recollect whether he had a fiword at that time: he had one when we were going to Bethlehem.

Court. Did you fee any of the reople before the houre point theip guns?
A. No, not to my knowledge.
2. Did you hear any threats ufed to Judge Henry or any other?
A. Not that I krow.

Prisoner. At Marks's, the time I faid I meant to oppoif the law, the room was pretty full of people; i: what part of the room was it?
A. It was on the right land fide of the room, on the bench.
2. Was there any people by?
A. Not that I recollect.

Court. Be cautious what you fay, John Fiies.
Prisoner. Do you not remember that I faid (after the committeo was agreed to) I would come forward to the government, if they would fend the order by a child of ten years old, if I was lent for?
A. Not that I recollect.

The counfel for the prifoner here refted their evidence.
The prifoner was afked if he had any witnelles to produce: he: anfwejed, None.

Mr. R A W L E

Said he fett hiusfelf fo very peculiarly fituated in this cafe, that he would with the opinion of the C urrt. The unfortunate prifoner at the bar appeared to anfiwer to a charge, the greatefl thai could be brought againf him, without the affiltance of counfel, or any trie: A to advife with.-To me, faid Mir. R. the evidence againft the prifoner is extremely flrong. It will be recollected, that in opening the evidence, I infurmed the jury what points I hould prove: I operied. my ideas of conltructive law, aid produced a feiz authorities in fun:port of my opinions. I believe it will be found, that in no materant point have I failed to fubitaitiate what I firt gave notice that I cuald prove. I therefore conceive the charges are fully corfirmed.

But although, if this trial was conducted in the ufual way, and counfl were ready to advocate the caute of the pria :as: :t would now be proper on my part to fum up ine evidence as prow in the jury, and apply it to the law, in order to fee whetler we wi:: in as fixed or not-ander the prefent circumfances, I feel ve! gorat ie luctance to fulinl, what would in other cincuntances be my bani...ia duty, lelt it thould appear to be going farther than the rigid recpu taon of my office compels me to. I therefore hall relt the evidicuse ard the law here, exept the court think that my ottice as public profecufor demand, of me to du it, or that I thould not fulfit my duty without doing it.

Jubge Chasb, -It is not unfrequent for aprifoner to appear in a court of jullice without counfel, but it is uncommon for a prifoner not to accept of legal affltance. It is the peculiar lenity of our laws that males it the duty of a court to afisn counfel to the perfon aca aed. With relpect to your hatuation, hir, it is a matte: entirely difcetionary with you whether you will thate the evidence and apply it w the law or not. There is great jutice due to a prioner arragned oin a charge fo mportant as the prefent: there is great jultice alfodue to the government. On the olie had an inocent pertion thall not ine made to felfer for want of legal affitance; on the other a guilty pertion thall not efase through an undue indulgence, or the failure of the acculer in a duty his office may require of him. If you do not plate to proceed, I fhall conlider it my duty to apply the law to the tacts, the prifoner may therefore offer u har he aliales to the jury.

Prisoner. I lubanit to the court to do me that juftice which is rifu.

Jung: Catas:. That I will, by the befling of God, do you every juice.

Jude Peters. Mr. Attorney, white you are juftifiable in conhaicing the lituation of the pribser, that be might not fuffer by any partial impretions you may make on the jury, there is another contideratoradeferving atte: :tion-there is juliice due to the United States. 'Thush 1 fee no dificulty in relting it here, yet, pollibly perfons who may have come into court liace the tual commenced may expest fancility of a narrative of the tranactions, and fuch a narrative may li, of erat help to the jury. I wifh it to be due for the due executon "f public julice, and, God knows, I do it not with a defree to $i$ jure the prioner, fur I wihn are the convition of any man. It is a plinfultath, hut we mut do our duty. Still I think you are at $\mathrm{l}_{\mathrm{i}}$ bert. W Ehal y our own pleature.

Mir. Raw ie would, then, under a folemn impreffion that it was li- dure, take up fome part of the time of the court and jury in relawom to the paif:ner at the bar, a tak rendurd far meve painfulom his faidion the circumfance of the prifoncts appearing there (unexfercibis) vithout counfel to plead his caulic. In as eew wod as polfin le te wond ead avor to cullect the man pmoment featues of the

As he fated before, Mr. Rawle faid, levying war in the United States againft the Unired States, was a crime defined by the conflitution; in relation to the republican form of government exifting among us it could only confift in an oppofition to the will of the fociety, of which we all are members, declared and eftablifhed by a majority; in fhort, an oppofition to the acts of Congrefs, in whole or in part, fo as to prevent their execution, either by collecting numbers, by a difplay of force, or by exhibiting that degree of intimidation which fhould operate, in either way, upon thofe charged with the execution of the law, either throughout the United States or in any part thereof, to procure a repeal, or a fufpenfion of the law by rendering it impracticable to carry fuch law or laws into effect in the place fo oppofing, or in any other part. This offence he confidered to be frictly treason againft the United States.

The queftion then is, how far the cafe of the prifoner and his conduct merits this definition? In order to be informed of that it was neceflary to call to recollection the evidence, fo collected, as to dipplay the train and progrefs which marked its footteps from its firt dawning, till its arrival at the fatal deed denominated treafort.
It will firlt be obferved by the teflimony of feveral refpectable witneffes (Meffrs. Heckavelter, Ramich, Schymer, Ormond, and Williamfen) that attempts were made and executed, by a combination, in which, unfortunately for him, the prifoner at the bar was very active, to prevent the affeffors from doing the duty required of them when they accepted their office, and that tuiis combination exifted both in Northampton and Bucks counties, and to fucha degree that it was impoffible to carry the law into effect. In lower Milford more particularly we lave the evidence of four refpectable gentlemen (Mr. Chapman, a principal affeffor, and Mr. Rodrick, Mr. Foulke, and Mr. Cbilds, three affeffors) who were employed in the execution of thofe laws. Thefe gentlemen fay that they met with fuch oppofition at an early period of the infurrection, as deterred Samuel Clark from undertaking the bufinefs at all, although he had taken upon him the office. From this difficulty, Meffrs. Foulke, Kodrick and Childs determined that they would proceed to affefs lower Milford townthip together, which they attempted, and did not defift until compelled by the extreme oppofition which their refpective teftinony relates to have happened on the $5^{\text {th }}$ and 6 h of March, in their progrefs to, and at Quaker's town, which ill ufage is all corroborated by other witneffes. This fpirit of oppofition to the laws, as exhibited generally, is alfo relatcd by Mr. Henry and Col. Nichols, the marfhal, wherein it appears that procefs could not be ferved, and that witneffes could not be fiubpenead, being deterred from the threats made to them by this extenfive combination ; and that in the ferving of procefs perfonal abule was given, as well as to the affeffors who attempted to execute the law. In fhort the law was prostrate at the fect of a powerful combination.

Mr. Rawle here called to view the occurrences in Bucks county, as depofed by Meffrs. Foulke, Rodrick, Ciapman, Thomas, Mitchel, and Wiedne:, exhibting a difpofition to infurrection by a great number of perfuns, and whoengaged in its acts; he referred to the meeting as Jacob Fries's, where Join Fries, the prifoner at the bar, expreffed himielf as detemining to oprofe and continue hoftile to the laws. The circumflance afterwards near Singmafler's, where Mr. Rodrick made lis e'tane, and where, as well as at other times, the prifoner forbade minfe oincers to proceed, under theats of perfonal danger. It appanal Mr. Rudrick had eiven offence, not by his conduct, but becante he came from a diftance of ten or twelve miles into that townAnij t. prutecute bis duty. However the affeffors met the next day, but were fopt at Ouaker town, where they were extrmely abufed. Tole fure, while the prifoner at the bar was in the room, and whenever he was prefent, their abule was fulipended, when he abfented himfelf, it was renewed. The papers were taken fiom Mr. Childs, and allo from Mr. Foulke, but retumed, becauke they weie not the identical pancos. Fere it mutt be wbeved in jattice to the prifoner that one noore of his few grod actions appeared, which Mr. Rawle wifhed in his heart had been more numeroms.-Fries affited Mr. Foull:e to get out of the houfe the back way, and advifed tim to keep out of the way of the nem.

On the evening of that day they went up to Millea's town: here Mr. Rawle called tomind the meflage delivered by John Dillinger for convening the meeting the next day; this meflage was the fruits of a confultation held at the houle of Jacob Fries, atier they left Quaker tuwn, when they determined to proceed to Millar's town the next morning. The next moming they met and went on as far as Ritters, where it appeared they were itopped for a fhort period by young Marks, who had been fent forward, with information that the prifoners were gone on to Bethlehem: a doubt being farted whether they would not be too late, it was debated, and at laft determined to go forward: of hhis latter opinion was the prifoner at the bar. It was in evidence that none of thofe people knew the prifoners whom they were gaing to releale: this Mitchell and others fwore.

Here Mr . Rawle thought commenced the overt act i: the indictment; hitherto only the general oppolition to the lav, and the intention with which the after conduct was perpetrated, appeared. - They proceeded to Bethehem, and here the cificer of mlitia, the man who derived his power from the people, the piifoner, Cabitain Fubn Fries, whofe duty it was to fupport the law and confliation of the United States, made a molt diftinguithed figure. At iktulehem it appeared that the prifoner was to flep forward to cied the furreader of the prifoners, and of courfe to hay preftrase the legal am of the United Stats. Thefe prifoners were in the lawinl cufode of the mathal, he had lawiul procels araint them from the diftrit juge; they were in the loute appeinted for their fate keeping amil they thotid be removed; he kept guard user them, and in ouker to execute his ofice he had provided, by virtue of the powers given to the flemerif in the feveral counties agreeable to law, an anmed force called a ossec, matatus, or the power of the county. This force (about 16 or 17 ) he fuppofed fuficiently great to prevent the prifoners in his charge being biberated, it appeared, however in the fequel that ihey weee not fufficient for that purpole. - The prifoner with an armed force arrived at Beth.

lehem, and proceeded on his miffion to the marlial : he had a fword when he marched his men into the town; but it appeared that he left it when he entered on his other bufi:efis, to wit, demandin: the furrender of the prifoners; the marthal amisered, that he couid not deliver them up. Jolm Fries then returned to his men; ard fioma the teftimony of Mitchel, Barnet, and Schlangl, (hi.is was an inportant part of his conduct) he faid, "They mult be take:a by force; ; the " marflal lays he camot deliver them up; if you are willing, we wih " take them by force: I will go foremoft; if I drop, then take yan: "own command." Words were followed by arions; they went inte the boufe, and the prifoncrs were given up.
This, Mr. Rawle thought, was an ungultionahs, full aml completo proof of the commiffion of the overt act, and that neta ata is bigh treason, as laid in the third and fourtin counts of the indiciment, take from bim certain persons, sobon be hud in luyefll casted; ; and, further, this was done by force and arms, of mesa amyed in a warlike manner, and by a number eiceeding one hundred perintio. This tlic indictment juftly calls levying war, and treaton.

To him Mr. Rawle faid, there was no doub: but the aft of trying "ar was completed in the couney of Bucks, indicuntuty of all thofe actions at Bethlehem; for there the prifiner and wetheis were armed, and arrayed with all the appecarases of war: with dums and fifes, and at times firing their pieces; and this to cep, fe the laws and prevent their execution, and there, by this force they executed one, and the main part of their plan; they the dide fot the law at defiance: that was part of their grand doject, and was dwe with a general, and not with a particular view, an cliential ingredient in treafon. Whether thefe actions were to be contidered as a feparate act of treafon, or whether they were to evince the iutentions of the party, it certainly muft be coullidered as teftimony, and fuch as muft bave an important weight towards the verdict.

Gentemen, faid Mir. ditmey, you wili confider how far the individual witneffes are deferving your credit; if you confider them worthy of being believed, and if the facts related apply to the law which I fubmitted to yon conideration, and whoh, from the filence of the conert, I think you mult confider as accurate, if not I thail fland corrected by the court,-there can be but litele douht upoa your minds, that the promer is guilty: if i: be foot fo, in your opinion, yna mat find hiun otherwife.
I have endeanored th do my duty with integrity. I have advanced you, genalcmen, and with the court, I leave the trusin of the opinion.

Cocrt. Jolin Frice, you are at liberty to iny any this:g you pleate to the jary.

Paisoxer. It was mentioned, that I colleced a parcel ef people Stcied me ont fiom my houfe to go with them.

I bave athang way, but leave it io the court.

JUDGE CHASE

Then addressed the Jury as follows:

J

Gentlemen of the Jury,

OHN FRIES, the prifoner at the bar, ftands indicted for the crime of treasm, of levging war againt the United States, contrary to the comfitution.
By the Confitution of the Linted States, art. 3. Sect. 3 . it is declared, "That treafon, againft the United States, thall confift only in " leying quar agant them; or in adbering to their encmies, giving " them aia and comfori."

By the fame fection it is further declared, "That no perfon flath " be convicted if treafon, unlels on the teltimony of two witneffes to " the same oucrt act; or on confeffor in open court;" and that "the "Congres flall have power to declare the punishment of treafon."

Too mach praife cannot be given to this constitutional definition of treafon, and the requiring fuch full proof for conviction; and declaringe, that no attainder of ticafon flatl work corruption of blood, or for ceiture, except during the life of the perfon attainted.

This constitutional definition of treason is a queftion of law. Every propofition in any fatute (whether more or lefs difinct, whether eafy or difficult to comprehend) is alway; a queflion of law. What is the true meaning and truc import of any fatute, and whether the cafe ftated comes within it, is a queftion of $l_{w} w$, and not of fact.- The queftion in an indictment for levying war againft (or adhering to the enemies of) the United States, is-" Whether the facts Itated do, or "do not amount to leving quar," within the contemplation and conflruction of the conflitution?

It is the duty of the court in this cafe, and in all criminal cafes, tu) thate to the jury their opinion of the law ariting on the facts; but the jury are so decide on the prescit, and in all criminal cafes, botb tbe lave and the facts, on their conlideration of the qubole cafe.

It is the opinion of the court, that any infurrection, or rifing of any body of people, within the United states, to attain or effect, by force, or violence, any object of a sreat public nature, or of public and gencral (or national) concern, is a lewing of war againh the United States, within the contemplation and conffraction of the constitution.

On this general position the court are of opinion, that any sucb infurrection, or rifing to refit, or to prevent, by furce or violence, the execution of any flatute of the United States, for levjing or collecting $t$ exes, daties, impuits, or exiles; or for calliug forth the militia to exccute the laws of the Linicn, or for any other whect of a general nature or national concern, under any pretence, as that the flatute was unjuf, burtherfome, oppolfive, rr unconflitutional, is a levying war againot the United State, within the contemplution and confhuctica of the constitut ma. - The reaten for this opinion is, that an infarec-tion to relif or prevent, by force, the execution of any fatute of the United States, bas a direct tendency todiffolve all the bands of fociety, to deftroy all order, and all laws; and allo, all fecurity for the lives, liberties, and property of the citizens of the United States.

The court are of opinion, that military weapons (as guns and fwords, mentioned in the indictment) are not neceflary to make sucb insurrection or rising amount to levying war; becaufe numbers may fupply the want of military weapons; and other instruments may effect the intended mifchief: The legal guilt of levying war may be incurred without the ufe of military weapons, or military array.
The court are of opiuion, that the affembling bodies of men, armed and arrayed in a"warlike manner, for purpofes only of a private nature, is not treason; although the judges, or other peace officers fhould be infulted, or refiffed; or even great outrages committed to the perfor:s, or property of our citizens.

The true criterion to determine whether acts committed are treasm, or a less offence, (as a riot) is the quo animo or the intention with which the people did aflemble. When the intention is universal, or generai, as to effect fome object of a general public nuture; it will be treason; and cannot be confidered, conftrued, or teduced to a riot. The commiffion of any number of felonics, riots, or other mildemeanors cannot alter their nature, io as to make them amount to treason; and, on the other hand, if the intention and acts combined amount to, treason, they cannot be sunk down to a felonv, or riot. The intention with which any acts (as felonies, the deftruction of property, or the like) are done, will fhow to what class of crimes, the cate belongs.

The court are of opinion, that if a body of people confipire and meditate an infurrection to resist or oppose the execution of any statute of the United States by force, that they are only guiliiy of a bigh misdemeanor; but if they proceed to carry such intention into exceation, by force, -that they are guilty of the treason of leaying war; and the quantum of the force employed neither lessens, nor increases the crime; whether by one hundred, or one thouland perfons, is wholly immaterial.

The court are of opinion, that a combination, or conspirucy to lay guar againt the United States is not treason, unlefs combined with an attempt to carry fuch combination, or confpiracy, into execution ; Gome actual force, or violence, muft be ufed, in purfuance of such design to lecy war; but that it is altogether imuaterial, whether the frre ufed is fufficient to effectuate the object; any force comected guth the intention, will conllitute the crime of lewing coar.

This opinion of the court is funded on the same principhles, and is, in substance, the same, as the opinion of the circuit court, for this diltrict, on the trials (in April rig9) of Vigol and Mitchell, who were both found guilty by the jury, and afterwards pardoned by the late Prefident.

At the circuit court for the diftrict (April term 1799) on the trial of the prifiener at the bar, Judge Iredell deivered the tame opinion, and Fries was cmicted by the jury.

To fupport the prefent indictment agairit the priloner at the bar, two facts muft be proved to your fatisfaction:

First. That fome time beforc the finding of the inclictment, there was ins inturrection (or rifing) of a body of poople in the county of Northampton, in this State, cu:th intent to oppole and prevent, by means of intimidation and ciolence, the execution of a law of the United States, intituled "An Act to provide for the valuation of lands and dwelling-houfes, the emumeration of Haves within the United Siates;" or, of another law of the United State, intituled "An die to lay and collect a direct tax within the (inited States:" amat that sum: att; of oiolence were commitied by some of the penple dation, dend sinence, the exccution of both, or of one of the fiad laws of cougrefs.

In the conlideration of his, furt, wa are to confider and determine with what intat the people alfminno Bethenem, whether to effect, by force, a phblic or a prisete mentine.

The intent with which the perpite affembled at Bethlehem, in Northamplon, is a wcossaty ingredei it the fact of asembing, and to be proved like any other fact, b; the deciarulions of thofe who afiembled ; or by acts done by them. When the queflion is, "What $i_{i}$ a man's intent?"-It may Le proved by a number of connected circumstances; or by a single foct.

If from a careful examination of the evidence, you fhall be conmincel, that the real object and intrnt of the people affembled at Bethlhem was of a public nature, (which it certainly was, if they affembled with intent to present the exccution of botb of the abovementioned laws of congrefis, or cither of them) it muft then be proved to your fatisfauion, that the piloner at the bar, incited, encouraged, promotel, or assistal in the infurrection, or rifing of the people, at B thehem, and the terrar they carried with them, with intent to oppric and prevent, by means of iasimidation amdenelence, the execution of b:oth the above-mentioned haws of congrefs, or either of them; and that some forec was uied by s.me of the people afiembled at Bethle hem.
Ia the confideration of this fact, the cem think proper to affit your inquiry by giving you their opinin.
In treaton, all the particips crimiais are pincizals; there are no acceffarics to this crime. Every act, which in the cale of filony, wombluder a man an accelliary, will, in the cale of trecsem, mahe hama asipal. To render any perton an watsonice and princisal in f: $\because$, he mult be aiding and abesting at tee fuet ; or ready to as: andinance, if necessary. If a perion be pefent at a felony, aidwhan the perman charsed are of the sume form upan the same as: raly to aford afthen if neceflay, to thute who amaly commit any treasonable art, are alfo principals. If a number of perfons affemble and fet out upon a common desion, as to refint and prevent, by force, the cxecution of any law, and fome of them commit atts of force and violence, ruith intent to oppofe the execution of any law, and other:s are prefent to aid and affift, if neceflary, they are all frincifals. If any man joins and acts with an affembly of people, his intent is always to be confidered and adjudged to be the fame as theirs; and the law, in this cafe, judgeth of the intent by the fact. If a number of perfons combine or confpire to effect a certain purpofe, as to oppofe, by force, the execution of a law, any act of vislence done by any one of them, in purfuance of fuch combination, and with intent to effect sucb object, is, in confideration of law, the act of all who are prefent when fuch act of violence is committed. If perfons collect together to act for one and the same common end, any act done by any one of them, with intent to effectuate fuch common end, is a fact that may be geven in evidence againft all of them; the act of eacb is evidence againft ale concerned.

I hall not detain you at this late hour to recapitulate the facts:you have taken notes, and they have been fated with accuracy, and great candor, by Mr . Attorucy.

I will only remark, thar all the evidence relative to tranfactions before the affembling of the armed force at Bethlemem, are only to fatisfy you of the iatent with which the body of the people affembled there. If cither of the three overt asts (or open ciect.s) Aated in the indictment, are proved to your fatisfaction, the cont are of ovinion, that it is fufficient to maintain the indictment; for the court are of cpinion that every osert ait is treafonable.
As to accomplices-hey ate legal witaclies, and entited to credit, unlefs deftroyed by teltimeny in court.

If, upon confideration of the eabole matter (law as well as fant fou are not fully fatisfied, without any dat, that the pribner is guilty of the treason charged in the inditment, you will find him $n: i$ finity; but if, upon confideration of the awole matter, (law as well as fuci) sou are convinced that the prifuner is guity of the treafon charged in the indictinent, you will hind him guilty.

The jury retied, for the face of two hours, and brought in their erdict, GUILTY.

After the serdict was given, Judre Chafe, with great fecing and Pembility, addrefied the prioner, oberving that as lee had no coumite : on the trial, if he, or any pesion for him, could point out any that in the indictment, or lexal ground for arrett of judgment, ample time wuld be allined for that purpulc.

> Friday, Ma:

The Court this moraing calleci ifetwe them Charles Dether, a jon ror on the above tial of John Fric, who, on the fuft evening of the laid trial, on the adjournment of the court, feparated trom the jury and retired to his ludgings. Mr. Hepkinur, in behaf uf Mr. Dediler, produced his own athlari, and hat of two ohers, whel pored, that on the faid evening, Charles Defhler was inadvertently feparated from his brethren by the crowd, in going out of the jury box; that he did not know to what place the jury had adjourned; that he then proceeded to his lodgings, where he cautioully avoided all converfation refpecting the trial depending.-The court, latisfied by this reprefentation, of the innocence of Mr. Defller, ordered that he be difcharged, and that the before-mentioned affidavit be entered on the record of the court.

Fudge Cbase's Address.

The prifoner being fet at the bar, Judge Chafe, after obferving to Hainey and Gettman that what he had to fay to Fries would apply generally to them, the judge proceeded-

JOHN FRIES-You have been already informed, that you flood convicted of the treason, charged upon you by the indiament on which youvhave been arraigned, of lesying zuar againft the United States.-You bave had a iegal, fari and mpartial trial, with evely indulgence that the law would permit. Of the whole pannel, you pfrfmptorily challenged thirty-four, and, with truth I may fay, that the jury who tried you, were of your own selection and cboice. Not one of then bifore had ever formed and delivered any opinion refpecting your guilt or imnocence. The verdict of the jury againft you was founded on the teflimony of many creditable and unexceptionable witneffes. It was apparent from the conduct of the jury, when they delivered their verdict, that if innocent they would have acquitted you with pleafure ; and that they pronounced their verdict againf you with great concern and reluctance, from a fenfe of duty to their countiy, and a full conviction of your guilt.
The crime of which you have been feund guilty is traason; a crime confilered, in the mof civilized and the mof free conntries in the world, as the greatest that any man can commit. It is a crime of fo deep a dye, and attended with fuch a train of fatal confequences, that it can receive no aggravation; yet the daty of my flation requires, that I flould explain to you the nature of the crime of which you are conviled; to flow the necissity of that justice, which is this day to be adminiftered; and to awaken your mind to proper refections and a due fenfe of your own condition, which I imagine you mult have rethened upoar duing your long confinement.
lou are a muliar of this comutry-Yal live under a confitution (or form of government) framed by the pecple thembetes; and under laws made by verer reprefentatives, faithfully executed by independent and imparial jedges. Your govemmest ferures to every member of the community equal liberty and equal risbis; by which equality of liberty and rigkts I mean, that every perion, withut any regard to wealth, rank or flation, may enjoy an equal hare of civil liberty, an equal protection of lawy, and an equal fecurity for his person and pro-perly.-You enjoyed, in common with your fellow-citizens, all tbose rigbts.

If experience fhould prove, that the constitution is defective, it provides a mode to cbange or amend it, without any danger to public order, or any injury to social rights.

If Congrefs, from inattention, error in judgment, or want of information, fhould pafs any law in violation of the conflitution ; or burthenfome, or oppreflive to the people, a peaceable, lafe and ample remedy is provided by the constitution. The people themfelves have eftablifhed the mode by which such grievances are to be redreffed; and no otber mode can be adopted, without a violation of the conflitution and of the laws.-If Congrefs fhould pafs a law contrary to the constitution, fuch law would be void, and the courts of the United States poffefs complete authority, and are the only tribunal to decide, whether any law is contrary to the constitution.-If Congrefs fhould pals burtbensome or oppressive laws, the remedy is with their conffituents, from whom they derive their exiftence and authority. If any law is made, repugnant to the voice of a majority of their conflituents, it is in their power to make choice of perfons to repeal it; but until it is repealed, it is the duty of every citizen to fubmit to it, and to give up his private fentiments to the public wvill. If a law burthenfome, or even oppreffive in its nature or exccution is to be oppofed by force, and obedience cannot be compelled, there muft foon be an end to all government in this country.-It caunot be credited by dispassionate men, of any information, that Congrefs will intentionally make laws in violation of the conflitution, contrary to their facred truft, and folemn obligation to fupport it. None can believe, that Congrefs will svilfully, or intentionally, impofe unreafonable and unjuft burthens on their conflituents, in which they must participate. The moft ignorant man muft know, that Congrefs can make no law that will not affect them equally, in every respect, with their conftituents. Every law that is detrimental to their confituents, mult prove hurtful to themfelves. From thefe confiderations, every one may fee, that Congref's can lave no interest in oppressing their fellow-citizens.

It is almof incredible, that a people living under the beft and mildeft government in the whole world, Ihould not only be diffatisfied and difcontented, but fhould break out into open refiftance and oppofition to its laws.

The infurrection in 1794 , in the four weftern counties of this flate (particularly in Wafhington) to oppoofe the execution of the laws of the United States, which laid duties on ftills, and fipirits diftilled, within the United States, is fill frefh in memory: it originated from prejudices and mifreprefentations induffrioufly diffeminated and diffufed againf thofe laws. Either perfons difaffected to our government, or willing to aggrandife themelves, deceived and milled the ignorant and uninformed clats of the people. The oppofition commenced in meetings of the people, with threats againtt the officers, which ripened into acts of outrage againft them, and were extended to prisate citizens. Committees were formed to fytamatize and inHlame the fpirit of oppolition. Violence fucceeded to violence, and the collector of Fayctte county was compelled to furrender his commiffion and official books; the dwelling houfe of the infpector (in the vicinity of Pittfburgh) was attacked and burnt; and the marfhal was leized, and obtained his liberty on a promife to ferve no other procefs on the quest side of the Allegbany mountain. To compel fubmiffion to the laws, the government were obliged to march an army againft the infurgents, and the expenfe was above one million one hundred thouland dollars. Of the whole number of infurgents (many hundreds) only a fcio were brought to zrial; and of them only two were fentenced to die (Vigol and Mitchell) and they were pardoned by the late Prefident. Although the infurgents made no refflanceto the army fent againft them; yet not a few of our troops loft their lives, in confequence of their great fatigue, and expofure to the feverity of the feafon.

This great and remarkable clemency of the government had no effect upon you and the deluded people in your neighborhood. The rife, progrels, and termination of the late infurrection, bear a ftrong and friking analogy to the former: and it may be remembered, that it has coft the United States 80,000 dollars. It cannot efcape obfervation, that the ignorant, and uninformed are taught to complain of taxes, which are neceffary for the fupport of government, and yet they permit themfelves to be feduced into infurrections which have fo enormoully increafed the public burthens, of which their comtribution can fcarcely be calculated.

When citizens combine and affemble with intent to prevent by threats, intimidation, and violence, the execution of the laws, and they actually carry fuch traitorous defigns into execution, they reduce the government to the alternative of proftrating the laws before the infurgents, or of taking neceffary meafures to compel fubmiffion. No government can hefitate. The expence, and all the confequences therefore, are not imputable to the government, but to the infurgents. -The milduefs and lenity of our govermment are as ftriking on the late as on the former infurection; Of nearly 130 perfons who might have been put on their trial for triason, only five have been profecuted and tried for that crime.

In the late infurreation, you, John Fries, bore a confpicuous and leading part. If you had reflected, you would lave feen, that your attempt was as weak, as it was aichecl. It was the beight of folly in you to fuppofe that the great body of our citizens, blelt in the enjoyment of a free republicun govermment of their own choice, and of all rights ciril and religious,- frecure in their perfons and property, and confcious that the laws are the only fecurity for their pretesvation from violence, woukl livt rife up as one man to oppole and crufh fo ill-founted, fo mproveled an attempt to dititurb the public peace and tanquility. If you could fee in a proper light your own folly and zickedness, you ought now to biefs God, that your infurrection was fo happily and fpeedily quelled by the vigilance and energy of our government, aided by the patriotifin and asivity of wur fellow-citizens, who feft their homes and bufinefs and embodied themelves in the fupport of its laws.
The annual, neceffary expenditures for the fupport of any extenfive goverument, like ours muft be great; and the fium required, can only be obtained by taxes, or loans.-In all countries the levying taxes is unpopular, and a fubject of complaint. It appears to me, that there was not the lealt pretence of complaint againft, much lefs of oppofition and violence to, the law for levying taxes on divelling-houfes; and it becomes you to reflect that the time you chofe to rife up in arms to oppole the laws of your country, was when it flood in a very critical fituation with regard to France, and on the eve of a rupture with that country.
I cannot omit to remind you of another matter, worthy of your confideration.-If the marfhal or any of the poffee, or any of the four friends of government, who were with him, had been killed by you, or any of your deluded followers, the crime of marder would have been added to the crime of treason.

In your ferious hours of reflestion, you ought to conlider the confequences that would have flowed from the infurrection, which you incited, encouraged, and promoted, in the character of a captain of militia, whofe incumbent duty it is to fand ready (whenever required) to affift and defend the governuent and its laws, if it lad not been immediately quelled. Violence, oppreffion and rapine; deftruction, wafte, and murder, always attend the progrefs of infiurection and rebellion; the arm of the father would have been railed againft the ton; that of the fon againft the father; a brother's hand would have been ftained with brother's blood; the facred bands of friendihip would have been broken, and all the ties of natural affertion would have been diffolved.

The end of all punisbonent: is cxambe; and the chormity of your crime requires that a fevere example flould be made to deter others from the commiffio: of like crimes in future. You have forfeited your life to juttice-let me therefure carneflly recommend to you, moft ferioully to conlider your fituation-to take a revieiv of your palt life, and to employ the very little time you are to continue in this world, in endeavors to make your peace with that God, whofe mercy is equal to his justice. I expect that you are a Chriftan; and as such I addrefs you. Be affured my guility and unhappy fellow-citizen, that without ferious repentance of all your lins, you camot expect happinef; in the world to come; and to your repentance you mult add faith and kope in the merits and mediation of Jefus Chrift. Thefe are the only terms on which pardon and furgivenefs are promifed to thofe, who profefs the Cbristian religion. Let me thercfore again entreat you to apply every moment you have left, in contrition, forrow, and repentance. Your day of life is almoft fipent, and the night of deatb faft approaches. Look up to the Father of Mercies, and God of Comfort. Yoa have a great and an immenfe work to perform, and but little time in which you mult finifl it. There is no repentance in the grave; for after death comes judgment; and as you die, fo you mult be judged. By reitentance and faith, you are the object of Gid's mery; but it you will not repent, and have faith and dependane unon the merits of the death of Chrift, but die a hardened and impenitent finner, you will be the object of God's justice and vengeance. If you will fincerely repent and believe, God hath pronounced his forgivenefs; and there is no crime too great for his mercy and pardon.

Although you muft be frictly confined for the very fhort remainder of your life, yet the mild government and laws which you have endeavored to deftroy, permit you (if you pleafe) to converfe and commune with miniffers of the gofyel ; to whofe pious care and confolation, in fervent prayers and devotion, I moft cordially recommend you.

What remains for me is a very painful, but 2 very neceffary part of my duty. It is to pronounce that judgment, which the law has appointed for crimes of this magnitude. The judgment of the law is, and this Court doth award "that you be hanged, by the neck, until Seced:" And I pray God $\Lambda_{\text {I mighty }}$ to be merciful to your foul!

The following Charge, by fudge Peters, was delivered to the Fury before the Charge of Fudge Iredell, in the first Trial, and ought to precede it in Page 164, but was unavoidably omitted in its proper place.

Gentlfaen of the Jury,

AS this cafe is important, botio in its principles and confequences, 1 think it my duty to give $m y$ opinion, formed with as much deliberation as the intervals of this lengthy trial would permit, on the moft prominent points of law which have been made in this caule. I have condenied my fentiments into as hort a compafi as poblible. I thatl lave remarks on the evidence, and more enlarged oblervations on the law, to the preliding judge, who will deliver to you the charge if the court. At his requelt I tate my individual opinion, though I do not always deem it neceffary, when there is an unanimity of fentiment in the ccurt.
r. It is trason "in levying war arainf the United States" for perfons qubo bave none but a cummon interest auitb their felloat-cuizens, to oppofe or prevent, by force, numbers or intimidation, a fublic and Sineral law of the United States, quitb intent to prevent its uperation, cr compel its repeal. Force is neceffary, to complete the crime; but the quantum of force is immaterial. This point was determined by this court on a furmer occation, which was, though not in all circumfances, yet in principle and object, very analogous to the fubject of our prefent inquiries. I hold myfelf bound by that decifion, which on due confideration, I think leral and found. I do not conceive it to be overfladowed, or rendered null, by any legiflative conftruction contained in any fublequent ack of congrefs. The laf, though eftablilhed by legiflative acts, or fettled by judicial decifions, may be altered by congrefs, by experes words, in laws combthent with the confitution. But a mere leginative conflruction, drawn from any act by intendnent, ought not to repeal pofitive laws, or annul judicial. decifions. The judiciary have the duty affigned to them of interpreting declaring and explaining,-the Legislature that of muking, albering, or repealing laws. But the decilion of a quition on the conftitutionality of a law is vefted in the judiciary department. I confider the decifions in the cales of Vigol and Mitchell, in fitl force, and founded on true principles of law. The authorities fom Britih precedents and adjudications are ufed as guides in our decifions. I will not enter into a difcuffion whether we are bound to follon them; becaufe they are precedents,-or becaufe we think them realfonable and juft.

If numbers and force can render one law ineffermah, which is tantamount to its repeal, the whole fytem of laws may be deitroyed in detail. All laws will at laft yied to the violence of the fediticus and difcontented. Although but one law be immediately aflalel, ! et the treafonable defign is completed, and the generality of intent delisnated, by a part affuming the government of the ralde. And then, $\mathrm{b}_{\mathrm{H}}$ trampling on the legal powes of the conflituted authorities, the rights of all are invaded by the fonce and violence of a few. In this cale, too, there is a direct ontrage on the judiciary act, with intent to defeat, by force ad intimidation, the execation of a revenue law, enacted under clear and expref conflitutional anthority. A deadly hlow is aimed at the goocmment, when its fifcal arrangements are forcibly deftroyed, diffracted and impeded; for on its revenues its very exiftence depends.
2. Though punifhments are delionated, by particular laws, for certain inferior crimes, which, if profecuted as fubftantive offences, and the fole object of the profecution, are exclulively liable to the penalties directed by thofe laws, yet, when committed with treafonable irgredients, thefe crimes become only circumftances or ovent acts. The intent is the gilt of the inquiry in a charge of treafon; and is the great and leading object in trals for this crime.

The deicription of crimes, contained in the art, commonly called the Scdition Act, lofe their chatacter, and become but component pats of the greater crime, or evidences of trealon, when the treafomble intent and overt act are proved. So it is with rescine of pros seners; which, in the prefent cale, was not an independent eftience, but an oiect art of the treason. I hefe wee crimes-midiemeanors -at common law; and might have been punithed by fine and innprifonment when fubfantive independent ofiences. But, when committed with treafonable intent, are merged in the treaton, of which fiden, confpiracy and combination are always the harbingets. I do not think that the acts relating either to sedtion or rescue lave al:ured the principle, though they have defined and bounded the punithmente. The law, as to treaton, is we lame now, as if thate ofences were thill puniflable at common law. The Sidition Act cannet conAttutionally alter the defcription or the crime of treason, to w! ich the combination and conlpirac in perpetrate this offence, with force and ambers, are effentillabute. Numbers muft comene and consjire to levy war. But if the fe indifpenlible qualities of the crime are, by the Legillature, declared only misdemeanors, and feparated from the trealonable act, the Legiflature nullify the defcription of treason contained in the conflitution; and fo indireclly alter and deftroy, or make inefficient, this part of that inftrument. The congrefs neither poffefs, nor did they intend to exercife, any fuch power. They could not (rior did they fo intend) place the crime declared in the conftitution to be trasem, among the inferior clafs of offences, by defcribing fome of its eflematial cualities in the Sedition Act, and prefcribing punifhments, when they foldy confitute fubtantive and independent offences. Congrefs can only (as they have done) preferibe the punifhment for treasm, reaulate the trial, and direct the mode in which that punifiment is to be executed.
3. However indifputably reprilite it may be to prove, by two witnefles, the overt act for which the piliner at the bar flands indicted, yet evidence may be given of other rimemfances, or even of other overt acts, comeited with that on whin the indictment is grounded, and occuring or committed in any ritur part of the diftict, than the place mentioned. Althom the prifone: be not on his tritul, nor is he now punithable, for any other that the overt act laid, other overt acts and other circumftances, parts of the feneral delign, may neverthelefis be proved, to fhe w the (ft: (minn-the intent-with which the act laid was committed. Indeed the treaton would be complete, by the confpiracy, in any part of the difrict, to commit the treafonable act at Bethlehem, if any had, in confequence of the confpiraoj, marched or committed any overt act for the purpofe, though the actual tefcue had not taken plice. So we tinought in the cafes of the weftern infurgents, that the treaton, comeocted at Couche's fort, would have been complete, if any had only marched to commit the crime; thourg the delign had not arrived to the difgraceful cataftrophe it fimally attained. Indifputable authorities might be produced to dupport thes polition.
4. The confefion of the prifoner may be given in evidence as corrobsatory proot of the intent, or gro aimo. But, although proved by :wn winclle: being made out if $c$, it is not of itfelf fufficient to we inter may be posed io one wind, collected from circumfances, or even by a fingle fact.
S. The doctane of onstmation tran has produced much real mifchef in another comery; and it ha ben, for an age, the fubject of dicumens, anong hawer; other public fakene and political writers.
 The fobece of them is monown, and mar it wer reman bi, in this wontry. I mean the compafing the datio of the king. It win be found hat the Bitilh judges, fince the da"s of prolucal darkntis and bigote: bave palled awas, are to be libud anmay the molt able and decided onpofers of the abutes of the dectrine. Hery do not follow decilions and precedents rooted in the time, beraule they find them in their law books, On the contrary, vi a fair ineftigation it will be proved, that thole conta:y to jusioc, ration and law are rejected. It is not fair and found reafoning to argue againft the neceffary and indifpenfable use of conftruction, from the abuses it has produced. What is there among the beft of buman (and I wilh I could not add divine) fyftems which has not been perverted and abufed? That there mult be fome defined fenfe and interpretative expolition made of the terms "levying war," and when, and in what circumftances, it is levied "against the United States," cannot be denied. The able counfel, in this cafe, who has faid the moft on this fubject, and travelled the fartheft into the gloomy, dark and tyrannical periods of the Britilh hiftory and jurilprudence, for melancholy and difgufting proofs of atrocious abufes, and even crimes, committed under color of law, has, unavoidably, himfelf furnifhed alfo proofs of the neceffity we are under of fome confructive or interpretative expefitions. He , at firft, confined thefe expolitions to threc cafes. Now if there is a neceflity of one, it fhews that without fupplementary interpretation, the law would be a mere dead letter. Aware of the dangerous lengths to which the abufes of conftruction have been carried, courts and juries thould be cautious in their decifions; but not to much ahamed about abuses, as to refrain fiom the proper and neceflary ase of interpretation. I do not then hefitate to fay, that the polition we have found eflablifhed, to wit, that oppolition, by force and numbers, or intimidation with intent to defeat, delay or prevent the execution of a general law of the United States, or to procure, or with a hope of procuring, by furce and numbers, or intimidation, its repeal or new execution, is treaton by leving war againft the United States. And it does nut appear to mie to be what is commonly called constructive, but open and direct treafon, in levying war againtt the United States, within the plain and evident meaning and intent of the conftitution.
6. As to the objections, founded on want of proof of regular appointments under, and of the proper execution of the law called the houfe tax law, I do not fee that they apply. If the profecution was definitely for oppofing one or more officer or officers of this tax law, the proof might be more rigidly required, But as all the neceffary whe made of thefe collatera! and fubordinate circumfances, relative to the tax law officers, is for the purpofe of fhowing the quo animo or intent with which the treafon alledged was committed, I confider them as not relevant in this caufe. It is even enough in criminal profecutions, more directly aimed at the fpecific offence of oppoling an oficer, that he was an officer de facto.
7. As to the difarming and confining the two Videlles, or advance, of the armed infurgents, by the marnal at Bethlehem, I think him legally as well as prudentially jullified in his conduct. Even a conftable has a right to reftrain and confme, under itrong circumbances of fupicion, perlons whole conduct or apnearance evidence ai i itention w commit illegal and violent acts. Much more fo was the marfal (having notice of an intended refcue of his pifoners) juftifable in eizans and difarming two of the armed body, again whom exithins cirembthances rifed frong and evident fufpiciol. But I think thathas bena and his parts, when they commenced their treafonable march, for the mreate of the pritioners in the marhal's cuffody, at Bethlehem.

8. The Prefident's proclamation thould have been pleaded as a parcinn, if it was intended to be relied on as fuch. This not having been done, it is not legally before us. But fince it bas been mentioned, 1 think it neceflary to declare it as my opinion, that it does not operate as a pardon to precedent offences. It is directed by law as a flep, prepaatory to applying an armed force, againft thofe fuppoled to have conmited crimes and embodied for unlawful purpofes. It is a humane warning, calculated to prevent the effufion of blood? Its allegations of falts, or its injunctions, have no operation in the trial of the prifoner at the bar.
Whether the prifoner is or is not guilty of the treafon laid in the indiciment, in the manner and form therein fet forth, it is your province to determinc. It is the duty of the court to declare the law; thoush both fates and law, which I fear are too plain to admit a reafirmble doubt, are fubjects for your confideration. We mult all obey cur public duty, whatever may be our private feelings. Mercy is not d.a, hited in our hands. It is entirely within the confitutional authority of another deparment.

The following opinion of Judge Peters on the motion for a new trial was put into our hands after the fheet was printed were it fhould have come in, which is page 45 of the appendix.

ALTHOUGFI I am not perfectly fatisfied with the teffimony, which is contradicted by the juror on his oath; I will allow it to be taken for granted; and meet the queftion on principle. I am in fentiment aganft granting the motion for a new trial. Becaufe-r. The juror fadd no more than all friends w the laws and the government were warranted in thinking and laving, as the facts appeared then to the public. Fries being generaliy alledged to be the motit preminent character, it was on this acceunt, and nut su:tb specia! or furticuiur mulice, that Rhoad's declaration was made.
2. If a juror was rejected ou account of fich declarations, tivial, where the communty at large are intimatcly aftected by crimes of fuch general importance and public noturety, muft be had, in all probability, by thoie who only upenly or fecretly approved of the conduct of criminals. This would oe unjuft and impioper, as it affeets the grovermache in its public profechitis. Aistice fieceris could le eapected fiom procedinys againf the mationciots uriaders, if greas noditudes wee implicated in their deluitur, or s.ant.
;- It is natural for all food citizens whon azincints crimes, of a puitice nature, are hnown to have betl cummitid, to expecto the tafe of murder, or any offence againg an individual; or where fevéral are charged and none remarkably prominent. In this latter cafe felecting one out of the mafs might evince particular malice.

4. I have no doubt that declarations of an oppofite complexion could be proved; and yet the jurors were unanimous in their verdict. The defendant has had a fair, and I think an impartial trial.

But as a divifion in the court, might leffen the weight of the judgment if finally pronounced, and the great end of the law in punifhments being example, I, with fome reluctance, yield to the opinion of judge Iredell. Although juftice may be delayed, yet it will not fail, either as it refpects the United States, or the prifoner.

CONRAD MARKS

Was arraigned on an indictment for treafon *. He pleaded, Not Guilty.

The following Persons quere admitted and sworn on the JURT.

| Richard Downing, | John Jacobs, |
| :--- | :--- |
| Thomas Morris, | Benjamir Morris, |
| Jacob Grim, | Anthony Oherly, |
| Eli Canby, | John Longftreith, |
| Richard Roberts, | Willian Davis, |
| Francis Gardner, | Liwellin Davis. |

The caufe was opened by the attorney of the difrict, (Mr. Rawle) who flated the nature of the offence of which the prifoner ftood indicted, and adduced a number of witnefes on the part of the profecutinn. Several witnefles were alfo produced on the part of the prifoner. Mr. Rofs and Mr. Hopkinfon, who were the counfel affigned by the court for the prifoner, very ably and ingeniounly defended his caufe, at fone length; and were fully anfiwered by Mr . Ingerfol on the part of the profecution. Judge Chafe, in an elegant, learned and feeling clarge, addreffed the jury, informing them of the law, and reciting the facts as they appeared in evidence. The jury retired about twenty minutes paft is o'clock at night. Judge Chafe informed the jury, previous to their retiring; that the court would wait till twelve o'clock, to fee if they could agree on their verdict ; and that they muft return to court and inform whether they could agree or not. At that hour the jury returned and informed the court, that they could not agree. The judges ordered that the jury be kept together in fome conve-

[^2]nicnt place till Monday morning at ten o'clock, to which time the court adjourned.
On Monday morning the jury returned a verdict, NOT GUILTY.
An indiatment was afterwards filed againf the defendant for confriracy, obftruction of procefs, refcue and unlawful combination, on which he fubmitted to the difcretion of the court.

Without any farther examination, the court being fully apprifed of his conduct, Judge Chafe paffed the following fentence:

That be be imprifoned two years, and fined 800 dollars, at the expiration of which, to give fecurity for his good behavior, himfelf in 2000 dollars, and two fureties in 1000 dollars each, and to fland committed till the fentence is complied with.
Before the fentence, Mr. Rofs addreffed a few words to the court in his belalf: he obferved, that though his client had cflended againtt the laws of his conutry, yet he had been deceived into his oppofition: it had been faid, from what he thought uadoubted authority, that no fuch law was in exiftence. As this was the cafe, and as his circumflances were low, he hoped the ccurt would confider his fituation.
Judgr. Chase faid, he was a molt atrocious offender; he had not the leaft doubt but he was guilty of treation in a high degree, and that the verdict sught fo to have been found, and be have been made an example of. There mult have been fone miftake as to evidence, or the jury could not have retuned a verdict of not gulity.

Was arraigned on an indictment for treafon, to which he pleaded, Not Guilty.

The Counfel for the Prifoner were, Mr. Hopkinson and Mr. Ross.

| The following quere sworn on the JURy': |  |
| :--- | :--- |
| Richard Robinfon, | Jacob Grim, |
| Charles Dehler, | David Jones, |
| George Illig, | William Prefton, |
| John Starbord, | Thomas Morris, |
| John Jones, | Peter Eler, |
| John Edge, | Abraham Heed, |

The jury, on Thurday morning, returned with a verdict of NOT GUILTY.

The attorney lodged a detainer on a charge of confpiracy, &c. and on Friday morning the grand jury returned againft him a true Bill.

Indictments for treafon had been found againft Philip Defch and Jacob Klein; but Mr. Attorney entered a nolle poseque thereupon, and profecuted for confpiracy, refcue, &c. upon which the grand jury returned true Bills.

They fubmitted to the court; and after examining a few witneffes, and afcertaining their circumftances as near as poffible, the court fentenced each of them to be imprifoned eight months, to be fined 150 dollars, and to enter into recognizance for their good behavior for one year, themfelve; in 400 dollars each, with two fuflicient fureties.

BRIEF REPORT

OF THE

TRIALS

Of Henry Sbiffert, Cbristian Ruth, Henry Stabler, Dan niel, Scbwartz, sen. Daniel Schwartz, jun. and George Sbacffer, on an indictment for an unlawful conspiracy in the counties of Nortbampton and Bucks, to impede the operation of the act laying a tax on bouses and land by opposing the assessors in the execution of their duty; for obstructing William Nicbols esq. the marshal in the execution of process, and for assisting in the rescue of several persons beld in custody by the said marsbal.

Fridat May io, io o'clock A. M.

THE jury being impannelled, Mr. M'Kean appeared as counfel for the prifoners generally, and Mr. Dallas more particularly for George Shaeffer.

COLONEL NICHOLS

The marfhal was the firf evidence called. He related the circumftances which occurred at Millar's town as it refpected the refcue of Shankweiler, (fee page 37.) and the abfence of Shaeffer, who hearing that a bill of indictment was found againft, him came to the city to deliver himfelf up.

SAMUEL TOON

Was next called. His depofition related to the conduct of the two Schwartz's and Stahler, diftering very little from his former relation lee (page 53 and 55 ) He was adviled by old Schwartz to go to Bethlehem and tahe histrumpet, but was unwilling, bowever, at length he complied.

[ 213 ]

ANDREW SHIFFERT

Related the fame facts in fubflance as before, (page $5^{6 .}$.) He fays Chiftian Ruth going to Bethlehem, and while he was prefent heaid fome perfon fay they would take the prifoners from the marlhal.

WILLIAM BARNETT

And Chrifian Roth's teflimony related to the conduct of the elder Schwartz at Bethlehem page 3 o.

WILLIAM HENRY, ESC.

Was next fivorn. He related the affiars generally as before refpecting the conduct of Staliler page 26. and Siiffert pace 82. allio of old Schwartz, who appeared to pide limielf in having t.oo fine boys at Bethlehem.

JOHN FOGLE

A licutenant in Jarrett's troop related fome of the circumflances previous to the march to Bethlehem--his evidence had nothing ftriking in it, as he did not go himidf, except that Shiffert at Mihars town advifed hin to go to Betlidehem; and that if they would not take bail for Shankweiler, they would not let them go to Philadelphis.

JOHN MORETLZ

Depofed that he faw Stahler with others who faid that they would go to Bethlelem to fee what they were going to do with the pififon-eris-they did not fay they would releafe the prifoners-he did not know them any way active in breeding difcontents. At a meeting to read the law, (page 49) one, he believed Geurge Shaeffer faid it was no law, and if it was, they woold not fubmit to it. He talked very loud, and appeared much diffatisfied.

JACOB EYERLi

Went through his former evilence of the meeting at Schynar's page 49. and related the general ftate of difioutents through that part, and the proftrate fate of the laws: many he faid objected to fuffer the execution of the houle law, becaule it was not figned by Mr. Jefferfon as Vice Prefident (he being abfent at its paifung)-Old Schwartz told the witnefs that two of his fons were there at Bethlehe:!, and that he had perfiuaded Toon to go, promifing him a dollar, and lendirg him an horfe, adsiing him to take his trumpet thai they mishlt make a grood appearace: that Daniel Schwartz, jun. ine off Mr. Balliutt's cockade at Miller's tww, and that they were Lo:h iery abuive.

CHRISTIAN HICKAVELTER

Depofed, That he was an affeffor in Upper Milford ; he related the great dificulties attending the execution of his duty. Did not know any thing more of the detendants than what was related by Mr. Eyerly of Genrge Shaeffer, parce 49 . He fivke of the elder Schwartz as a very quiet good neighbor,

> JUDGE PETCRS

The:; was fworn, to prote ail examination of Schwartz, fen. taken befoe him, which acknowledgeri ilat lee had perfuaded Toon to go to Bethlelem, and that he was there himefef, but that he did nothing, nor faid any thing about the refine; bat that he went merely out of curiofity.

JaCOB SERNHER

Depofed, That he wat told by George Shaeffer to tell Judge Henry to inform the affeliors not to cone into Millar's town to affefs the houlte:; for that there was a man in town who was provided with a fiword and piltols, and that he would not fuffer the houles to be affeffed. He did not neintion to the witnefs who the man was.

DANIEL REISCH

Depofed, That George Shaeffer had told him that he would not fuffer his houle to be meafurcel, and he was a danned ftampler if he fuffered them to meafure lis: That if the affefior came into their town, he flould not come out ayain with his life: that they had bound them:ielves together to oppafe the excrution of the law; and if he, the defendant, was to be put to prifon, there would be fifty men unite to take him out.
JOHN SCHYMER, ESC.

Related the circumfance of the meeting at his houfe, as depofed by Mir. Eyerly, and that Sinetier was very violent*.

The evidence being gone through, Mr. M'Kean rofe in the defence, in the courle of which lee went through a variety of authorities to frove, that no confipiracy was formed, becaute no compact whatever was entered into by the parties to lupport each other, each individual acting and fpeaking, fo far as they went, feparately. Here he read, I Hank, $3+6$. chap. 72 , and the Sedition Act. fect. I. As to the relcue he faid, it did not anepear that the defendant were engaged, for a refcue could not be accomplifhed without force, but no force whatever had been proved upon them, 4 Blackftone, 131, and 345; 2 Hawk. c. 2r. fect. 1-3; Pierre Williams, 484 ; 6 Comments, 230 , and 2 Hawk, c. 19 , fect. 5 , were the authorities he read. As to the oppofition to the law, it appeared that they had doubts, which, in their uncultivated flate, and extreme want of knowledge, were well grounded, that the law was in exiftence. He then concluded with a review of the part which the defendants were feverally faid to have taken in the tranfaction.
*The coidence aphica th tre cicfondants individually, is given more

JUDGE PETERS

Read the legal definition of force in 2 Hawkins, pase 37.
Mr. Dallas went into a lengthy defence of Gzorge Shaeffer, after which Mr. Rawle, attorney for the diftrict, went into a definition of the different counts in the indictment of confiriacy, wilawful comm bination, refcue, and obftruction of procefs, applying the evidence fo as to bring the charges home on the feveral defeldants: that they all had heen guily of confipiracy he thought incontrovertible; becaufe when a confpiacy was formed, all who were ever prefent, as well as thofe more actively engaged in it were guilty, though fome might be fuperiors and fome fubordinate. All the defendants were affembled, and therefore partook of the crime. Five of them were feen at Bethlehem: Andrew Shiffert faw Ruth going to Bethlehem, and Toon faw him at Bethlehem in company with the difturbers of the public peace. Old Schwartz was at Bethlehem, and was eagaged ta countelling and advifing an unlawful affembling there, which was calculated to defeat the act. Young Schwartz was at Rethlehem, and alfo was engaged in the infult upon Mr. Balliott to tear off his cockade. George Shaeffer was at Bethlehem; but, though not in arms, though not guilty of the refcue, was frequently engaged in oppofition to the law, in confpiracy againft it, and in obftruction of procefs, on which account he may be ranked among the mont guilty. On the whole, he confidered. that each of them partook of the crimes charged in the indiatment.
Judge Iredel., in his charge to the jury, obferved, that there were three counts in the indictment: Firfl. Confipiacy to prevent the execution of the law: to raife a confiriacy, feveral muit be engaged, but it muft be ubferved that esery one engaged, or joined therewith, was guilty of the conlipiracy. It was not neceflary, under this; indictment, as under that latcly before the court for treafon, that two witneffes fhould fubfantiate any one fact, one would do; nor was it necellary that any writing or agreement flould be drawn betucea the parties to create it a conlipiracy: a meating was held, the object of which was but too well authenticated by previcus corduct.
The fecond count concerned the refcue of the prifoncrs. It had been flated that actual force mult be ufed to make it a refuc: the learned judge faid, that if the object was obtained by intimidation, and the prifoners were furrendered, it did nat diffe: fiom fouc i: : has teaf, in a legal view: for it an highway-man was to put a pittol to the breaft of another, and demand his money, as had been flated by Judre Peters, in the cafe, 2 Hawk 37, and the money was delivered; it was a robbery, though the piftol had not been fired. The queftion was, were not the threatenings held out to the narhal the immediate cau'e of his lurrendering the prifoners, in order to prevent lives being loft? With regard to the arreft, no doubt could be entertained that the Lehi prifoners, as well as Ireman and. Fox, were compleatly in the marfhal's culfody. There are only two kinds of efcape, one is voluntary, and the other is negligent: the former is where the officer is agrecable to the efcape, the latter, as in the cafe before the jury, is, the officer not having power to keep them, fuffers them to go at large.

The third count refpects obftruction of procefs. The judge faid he did not think it right to convict either of the defendants of the whole three counts, becaufe the refclie neceffarily implied obfructions of procefs, no man could be guilty of a refcue without oblfruction of procefs, and therefore the comins refolved themfelves into two; if it was the opinion of the jury that either of them were guilty of the whole, the verdict need only be given on the two firft, to wit: confipiracy and obflruction of procels. As to the conlpiracy, it camot be polfibly doubsed but there was one.

The judge then took up the individual conduct of the feveral defendanss, after the following order:-First.

DANIEL SCHWARTZ, SEN,

By the evidence of the marthal and of William Barnet, he was feen at Bethlehem, but he behaved civily, and was come there to know what they were duing. Chriftian Ruth faw him there. Judge Henry depofes, that he appeared to pride timmelf in his two fine boys who were there. Mr. Eyerly did not know that he was active there, but he appeared quite jovial : he faid he had two fons there; that he requeflied Toon to go there, and advifed him to take his trumpet to look well. It was given in evidence, when told of his fon pulling Mr. Balliott's cockade from lis hat, that if he had feen his fon do it, he would have whipped him, and he appeared to be fory fo much infult was given to the ma. thal at Millar's town. Mr. Schymer fays he was at the meeting at his houfe, but cannot lay he mifbehaved.

DANIEL SCHWARTZ, Jex.

The ma:fhal thinks he faw him at Millar's town, where he leemed to be a pretty active and buly young man. Toon law him at Bethlehem, but without unitorn, and cansot fay he mibelaved, or interfered. Mr. Eye:ly faw him at Millar's town belaving very abufive, and threatening to beat them, and he hinks it was lime who tore the cockade from Mr. Ballictis, hat.

HENRY SHIFFERT,

The marfhal, faw at Bethlehem, and he beiieves he was armed. Toon faw him there, and with a fivord, which he drew. Fogle faw him at Millar's town, when he taid, ihat if they would not take bail for Shankweiler, they would not let him go to Yhiladelphia.

HENRY STAHLER,

The marfhal alfo thinks he faw at Bethlehem. Andrew Shiffert faw him, both theie and on the rad, in uniform. Moretz faw him on the road, and he faid he was going to fee what was become of thofe prifmers. He nas in uniform, with a fword. Toon fays that Stahler faid he would not interfere in the relcue.

CHRISTIAN RUTH

Was feen at Bethlehem by Toon, in uniform, with a fword. Andrew Shiffert faw him there and on the road. Some perfons in his prefence laid, that they would take the prifoners from the marhal.

GEORGE SHAEFFER

Was feen at Bethlehem by Shiffert, but without arms or uniform. William Barnet faw him there; he faid he was come there only to fee fome of his neighbors going to Philadelphia; he faid if the marfhal wanted to take him, he would give himfelf up: he did not appear to be one of the rioters. Judge Henry faw him at Bethlehem; he did not appear to be vinlent, or ufe any offenfive language; he faw him much out of doors with the company, but not active. John Moretz faw him at the meeting at Schymer's, where he talked very loud, as though he wifhed to prevent Mr. Eyerly reading the law; and on fome of them doubting whether it was a law or not, he faid, even if it was, they would not fubuit to it. Mr. Eyerly and Mr. Schymer depofed the fame, and that, he added "here I am, take we to gaol, but you fhall fee how far you will briug me;" on which a number adds, "Yes, let them but take one to gaol, we will foon have him out again." Mr. Heckawelter fays, that lie told hin he had abufed lis father fomething about a liberty pole, and that he was come to give him a licking for it, for which he followed him. Mr. Sterner fays, he told bim to tell Judge Henry abrut the man with fivord and pittol, who would oppofe the affeffurs. Mr. Keifch depoied, that the defendant faid he was a damned ftampler, if he futfered his houle to be meafured; he would not : that if the affeflor came into his townflip, he would not come out again alive; and if they were to take hum to prifon, there would be fifty men to take him out again. Mr. Schymer faid, that the defendant was very much againft chooling affeffors, and was pretty vident; that be abufed Mr. Heckaweler about the liberty pole.

[ 218 ]

The judge faid, he flould forbear feeaking particularly as to the nature of the combination or confpiracy; but, if it was not predetermined, after meeting together there, the very act of meeting became a conlpiracy; if the defendants came there after it began, not having a previous knowledge of it, it was their duty to have withdrawn themfelves; but if they did engage themfelves voluntarily and knowingly, though they knew nothing of it before, it was deemed in law equally as much a combination as though they had predetermined it.

The jury withdrew, and next morning returned with the following verdict:
Christian Rutr, Henry Stahler, and Henry Shiffert, gullyty as to the refcue.
Daniel Schwartz, fel. gullty of the confpiacy, in advifing an unlawful combination.

George Shafffer, geilty of the confiracy, in advifing, and Euility as to the refcue.

Daniel Schwartz, jun. not guilty.

The prisoners being severally called to the bar, Yudge Iredell addressed them to the following effect:

"George Sbaeffer, Henry Stabler, Henry Shiffert, Cbristian Ruth, and Daniel Sclowartz,

"THOUGH the crimes of which you have been convicted, in fome

" 1refpects, are different in their nature, yet they all have reference to one common object, that of defeating, by force of arms, the execution of an act of the Congrefs of the United States,--You and your confederates fucceeded io far, as totally to prevent, in one mode or other, the execution of that act, in a very important part of this flate. The act thus daringly oppofed, which was for the collection of a tax on lands and houlies, was framed with particular anxiety for the relief of the poorer part of the community, and the burthen of it mult fall principally on the rich. The ignorance of it which was affected, was without the leaf color of excule, becaufe information was offered; which was repeatedly rejected, and in fome inftances with tumult and difdain. Neither could you fairly alledge any ground for difcontent, on account either of the character or conduct of tie officers concerned, becaufe the former appears to bave been perfectly unexceptionable, and the latter in general meritorious in the higheft degree, as they united with that frimnefs which their duty required, every endeavor confiftent with it, to give all the information in their power, and to execute the law in the manner mofl convenient for the people. By your ill conduct, however, and that of your affociates, a conliderable part of the three counties wasintlamed into a flate of infurrection; the Law in queftion lof aillits efficacy: officers were infutted-and at length that daring and infanous outrage was perpetrated at Bethlehen where a body of the militia iffelf marched in military array, and by force refcued a number of prifoners from the cuftody of the marthal, whofe conduct on that occation for courage, difcretion, and propriety in every refpect, is above all praife. In confequence of fuch defiances of the conftitution and laws of your country, and the numbers and frength by which they were fupported, it became the indifpenfible duty of the government to exert the powers with which it was inveffed to fupprefs this combination, and bring the principal perpetrators of it to a trial for the offences they had committed. The civil magiftrates laving loft all their authority, (notwithftanding fome of them exerted themfelves in an extraordinary mamer, which deferves the lafting ef: teem and gratitude of their country) a melancholy neceffity arofe for employing a military force, which chiefly confifted in volunteer corps, who had nobly embodied themfelves to defend the confitution, and laws of the United States, whenever any occafion fhould arife, though undoubtedly hoping that their fervices would be required, rather againft the foreign enemies of their country, than any within the bofom of it. The fervices of thefe gentlemen have been attended with great benefit to their country, and great honor to themfelves; but there is too much reafon to fear they muft have fuftained much perfonal inconvenience, for which, as well as for other private injuries, and a great additional expence and inconvenience to the public, the authors of thofe outrages are alone accountable. You have each of you undergone a fair and impartial trial, and have been convicted of one or more offences charged againft you, for which it is now the duty of the court to pronounce the fentence of the law upon you. The difcretion which the law has confided to us, we have endeavored to execute to the beft of our judgment, confidering on the one hand the neceffity of making proper examples to deter others from the commiffion of the like offences, which it feems to have been fuppofed would always pafs with impunity, and on the other hand paying a due regard to the various circumftances which appear to bave difriminated the conduct' of each of you."

> The fentences were as follow :

That George Schaeffer, convicted upon two counts of the indienment, viz. confipiracy and obftruction of procefs, pay a fine of 400 dollars, and be imprifoned for eight months, for the frit offence; for the fecond that he pay a fine of 200 dollars, and be imprifoned four months, after the expiration of the firf term: and at the conclufion of the twelve months imprifonment, that he give fecurity for his good behavior for two years, from the expiration of the period of his imprifonment, himfelf in the fum of 1000 dollars, and two fureties in the fum of 500 dollars each.

That Daniel Schwartz, fenior, convicted of confpiracy, pay a fine' of 400 dollars, be imprifoned for eight months, and give fecurity at the clofe of that period for his good behavior for one year, himfetf in iovo dollars, and two fureties in 500 dollars each.

That Chrifian Ruth, convicted of aiding in the refcue, pay a fine of 200 dollars, be imprifoned for eight months, and give fecurity for his good behavior for a year, himielf in 1000 dollars, and two fureties in 500 dollars each.
That Henry Stahler, convicted of aiding in the refcue, pay a fine of 200 dollars, be imprifoned for eight nuonths, and give a like fecrrity with Schwartz and Ruth for his good behavior.
That Henry Schiffert, convicted allo of aiding in the refcue, pay a fine of 50 dollars, be imprifoned eight months, and give fecurity for good behavior for twelve months, himfelf in 500 dollars, and two fureties in 250 dollars each.
The prifoners each to pay the cofts attending the profecution before they are difcharged from prifon, and ftand committed until the fenter ces be complied with.

The court, taking into confideration the circumfances of the parties, proportioned the penalties accordingly.

An abfract of the trial of Jacob Exerman, on an indictment for breaking prifon, confpiracy to oppofe the law for laying a direct, tax, and a tax on houfes, and for counfelling and advifing an unlawful combination and confpiracy-
Before the honorable Bushrod Washington and Richard Peters, efquires, in the circuit court of the Uuited States, held at Norriftown, in the county of Montgomery, and flate of Pemnlylvania.

The prifoner being arraigned, pleaded $N$,t Guilty.
After the jury were fivorn, Mr. Ravelc, athoriey for the diftrict, opened the profecution by flating to the jury the fun of the indiciment to be divided into three feparate and diflinct charges, proceeding from the fame tranlaction, and partaking of the fame guilt:

Firft, he faid be flould prove lhat there was or warrant iffued by the judge of the diffrict to take the perion of the prifoner into the cuftudy of the marihal, which was effected, but that he did break prifon and go at large, until by another warrant he was afterwards taken in the flate of New-York.
Secondly, He flould prove that the prifoner was engaged in a confpiracy, to oppofe the operation of two laws of the United States, by intimidating the affelfors while in the diccharge of their official duty.
Thirdly, That the prifoner did counfel and advife an unlawful combination and confpiracy to prevent thofe laws being carried into effect.
It was only three years and a half fince be came into this country, -and though he had aflumed the refpectable character of a minifter of the gofpel ; though in that capacity he was bound to preach up faifion to the laws of the conntry, yet, in that fhort time, he had reconmended, both by his advice and example, ann oppofition to thofe laws by which the whole community were bound.
Mr. Rawle then related fome circumftances that ocourred at Beth'ehem, to which place the defendant was brought prifoner, and in the cuftudy of the marthal, but availing himfelf of the opportunity there given to the prifoners to elcape, inftead of again delivering himfelf ip, he immediately fled, left the country, and fequeftrated himfelf in a remote part of the fate of New-York, where he was difcovered, and again taken into cuftody. This, he faid, was punifhable at common law, independent of the fedition law lately paffed, which only went to explain the common law, and in many cales to ameliorate its rigor.

Col. NICHOLS the Marfhal,

Depofed, that he received a warrant, by virtue of which the prifoner was arreited, and brought into lis cuffody at Bethlehem, and that he was refcued, together with the other prifoners, by an armed force on the 7 th of March laft. The witnefs then related the trandactions attending his journey to, and at Millar's town, and at Bethlehem previous to the refcue. * Afier the prifoners were reficued, John Fries expreffed a great folicitude for the fafety of Eyerman by returning, not having feen him among the others, and afking me where was the minister? I told him that he was out of the houfe; he faid he was not, however he went out again, and there feeing him, appeared perfectly fatisfied. After this man was liberated, captain Jarret faid he could now march off his men. Upon the whole it feemed that Eyerman's deliverance was a particular object with thofe people. He promifed when in the room that if he was refcued he would meet me the day following at Phladelphia to deliver himfelf up, but he did not, and I never knew what become of him till he was brought back by the deputy marfhal of New-York.

JACOB EYERLY,

Commiffioner for the diffrict, related the appointment of the affeffors in the different townhlips, and depofed, That the prifoner, at a meeting held in Hanilton townfhip, told the people that Congrefs had no right to pafs fuch a law, and if the affeflors were to come to his houfe he wonld tell them fo, and not let them proceed to take his rates.
Mr. Eyerly and Judge Henry both, informed the court of the general diftracted flate of that part of the country, notwithflanding their endeavors to quiet the minds of the people by explanation and advice fo that the magiffracy could not execute their duty with fafety; nor could the evidences called againft thofe who had oppofed the affeflors, he prevailed upon, without great difficulty, to give their tellimony, through a dread of the rage of the people.
*See the first trial of Fries.

JOHN SERFASS, ESQ.

Depofed, That he refided in Chefnut hill townllip, Northampton county: that he was appointed an affeffor under the law for laying a direct tax: fo foon as the people heard that he was appointed, they were much uproared againft it. The people were to affemble to confider the law, and I refolved to go to tell the people they were doing wrong: accordingly I went, and there were 40 or 50 people affembled; but they were not in a military drefs. This was fometime in December. After I was there a lhort time, Jacob Eyerman, the prifuner, came in, he began to rip out in a violent manner againft this taxation, faying, that Congrefs had made laws which were unjuft, and the people need not take up with them, if they did all kinds of laws would follow, but if they would not put up with this, they need not with thofe that would come after, becaute it was a free country ; but in cale the people admitted of thofe laws, they certainly would be put under great Burdens. He faid he knew perfectly well what laws were made, and that the Prefident nor Cungrefs had no right to make them. The people in general thougit that the minister was right, but I told them that he was leading them wrong. I afkel then whether they had heard or feen the laws? They faid no. I then told then the words, as near as I could recollect, but I found very little heed taken of it. Mr. Eyerman faid, that the people flould not let the affeffors take down their taxation, and that they might abule them ever fo much, there was no law could hurt them for doing it.

I thertly afterwards gave notice to the people to meet at the fame houte, in order to explain the law to them. Accordingly they met, pud I explained the law to them, and when I left them, they appeared very peaceable.

The lecond day of Chriftmas this man preached at a pivate houfe; as foon as fermon was done, he went to the houfe of Coarad Crazy, but he no fooner came in, than he began to run out againft the taxation sey much. There were about fifteen or fixteen people prefent. He repeated then that he knew the laws very well, and that Congrefis and the rovernment oniy made fuch laws to rob the people, and that they Fere nothing but a parcel of damned rogues, and spitz bube, * but that they (the people) had no right to fubmit to it. I told him that I had wuld hum before to quit doing that, that it was not his duty; that his duty was to preach his fermon, and to quiet the people, or decide between them: if he went on that way 1 hould bring him to fuch dagare as he would not like. With tlat he did quit.

Attornfy. Did he, at that, or any other time, advife you not to be an affeffor?

Witsess. Yes. He told me often that it was better for me not to tike up with that commillion, perhaps it might injure me, for I might met with fome evil.

Were the pe.ple of your townhip much oppofed to the law?
Yes, they were fo violeat that I knew but one man that was the fame lide as myfelf.

> * Higk, wijmen or thicres.

Did you think that fuch proceedings would have taken place, or, if they had, that it would have arifen to fuch an height, if it had not been for the parfon.

I am fully convinced it would not. 1 knew of no other perfon there who went about to advife the people to oppofition. Hee faid he had a book of the laws, and either that there was no fuch law in it, or ellie that the conflitution forbade fuch laws.

- Court. Did Eyerman appear to be a fimple fort of a man, eafily to be led aftray, or deluded?

Witness. No, he was not thought fo, he was aiways thought a very good preacher.

Prisoner to the Witness. Did I not tell you at Crazy's houle that I did not think any the worfe of you for being an alfiefor, becaufe you were fiworn to fupport the government, and had a right to fpeak for it?

Witxess. At that houfe, when I fooke againf his conduct, he faid "aye, Mr. Serfas is right, he is fiworn to lupport the government."

Prisoner. Did I not pray for the government, Prefident and Vice-Prefident?

Witness. Yes, you did when in the pulpit, but when you were out you prayed the other way.

JOHN SNEIDER,

Depofed that he lived in Hamilton townnip, and knew the prifoner, who told the deponent that a body Chould lay out againft that houfe tax. As much as he uiderflood, the prifoner meant, to take arms againft it.-He faid that if we let that go forward, it would go on as in the old country, but that he (the prifioner) would rather lay his black coat on a mail, and fight the whole week, and preach for them Sundays, than it fhould be fu.

Attorney. How loug las this man been at Hamilton?
Witness. About eighteen months.
The townhlip was always peaceable I fuppofe before he came amongit you?
Yes, and I believe if he had not come, nothing would have happened of the kind.

SIMON HALLER,

Depofed that he refided in Hamilton townhip, and knew the prifoner, who was very well liked as a preacher until lately. That the prifoner appeared to be in oppofition to the hnufe tax law, but who was the leader of it he knew not. That the piioner came to the deponent's houfe, where converiation began about the houit tax, whereupon he faid he did not care whether they put up with it or not, for he had no houfe to tax. A perfon prefent anfwered but you bave a great quantity of books to tax. The prifoner anfiwered that "if any bdy would offer to tax his books he would take a Erench, a Latin, in Hebrev, and a Greek book down to them, and if they could not read them, he would flap them about their ears till they would fall to pieces." The deponent faw the prifoner at Hartman's when he talked much againf the tax, but could not recollect what. The occalion of the people coming together then, was, that there was preachii:g that day. The prifoner continued preacher to that congregation till he was taken up.

Judge perers,

Depofed that he iffued a warrant to apprehend the prifoner, but be never faw him until brought from New-York. He allo reprefented the general flate of the country to be fuch that, knowing the county magiffrates could not execute their duty, he was obliged to iffue his warrants as judge of the diffrict.

The evidence here clofed, but the prifoner, his pecuniary circumflances not enabling him to employ any counfel, refufed to make any defence, but juft obferved that if he had been guilty of any thing, it was contrary to his knowledge, and he hoped, if the jury fhould find hing guilty, that they, and the court would take his cafe into confideration, and punifh him as flight as pomble, and he would endeavor in the future courfe of his life to do better.
Mr. Rawle in a thort addrefs to the jury quoted 2 Hawkins page 243. to fhow that the prifoner was in lawful cuifody, and page 245 . what was the force which in law made breach of prifion. page 249 ?ated that whoever broke from lawful confinement was guilty of mifprifon, which was punifhable by fine and imprifonment.

The act commonly called the fedition act, he faid, fooke of the fecond and third counts in the indictment. (Contpiracy, and counfelling a confipiacy.) Relpecting the crime of confiracy he quoted 2 Hawkins page nig. which refers to Blackftrme page 392.
He jutt referred the jury to the efflimony, to prove what part the the prifioner had takea in either, or all the crimes alledged.

Junge Washington delivered a charge to the following effect: Gentlemen of the Jury,
IT cannot be neceflary that the court flould detain you long in the charge on the prefent occalion. The crimes with which the prifoner before you is charged are, firft, a combination with others, for the purpofe of oppcfing the government: fecondly, advifing and exciting others to this oppolition; and thirdly, in refcuing himfelf from the hauds of the marthal, in whofe lawful cuftody he was.

Oppolition to government feldom breaks out into ove rt acts, unlefs fome previous combinations have been made by perfins who think themelves ftrong enough to do it with effect; and this feldom happens, until fome perfon or perfons, more knowing, and more wicked than the general mats of Eociety, endeavors to advife and millead the ignorant and unwary, or lef's defiguing. Thus to form a powerfuI combination, there muft be a regular clain for that precife purpofe.

[ 230 ]

The offence or offences with which the prifoner is charged is infe: fior to overt acts, and the punifliment is lelis. The only queftion for you to determine is whether, upon evidence, the prifoner has been guilty of all or either, of the offences laid to his charge. It would be tedious and, I think, unneceffiary for me to go through the teftimony, becaufe it muft be frefl in your minds. Refpecting a combination to oppofe an act of Congrefs, the general circumftances for your inquiry are fuch as will fatisfy you of the exifance of fuch a combination. This, I think, is proved by the frequent meetings of the people in the different townhips of the counties of Northampton, Bucks, and Montgomery, the declarations of the people when convened, and the threats fo frequently thrown out by them againf the governnent, and the officers of governmest. Attempts were frequently made, not only by the prifoner, but by others to difunite the people, and to deter the public officers from executing the duty repcied in them, and which they were fworn to perform, by pointing out to them the dangers to which they wert expofed, fhould they carry thofe laws into execution. Unlefs you difcredit the teftimony which has been laid before you, and that there is no caufe for doing, it appears to the court that the proot is as clear againf him as any thing can poffibly be.

That he was the prime caufe and advifer of this oppofition appears to be proved by many witneffes, the refpectability of whom has not been pretended to be doubted.
Refpecting the refcue, the atcorney of the diftrict has precifely laid down the law to you. It does not follow, becaufe a man efcapes from prifon, or from the cuftody of an officer, (which is the fame in law) that therefore he is an offender within the law for which he was committed : nor does it follow that he did not break prifon, becaufe the act of force was exec uted by others who were in combination with him, and he in confequence thereof made his efcape. He confented, and fhowed that conlent, by his efcape, for whether the force was ufed by himfelf or others, is inmaterial.
From all the teftimony, it appears that the prifoner, in his previous conduct, took pains to flir up the difcontents, and that the armed force came to Rethlehem to refcue him, by their earneftnefs to fet this man, particularly, at liberty. Farther, his fubfequent conduct proves his offence, for if he had not been liberated by his own conlent, he would have done as the others did, who left the cuftody of the marfhal at the fame time: he would have given himfelf up afterwards; but on the contrary, he fled from his country, and fecreted himfelf, until taken by a new warrant in another diffrict.
Gentlemen, it is your bufinels to bring thefe facts into one view, and decide whether the prifoner is guilty of one, two, or all of the rounts in the indictment: as you think, fo you are bound to find.

In about is minutes the jury returned with a verdid "Gurctr of all "the three counts.".

Sererati other peifons (upwards of twenty) were arraigned for mifde: ineanors, and fubmitted to the court, relpecting whofe conduct fome evidences were heard.
No fentences were pafled at this feffion, becaufe, on account of fome irregularitics in the form of convening the court, it was obliged to adjourn, and the whole of its proceedings were rendered invalid.

Eyerman, at the next term fubmitted himfelf to the court, when he was fentenced to be imprifoned one year, to pay a fine of fifty dollars, and then to give fecurity for his good behavior one year, himfelf in 1000 dollars, and two fureties in 500 dollars each.

Fridny, May 2.

The following perfons, who fubmitted themfelves to the difcretion of the court, and refpecting whofe crimes and circumfances fome examination took place, received the fentences feverally annexed to their names, for confiiracy, refcue and unlawful aflembly.

Henry Jarret 1000 dollars, 2 years imprifonment. Conrad Marks 800 dollars, 2 years imprifonment. Valentine Kuder 200 dollars, 2 years imprifonment. Jacob Eyerman 50 dollars, 1 year imprifonment. Henry Shankweiler 150 dollars, i year imprifonment. Michael Smyer 400 dollars, 9 months imprifonment. Henry Smith 200 dolls. 8 months imprifonment. Philip Defch 150 dollars, 8 months imprifoument. Jacob Kline 150 dollars, 8 months inprifonment. Harman Hartman 150 dollars, 6 months and 1 day imprifonment. Philip Ruth 200 dollars, 6 months imprifonment. John Everbart roo dolls. 6 months imprifonment. John Huber 150 dollars, 6 months imprifonment. Chirif. Sox 200 dollars, 6 months imprifonment. John K.lein, jun. 100 dollars, 6 months imprifonment. Daniel Klein, Jacob K.lein, Adam Briech, G. Memberger, 1 go dollars each, 6 months imprifonment. George Gettman, Willian Gettman, 100 dollars each, 6 months imprifonment. Abraham Shantz, H. Memberger, Petef Hager, 100 dollars each, 4 months imprifonment. Abraham Samfel, P. Huutfberger, 50 dollars each, 3 months imprifonment. Peter Gable, Daniel Gable, Jacob Gable, 40 dollars each, 2 months imprifonment.

Each of the above perfons were required to enter into recognizance for their good behavior.

1 ]  APPENDIX.  No. I.  TRIAL OF JOHN FRIES FOR TREASON.

Motion of Mr. Lesvis for removints the Triall.

Aprili ${ }^{3}$ o.

Mr. Lewis jreferred the foumaing motion to the Count in writing:
AND now the prifoncr, Join Fries, being placed at the bar of this Court, at the city of Philadelphia, being the place appointed by law for holding the fitated feffions thereof, and it being demanded of him if he is ready for his Trial for the Treafon in the Indiatment mentioned, he moves, ore timus, that his trial for the fame offence may not be proceeded on here, and that the fame may be had in the county in which the fame acts of trealen in the faid indictment mentioned are laid, and where the offence therein mentioned is alleged to have been committed.

He fated this motion to be founded on an att of Congrefs entitied the judiciary act, pafied 24 th September, 1789 . Sect. 29, "That in cafes puniflaable with death, the trial fhall be bad in the county where the offence was c -mmitted, or where that cannot be done without great incouvenience, twelve petit jurors at leaft flall be fummoard from thence." He flated the advantages refuting from this fection to the acculed to be, that a man might be tried by his peers, where he is known, and where there can be no difficulties to procure witneffes in his behalf. This ineftimable right, he faid, was one of the grounds of complaint to the United States, which promoted their feparation from the mother country, and this was one caufe of her taking up arms. This advantage, Congrefs had held in juft eftimation, and upon this, no innovation was to be admitted, un which account the mof pointed and pofitive terms were vfed, and the divifions of vicinage reduced to counties. But neverthelefs, he obferved, this rule had an exception, which was where " manifeft inconvenience" occurred, twelve jurymen were to befummoned from that county, and therefore before the court could confider themfelves authorized to proceed to the trial in that place, their honors mult be well fatisfied that trial could not take place in the county of Northampton without "manifeft inconvenience." Thefe words did not refer to the inconvenience the judges might feel in triz velling, or the time fpent, but an inconvenience arifing from fome caute which Congrefs did not forefee at the thine of the paffigg of the act. The trubible and inconvenience to the judges could be no greater than to the prifoners, whem the government had brought to this city.

Mr. Jewis faid he was aware of an objection which would be raifed to the force of the fection above quoted, founded on a fublequent lan pafled Marcin 2d, 17) 3. lect. 3. which directs that a judge of the fupreme court, with a diftriat judge, "may direat feecial feftions of the circuit couts to be holden for the trial of cimmal caufes, at any convenient place within the diftrict, learer to the place where offences may be lad to be committed, than the place or places appointed by by law for the ordinary ferif.ns." 'Hiee places appointed by law for the itate of Pemfylvania are, lok town and lhimdelpha. This he prefumed muft refer to caufes of a civil matare, or to criminal acts of a lefs grade than what is peremptorty required in the act firf quoted from, to govern " cales pmiftiable with death." The fame act fays, that trials in capital calc; thould be cliewhere, and not at the fated places, unlefs manifent inconvenience attend it. And what, he akked, was the great inconvenience in the prefent cale? Was there any objection of a nature to render it improper or impolfible to try the prifoner in that county ? It was true that a confiderable number of perfons in that county had been mifguided, but was it to be inferred thence that all were? Or that a fair trial could not be had there? No doubt an able and impartial jury might be obtained in that place, and therefore an impartial trial could be had. In bad times, with corrupt judges, if ever fuch a time, and fuch judges thould unhappily be in this comtry, the fection of 1789 wuild form a protection to the citizen agant any innovation of his privilege, and prevent them dragging hims from his family and friends to a diftant part, where he might be unknown, to be tried.

Surely it could not be urged that the fafcty of the United States, on the protecition of the court, made it neceffary to try this caufe in Mhiladeljhia. The prifoners might have been confined in the gaols of that comery; the troons of the United States were even now remaining there, to protect the law.

The vicinity of that foot to the witneffes who bekeld the tranfaction: was an additional argument for the plea. Some to befure had come tu the city, others perhaps might come forward, ficknefs or age might opeate to prevent fome coming. It was allo inconvenient to the prifoner in preventing his neighbours or relatives affording him that comfort which they might wifh. But all this, he faid, was immaterial, the law was definite, and nothing could fupercede its mandate. Here was a lif of ninety-eight witnelles, furnilhed the prifoner by Mr. Attorney, who were to appear againt him, and hence the neceflity of time and opportunity being allowed the prioner to examine that numerous train of evidence, and to prepare to controvert them.

Mr. Lewis then referred to a fimilar motion which he made before - the court, refpecting a perfon tried for high treafon in the Weftern Infurrection, in 1795 , for which he referred to Dallas's reports, page 18, vol. 3. The motion was then rejected, but upon diferent grounds than could poffibly be now urged. Judge Wilfon fated it as the opinion of the court, the plea being made at a previous court, that the circuit court, at which the prifoner was to be tried was fo near, that there was not time to fend to the witneffes and bail, on account of the great diftance of the county, from the city, as they were fubpened to attend at the next feffion. The reafon was, that the Supreme court could not orier a fpecial feffion to over-rule the fated feifion, aad therefore the inconvenience was great and manifest ; but no fuch excufe could hold good in the prefent cale : the mandatory language of the former claufe mut be obeyed.
Further, he obferved, that a man might be charged with the crime of treafon, and committed for that crime, or bound over, if the cale would allow it, yet it was impolible to know that he would be indicted for treafon by a grand jury, and no court held previous to the indicment, could fay whether it was a cafe puniflable with death, or a mifdemeanor, and theiefore the time to move the plea was the prefent time, after the indicunent was returned, and when the defendant was arraigned for trial, and till then the motion would be inapplicable. He obferved that he confidered this motion of conlderable importance to the prifoner, and not to lim only, but to every ciizen of the United States: this was the fecurity of his rights, and thole of every man in the court, and therefore he hoped the juftice of the court would grant the plea.
Mr. Sitgreaves faid he had not been able to diftinguinh whether this motion had been preferred to the court as a matter of unqualified rigbt, or whether it was merely an application, as a matter of favour in this particular infance, but he would attempt an anfiwer to both. With relpect to the 2gth feet. of the judiciary act, if the firf part of the paragraph was to ftand alone, without a qualification, it would be a pofitive direction, and would not bear an objection, yet there would be a difficulty arife how it could be executed: But it was not fo. At the time that law was paffed, there were flated places, as well as ftated times for holding the federal courts, there was no provifion whatever for holding them elfewhere than the appointed place, although the judges had Ipecial powers to alter the time of holding them: whether that reafon, or fome other, excited the legillature to put the dilcretion as to place in the judges alfo, he could not tell, but although the firft direction is pofitive, an alternative is immediately introduced: twelve Jurors fummoned from the county where the crime was committed may fuffice, at the difcretion of the court, and this fecond branch of the rule is to avoid what the court may judre a great inconvenience, againt which no general rule of common law can provide.

In order to prevent any mif-interpretation, and remove the embarraffments, which a wrong we of the lav of 1789 might produce, the provifion of March 1793 fith more deines that difcertion, without making any material alteration : that fa; " the court might be hat at any con ${ }^{3}$ venient place within the difhit, neares 6 the phice where the crime was commited than the place for holding the Rated fefion." Certaire it is that this provition cives no requice it to be hed in the fane county; indeed it is extremily cuefientiole, hether the court have authonity to remove it there; they may nearer the place, but the word " nearer" excludes the place itfelf; if the place was intended, the phrafeology would be more accurately inferted. He would now remark that no place nearer the fene of infurrection than this city could have been felected, and here the difcretion of the court had fixed it. The law mut have been made for one of two realons: either for the facility of public juftice, or to favour the prifoner. Relpecting the firf, the crime was committed, not in one crunty only, but in three adjoining counties, and therefore agreable to the arguments of the gentleman, the trial munt be held in three counties, by thice juries, and the witneffes be harafled to appear three times; bue even if the court fhould determine upon che of thofe counties for the trial, which was to be felected?

Mr. Lewis quefioned the propriety of this argument, fince it appeared all the cales of treaton cacept one (in Bucks) happened in Northanpton connty, and no iaconvenicuce cont aicrue fiom holding the trials at one place.

Mr. Rawle faid that le fhouk pratuce evidence to prove the crime of treafon committed i: the three cometies.

Mr. Sitgreaves procecded to fate that as the act of 1793 as well as 1793 lett a difcretion for the coart to determine accondingto exifting circumfances, and not according to any known definite pisciples of law, it would be impeltic, if not illogal to hold the court in the county, this city being, agrecable to one arguncit next to one of the coneties, and on the other view, the fated place for holding the cour s, the arguments mult fall, and the motion be rejected. Philadelphia, he faid was as near to the place where the crime was commoted ats the court houfe of that county, and here is was probable the pupefes of pablic juftice could be molt compleaty andweed.

If then the argument was not lupputed on public convenience, it mult be the convenience of the prifier which the gentleman ained at, but he had failed to How any fuch thing, and therefore had preciuded any anfwer. He had argued for the comfort of the prifoner; having his neighbors about him, sc. but it muft be obferved that the refidence of the priforer was in Buch;, whereas the crome was committed in Northampton, and there he mult have been tried, if the decifion thould turn in favor of his argumento. Nos, Pheladelphia was as much an adjoining county to Bucks, as Northampron, and therciore as much his vicinage, and each place of hoding the cunts at about equal points of diftance from his selidence. Exen if it a a held in Northampton county, it would neider facilitate the tral, ner be of adrantage to the perfon.

Another queftion be vould fuggef was, whether this application was made foon enoug! . It was hearly, or quite a week, fince the indicment was given to the prifoner, and it was a much longer time fuce he was committed : if it was poper that any application fhould be made to the court, either as a matte. of right or of favour, it cught to have been made in due time, fo as :ot to delay or defeat the quet. tion of public juflice. Is wouk be un. ecilli's to fay that the queltion was fally determmed in the year 705 , and if it was a matter of law, and as fuch mandatory, every cafe which was then decided on, was a cafe of mis-trial, and the whole court and council mult have been guilty of a great dereliction. But he believed it was afked of the court at that time, not as a matter of right, but of favour, and it appeared by the report quoted, that if the favour could have been granted, it would, but the deciition was arsainft the poffibility of it, and certainly ftronger reaton would have weighed for it then than now, on which account there is now at hat, equal grounds for refuing it.

Mr. Rawle obferved, that while he profefled as much humanity as any gentleman in court, yet as council for the profecution he felt as much defire for the juft execution of public juftice. He could fcarcely perfinade himfelf that the genteman who moned the court could be ferious at this late period of the bufuefs,-after feven days had elapfed fince the indicment was found, after all the inconvenieacies of a preparation for trial had been iucarred this new, this additional inconvenience of fummoning the witnefics and jurors to another place, could not be either to the advantase of the piifoner, or agreeable to a juft conffruction of the law adverted to. The law of March 1793 does not apply to a cafe whicl the offence firit charged would make capital fo as to effect life. 'The gueftion ferioully was, Mr. Rawle faid, whether granting the motion would not deprive the country of profecuting the trial at ail, or ceven after had full proof of the guilt of the prifoner it would not prevent the court of the power of paffing fentence. The act read by Mr. Sitgreaves gave the Judge the power to hold courts throughout his whole diftrict, 226, Vol. 2, Laws U. S. but the act of i 789 , which fixed the place, only gave the court power as to times of holding feccial feffions 51 , Vol. 1. T'ie 29 th fection of that act was abfolutely very ambigucully worded, becaule the difth fection of the fame aat had put it out of the power of the court to remove as to place. W bacever, then, was the iatention of the Legiliature, the courts had not power to cfiect a change, and when an att failed in explaing the inemion, the intention cond not be carried into execution, to renedy the incenvenicuce of the court, being bound in all cafes as to place the claufe cf $17 \% 3 \mathrm{p} \cdot 225$ was paited.

Mr. Rawle contended that a fiecial curt wis nore than an adjourn ed circuit court : it was a febtantive court of ifecif, held for fipecial purpoles, and could not Que cerionar: for ayy other conit; if therefore, a fipecial court was to be hrld for this trial, it munt begin de nova: a new grand jury, aid a ne:v peit jary malt be called ; the witneffes mult be fummoned anew, which would be a bad precedent, befides a great delay. The imprepriety was cvident: after a bill had been found the pritimer had feen a litt of the Juy and wimelfes; after having had time to calculate its clances, at the feventh day of the proceeding, he came forward to reno:e the trial! lit the prifoner had not had time to enquire into the claracter of the jurcrs or witnelles, fome other reafon would have been given, but as mething of that kind !ad been attenpted, and as the inconvenicinces ofdelay and removal were fo manifeff, ine trufted the court weild not accede to the motion.

Mir. Dallas declared that it was not the deign of the council for the prifoner to try ce-eriments by the prefent motion; they conceived that he had a right to be tried, in the county where the crime was charged: the act of Congrefs was mandatory unlefs " manifeft inconveniences' 'loould appear. He conceived that diffance could not be an inconvenience, becaufe the act contemplated the poffibility of crimes heing committed in Ailegany as well as in Chefler county. Nor could time; the importance of a capital trial was net to be fo played wich; Congrefs defigned that an inpartial trial flowid be had in all cales, without regard to fuch trivial objections. He was fure the honourable court would not conlider their perfinal inconveniences as meant, and therefore thould not mention it. Mr. Dallas wilhed it to be obferved that the crimes were recenty committed, and public juftice had not bee: long fufipended, and even if the prefent motion was acceded to, the hand of public juftice might flortly give the blow, by appointing an carly fipecial fetfion. It was not certain before the court fat, that a bill would be found for high teafin, merely becaule the parties were bound over for ligh treafon; and therefore the prifoner might not be able to. meet that charge : again, the time fince the bill was found and the party infermed, and ferved with the enormous lift of 98 witneffes, has been very thort; it was Wednedday laft, feven davs only, two of which muft be left out, Thuriday having been the faft day, and Sunday intervening. Many of thefe witnelles and jurors he had never feen nor heard of, and it was necefiary he flould have time to enquire who they were ; there had been no catches on the part of the prifmers. It would be an ealy thing for the court at this time, fince all the parties were upon the fpot, to bind them over to appear again. In the cate read by Mr. Lewis, jucl re Walfon exprefly declared that there was a defire in the court to comply, but the difficulties were infurnountable. With refinect to the other cales, the mandatory language of Congrefs impofed a neceflity on the officers of juflice, where it was polfible. The chathing of courts, he prefumed, could not be held up for excule at this time : he did not know how much time the prefent circuit might confiume, but as the fupreme court wound not meet untill A aw, ft, no doubt there could be a period for the bufinefs of a feecial court pared during the recels; but if the period thould be filled up, in the Augult foffion arrangements might be made to hold oue. Wiith repect to the hold-allowed adifcetion as to the place of hoolding them; page j : , orives difcretioi, as to the circuit court, th the judges of fumeme cont with refject to time: : thefe provifions re'pected all cales alike, within the juridiction of thofe courts, but the fubfengent act referrel to, made an exception with regard to cales of a nature hif:hey cimina!, or conital : certainly then, if ever the Congrels meant there how be a trial at all in the proper county, one like the prefent must come under that intention. The language of the two acts, page 67 , Vol. 1 , and 225, V. I. 2, Mr. Dallas oblerved was different. He firit declared, thas calfs panithable with death fhould be tried in the county, &c. The somici that fecial circuit courts may be holden nearer the place wiste the citheces may be faid to be commited than the place of the ordinary , cella, ; but one thing was worthy of notice: the firf relates on'y th cfisuces punisbabie with death, while the other is worded as crimes only: of whatever nature. Cafes of infurrection and rebellion mult have been in the view of the Legillature, and in them it would be very probable part of more than one county would combine, and they could have excepted fuch cafes if it had been meant fo to do. It was farther faid that part of the crimes were committed in two counties, and therefore the prifoner had deprived himfelf of the common law vicinage. This was not clea: : the vicinage where the offence was committed would at any rate have it in their power to declare what they had feen of the conduct of the prifoner. As to the flage at which the application was made, no lofs of time had been made, and if it was, it would be extremely fevere, if in the power of the court to order it otherwife, that the prifoner in to important a cale thould be injured thereby. On the whole, he trufted, without manifef inconveniency thould appear, that the court would grant the motion.

Mr. Lewis faid it was frange, mifchievous and unfounded doctrine that this application had not been made in time : three clear days from the notice of the indictment being allowed by law to the prifoner, he was not bound to anfwer the indictment until yefterday : the trial did not then proceed, and he appeared this day, but in his fincere opinion, from mature refection, two three nor fuur days fhould have weight with the court, becaule the ait of Congrets was binding upon them, whatever the learned gentlemen had advanced to the contrary: he had a right to demand it , and if their honers, the judges, proceeded to hold the trial in any but the right place, they, and not the prifoner, would ofiend. Mr. Attorney had fuppoled it this was granted, all which had been done would be null and viod, grant this for a moment, did Mr . Attorney or John Friss direct the proceerïngs of the grand jury, sec. certainly the attorney. In this Mr. Lewis believed he had done ftrictly right, here was the proper place for the iffue to be joined; but Northampton is the proper place for the trial of that iffue. It was objected becaute it was faid the criine was committed in three counties; but fuppofe it weee in three or thirty counties, the overt act in the bill is laid in one county only, and there only does the law fupport the claim for trial. The two laws referred to are unneceffary in capital cafes, if they do extend to them at all, becaufe the firft law makes ample provifion not only as to time, p. $5^{1}$, but as to place, p. 67. and is not fuperceded by the other. With reference, to the law, of 1793 , page 227, which fass, that criminal caules may be tried nearer to the place where the offences were faid to be committed, the argument was taken up by Mr . Sitgreaves to mean nearer to the comety; hence he fays thas Philadelphia county is the adjoining one of the infurgent coumitics. In the Indictment Bethlehem is mentioned as the plate; now the law directs a fpecial feffion to be held nearer to Bethlechem than isPhiladelphia, that act does not fay whether it fhall be held in or ont of the county, but near the place. ilhe gentleman appeared to lave thought he was in another place, and not at the bar, in his view of tie difcretionary power of the court, which would leave it to be regulated according to the ebbs and flows of the pafions of the judges, or the temper of the times; but he finould recollect this difiction was of a legal, abil not of a political natere, which the necellity of the cale called for. All that munf be confidered to operate on the quefion is, whether juftice cannot be done between the United States and the priloner, if the trial is heild in the county of Northampton; if it can, we rife to claim this as the right of John Fries, and nearly allied to the interefts of every citizen.
Judgr Irrmeti, faid it was hela by judge Hale, that an indictment was part of the trial; if fo, he fhould be glad to be told what they were to do with the prefeat indicment, if the trial was to be removed? if fo, the pifforer muft be indicted as well as tried in the county. Fofter 235 , mind $=3^{\prime}$. Another queftion would be, could the court order the dimitiol of the indictment?

Juger Petirs could not fee how part of the proceedings of this court could be tranferred to a fpecial court, aidd therefore how it could be renowed to the counte, and while a doube remained, it would never do to renovate a criminal cale of to much importance, he could not fee the force of the reacom, in tavour of the emoral. He thought that however humanity ought to lean towards a prifoner, flill the proceedings of the court ought to enliure julfice to the United States, and to the profecution, and therefore thai puiblic juftice ought to be as well guarded as the pritonen's comeneinence: a hair and inpartial trial ought to be had, which he was certain cond not be held in the connty of Northampton, and if he were now applied to in his official capacity to Ad, to ise iumponer. And why? -The prefident in his proclamation had piribici, declared that the lawful atheri.y of that cruaty could not be carcied into execation without the add of a militay force. Would is not thenfore have been improper for us to order a focial court to be hold at that place? If a ! ecial comt could not have been held there, die ouly thing to be done was to bind the parties over to this court.

There ate two very inmonent dincelties in the way of this motion, I bay buymant, becaile they der iut a as genteman of the law can be perieilly clear upon them. Wirit whether, if we order a feccial court, we can orke, by any proets known to the law, this indiument to $b=$ transerelel of that court. This is a doubt flated by julge Willon, of the luaseme court at the t ane of a fomer moti $n$ alluded to; and I an inclined to think this was a great reaim whicin guid de the decifion, otherwife a doubt would not have been intimated. If this cannot be done, what would be the condequences of the removal of the cate? If this budiuneat were to be thenen there, with a duthin point of hav on it, a motino might be wad: after wrial, fur a wew wial, that not being regular, pait haviug beca hutd in another place. Whether this would $\mathrm{b}=$ moved or not I caniot fay, but I kuow at beet it is doubfful. The conit the efore cught to proced in the cleareft maner not to rwo the rifk of difeatiog the profecution of a cauli fompora it. It is the great defire of this court to $d$, the moft impartial juftice between the public and the prifoner, and not from private humanity on the one hand, or 1 fentment on the wiher, to lean cither way. As to the common law principles of vicinage, there ate adiantages and thefe are difidvantages atending it. The advaitages are, that the parties are known by, and know their jurors and witaffes, that their chamaturs may be viewed, and the moft impartial juntice done. But is nearly one whole county has been in a ftate of infferrection, can it be faid that a fair trial can be had there? We may at lealt prefume it could not, becaufe the prefident of the United States oidered a militiary foice there, to enforce the execution of the laws. It was by this military fuace that the pisfone is are now convened in this city, and I have reabon $t$ b believe foom Lhe opiniun aid kiowied je of the judge wi.h whom I now ad, that it revald be exceeding imporper thold the trials there. It was hisited that troups are if!! there, ald they cond promote the execation of jeffice ; but what fort of juttice is that of the lwod? If they would operaie at all it weutd be by incimidation, and this would be to the prejudice of the prifoner, and ia no nefect in libs fanu. 'has cosCideration alme in my prinien would malce it "man? for a trial to be lech there. With refpect the the miacipes of commen haw, the genlemen well hiow that the arime may be changed, that is, that parts of the jury may be fummond ficm utlocicumics. I do nut hom whether there is a power in the cumts wh chane we oenier in Eoghand in a cimainal cafe, but 1 how that in fome deficult cales, 1. here partialicy was to be appacheraded an act of paikimene hasbeen pafied for the manifelt reabon of paitiality. This pures that we ought not

Upon the whole I am clearly of opinion that if the motion could be granted without ronning the rifk of thefe uncertainties, but certain inconveniences, it would not be expedient to grant the motion, and therefore the trial mult go forward.

No. II.

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL OF JOHN FRIES, FOR TREASON.

Mat 14.

MR. LEIVIS informed the court that the other day in enning minto court, he received a flight information, which he thought it his duty as advocate for the prifoner, to make farther enquire into, but it was mot till this morning that he had been able to procure the depofitions of witneffes to prove a fact, on which he meant to ground a motion. He read the depofitions to the court, which imported that Joln Rhoad, one of the jurven on the trial of Joln Fries, had declared a prejudice againft the prifoner, after he was fum:mened as a juror on the trial. He now found that he could procure other adida: its to the fame fact, on the ground of which he "moved a rule to how caufe why there ought not to be a new trial.,"* He exprefled himeleff aware of the latenefs of the period, verdict having been given, but the impofibility of proving the fact earlier, was a fuffifient apology. He thould forbear to enter into the merits of the motion at prefent.

Rule was granted and made returnable to-morrow morning.

Mr. Dandas faid it becanie his duty as advecate for the prifoner, to lay before their honours the grons:d ch which they had moved for a new trial in the cafe of their unfortunate cliont, in which he ans lenfible fome little violence muft be offered to bis feclings in whofe betalf it was made, and particulanly if judguent thruld at laft be pronounced upen hinn ; but whaterer the ferent, it berame their duty to prefer $i$, and he was certain that unam exammatian inton the facts, they malt be jultificd in prodaci,g them, as the evait mut alter the decifion which had taken place. vindiclive fpirit of prejudice, to exprefs his defies, can it be contended that he was capable of deciding on the guit or imnocence of the prifoner, by the weight of the teflimony only? There cannct be found a ftronger cafe in the books. It is not neccifiary or right to go into the teffimony, or any of the circumfances of the crime of the piloner, to lee whether the cendict was right or wrong; but it is neceffary to view the determination of this jurve, who wifhed them all hanged, and particularized Fries. Firft, his words were, "we will hang themall:" then he faid, "I myfelf flall be in danger, unleis we do hawg them all." This is not merely an opinion generally expreffed, but the language of defign to conviat at all events. If eleven out of twelve jurors had been of opition that an acquital flould take place, and this individual tuppofing he was in danger had declased this cpution, and pointed out his view of the probable confequences, would not the vice of the eleven be changed to guard againft th:s danger? + Hinwhins, c. 43 , fec. 28 . p. 329 , lupports the doquine generally, that if a jurer has declared his opnion before hand, that the party is guilty, or will he hanged, or the lhe, it is good caufe of challenge : but if from his knowledge of the cafe, and iot from iow-will to the party, he has only declared !is npinizn, it is no caule of challenge. Rut even refientment ha wo the infurece upon a man's conduct which felf-prefer va-

Therefore we muft conclude that " "il-will' in the above authority, is put merely as an initance. Whether thefe words were !poken in warmoth or not, is immaterial ; for is weuld be no alleviation; it is imponible that they thould have been exprefied without ill-will : and thesefore the snaa is not im, artially qualified to pals upon the life or death of the prifuner. Salkrld 6.ts and i! Modera 118 . Upon the general ground of what could be with propriety called mifoonduct in the perfoin fummoned to difcharge the dity of a juror with impartiality, he oblerved there could be no doubt upon the proprity of their adking a new trial, nor upca the juftice of ont bcing granted.

Mr. Lewis mentioned $\varsigma$ Bacon, 251-2 (odd calition) and 4 Fhackfone 354 - 5 , in order to thow, that in criminal cales there flow id be no new trial, unlefs it ilould appear that the former trial had been attended with fraud, \&c. and that a new trial in thofe caies might be granted after conviction, in Modem, 119. 5 Bacum, 243, and 3 ibid, 258 (odd edition.) If he has declared his will, truching the matter, it flall be caufe. 4 Blackftene, 346 , (old edition.) The direction refipecting the ocnire, he faid, was entrulted to the law and not to the narihal, and by that direction was exerciled by the judges in 1795 , and if that was neglected, it was not legally executed. The court could, as then, order the jury to be called from all parts of the Staie, and not to be left to the marlial. 5 bacon 2.22 is an i:iflance ia which a fon was fiwon into the jury, (hein? the dame name of Jolm lierce) inflead of the father who was the perfien fimmoned to atelad, whereupon a new triad was granted, becamic the tial was had by only

Mr. Sitcreaves faid he did not thin it necefary to controvert the pofition which bad been adsanced b: the gentemen on the other fide: that the cour have full power to wher a new trial after conviction in certain camial cafes, as well a. onsil under certain ciocumflances; but notwithimain' ${ }_{j}$ the aubonity of the court to grant new tmals was afcemand in bine of the beco.s, vet it would appear that this poner hal never been exercied in an watal cate; no fuch caie had been relemed to, and he belesed cond not be tomed fhe inagined the reano whe it comb not, was, almogh courts had the foll puner, yet the preuliar folmmity of a thal fer a capital olface, and the geat cantion which was uled to bumd the fecurty of the prituner asdinf imprope bias, or wheg proceeding that may refect his guilt or imocace, with fubicien nownd to pereat intrufin, and thetefore conviction ia hach a cafe haci me yer been let alide. If the lav lays that upon conviction of a certaia crime, a certain punithment ftail enfue: this is peremptery; and the "ourt have no power to depart fiom ordering that punihment. Whees a a difcretion is left, it is meant that the cout may we that difereto, according as the nature of the cafe may require, and this is left in the conctience and mind of the court alone. agreeable to circumita, ces which grow out of the juftice applying to the particular cale. In the prefent cafe therefine, the court are not to be governed by any lece of preciie ruls, but by an opinion of what will beft perpetuate $\hat{p}$ :blic justice. To be fure it is a rule, that a new trial flall be granted where a verdict is given againt evidence, but even then it has been frequently refuied, where they fee the cale is plain. In (ivil caules it hass been refufed, when rot to the intereft of juttice to grant it. 2 Burrows, 936 .

Judge Irepell faid he bad nit difonvered ay dictum, which diffinguilhed civil from criminal caules, fo that equal juftice ought not to be adminifered; but if either, furtly a ciminal cafe called moft tiongly for juftice: it would never do to apply cafes in far, as to fay, that if one man upon a jury was difcovered not to be fully impartial, a new trial fhould not be granted, when a man's life was at ftake.
Jrdge Peters faid he always underfood, that the power of granting a new trial, was in the difretion of the court; and that its opinion ought not to be turned by any vagaties, which theald be prefented, but be grverned by a reference to lecal dilcretion; but at the fame time, he could not fay that the court oustit oo throw cutirely out of their view, ail the evidence which had been given in the trial, and every thing that had been done. If in the ficale of jultice, there thould appear to be any eiror, and the cafe is any way doubteul, then the court will take advantage of a trible, in order to gratt a new trial; but where the court has been fully convinced that the verdict is right, then the evidence ought to have fome weight, as well as the law.

Mr. Dalias obferved, that the motion was nint in any regard to evidence, if fo, the weight of evidence munt be confidered; but it was allone on the point of law, totally independe.st of evidence.
Mr. Sitgreaves contended, that where a trial was neceflary for the purpofes of juftice, it refled between the judge and his confcience, and he was not to be goverued by any precife flate of facts here or there: if, as is unqueftionably the cafe on the prefent occafion, a tiial has been held, which for the patience of invefitiration given to it by the court and jury, has fearcely had its equal in this, or any orher. conntry; where the prifoner has had every indultence, and every capacity of talents, which this flate can afford, to alift him in his defence; if after all this, a conviction has been the refult of this minute and laborious examination, it will at leat be allowed, that the objection which thould have the uttimate efeit of letting afide a decition and inveltication fo foleminly and detherately taken, thould be ground ed upon no dight matter, but that the reation gould come compleatly authenticated, fo as not to leave a doubt, or the leaf ambiguity. If the facts related in the affidavits, had been known to the prifener, and mentioned when the furor came for his arras, mondubtedly, the legal inveftigation would have taken flace, and a folemu decifion palfed thereon, which if true, would have been to didqualify the juror. Mr. S. explainer? the different medes of challenge, and proceeded to queftion the relation of the affidavits- that thefe wese words, faid to be fpoken a confiderable time before the tria!, " ome dass:" the trial had been nine days before the court, and it was probable, this declaration mult have been made fifteen da;s at leaf, that this important ard ofien repeated converfation fhould refl all this time in the minds of the witnefles, vithout a difclolure, was very extraordinay, particularly fo, when it was confidened thet they atended the coure every day, and at laft the affidavits refted on the memory of the witneffes, which muft be very liable to mif-apprehenfion and crror. This is good reaton for the objection, that the application is too late, ard ought, in a matter of fo much importance, to have been mentioned fooner, if in the knowledge of fo many people, at fuch repeated converfations as the gentlemen conceised.

Mr. Sitgreaves was pruceeding here to read a written declaration of Mr. Rhoad (the juror) as to the circumflances of the converfation, which as it was not fworia to, was objected by the prifoner's counfel ; the juror was at length fwom, and the depofition was read to the court. Mr. Sitgreaves faid he read this, to fhow how eafy ic was to milapprehend not only the meaning of words, but the words themfelves. Another thing to be chforved was, two of the witneffes themfelves at that moment, were prifoners out upon bail, under indictment for miflemeanor, and therefore thr afthdavit of fo relpectahle a citizen as the juror, denying the fat, left a frious doubt as to the truth of the others' depolitions, lat mone as to the pobability of mifake in the relation. MI. S. then verst into a comparion of the afidavits, which he conterded were very diflinalar, and had woth the appear: ance of wrong fatements whatever may be the diference of epimons, as to the diferetion of the comrt, when they are fully fatisfed that the crime is well afcernebd, both as to law and cridence, yet it would not be donbted as di:e unqueitionabie righe of ihe court, to inflitute the molt fevere forminy in a mater whoh endaners the whole of the lomer proceaib?s; the fomer proceding which muft be vald, unlef the mon mequinocal wetionony flat intervene to change it.

Mr. Sitgreaves fail the comecfatum was of a gemeral nature, and not to the prifoner in partichibr, agrecable th the atlidanite generally: it fooke of the gencral effectio of the infurection in that country : indeed it was not to be expected in a matter of fuch public concern as that unappy afini, but crety man would caprefs his opinion, and particularly thole who refled on the font; therefore it cond no: evince any prejudice, and confequently not be lawful challenge to the juror. He referred to 3 Bacois new cdition Letter $E$ fection 12 . One allidavit only particularized lies; and yet it appeared from Mr. Rhoad's Ippofition to relate to one converfation only, therefore it was evident that the relations differed, and were of courfe of a fufpicious nature. If a man draws a deduction frem what he has heard, or from his own kno redge of an event, and not from "ill will," it is no proof of prejudice or partiality, he is fill "indiferent" and open to impreffion: there muft be an expreflion of malice, of determination, to a particular cafe, and in a particular way.

Jeit caure of challenge may be, if one of the grand jury is impannelled on the petir jury, becaufe he may be fad to have already "pa!fed upon the cale in iffue" a Hawk. 29. C 43. Where an action is dependant betwee: a jaror and defendant, it is then challenge to the $\mathrm{f}_{\text {avor, }}$ Viner 21 title juries h. d. Cook Litileton 157 d . Nothing that is merely an exprefion of opinion is caule of challenye: nothing bit what flows from a malicious heart againft the prifoner in particular; all the cafes fho:v the dintinction, and there is not a fugle cale in whiche the declaration of a juror lias been mode caule of challenge but to the favor, in which cate triers are appointed by the court to examine whether this predifpulfition does or dues not appear. The prefent cafe therefore is not caule of particular challenge, but of challenge to the $\mathrm{f}_{\text {avor, }}$ which was not made in time. Mr. Sitgreaves then referred the court to fome authorities 2 Rolls abridgment $657-21$ Viner title trial 266 and 272-1 Salkel ${ }^{15}$ and ane which occurred in this ftate when one Amn Clifton, was convicted for nurder, and one of the jurrors had made deciaration before he was fwom refecting the guilt of the prifoner.
Jidge. Peters faid that he had given the marfhal directions to fummon jurors from Bucks and Northampton: he was not certain whether it was given in writing or verbally, but left it thould not have been in writing he now gave it to the prothonotary of the court. At the firf appearance of it, he did not know whether it amounted to trealion, and therefore he thought particular directions not neceflary, but afterwads, finding it more ferious, he gave the directions which had guided the marfhal,
Mr. Kawle thought it eafy to prove that the marhal was fully authorized to fummon from what part of the fate he pleafed, unlefis the court interfered by a fiecial direction, and then he was bound to whey the mandate. The marfhal no doubt underllood that he was to fummon from the fate at large, conformable to the directions of the law. With reipect to the weflern infurrection, the fiat of the court was obtained, but it was not fo in the prefent cafe. Mr. Rawle, here appealed to the prochonotary to know whether any inftance of a fpecial direction of the court relpecting venire had occurred fince that period in any capital cafe. Mr. Caldwell anfwered there bad not.
Mr. Kawle went on to mention the progrct's which lad been made, and the time and opportunities of which the prifoner might have availed himfelf, but thefe he had neglected, and at this period, he came furwad by his crumfel to challenge the array! Challenge, he obferved, was of two kinds, the poll and the array; if challenge was made to the poll, and the trial weit on, chatlenge to the array could not be made, becaule exception was before made, but he thought it was clear the tine was paficd at which he might have availed himelf of the chat-lenge to the array. It was contended that the marhal had not made a proper return to the wenire, but authority had not beell produced to prove the point, yet authority could be fuund to prove that after the poll had paffed, even before the trial, the array could not be challenged, becaufe that was pafied ton, but to what a much greater leugth liad the prefent objection been delayed? After having taken the chance of the verdit, and findiug it untavorable, then to tay it was irrecular, and for a reafon which might have appeared fonner, he quoted is Mod, 567 and 584.2 Lord hay mond 84 , tefering to the time when exception may be made.
Farther, after all the chances which a prifoner could have, and complaints made of irregularity as to the venire, the objection was farther extended to a man who was fummoned from the very county where the crime was tranfacted! Upon this man the prifoner was willinar to put himfelf for trial, rather than one he did not know. See Danver's abridge. 354,5 and 7 . With reipect to the number returned. Mr. Rawle referred to Crookjames 467. 2 trialis per page 59?. 21 Rate trials, 707. Thete might be more than 60 returned: in regard to the weflern infurrection he faid there were ios fummoned. The words of the venire directing the mathal are, that he catse to come to the court, fo many a certain day; it is therefore proper that a certain number fhould attend, and to enfife the gumber neceffiny in meet the clallenge, the mathal ufially fummons a greater mimber than are mentioned, but if a greater number do attend, then thi fuper-mumeiary are Oricken off. In the prefent cafe the number in the venite was exceeded by 29 , and yet 33 lefis atterded at any one time than were fummoned, the prifoner had been tried by one of thefe 50 , feven of whom were from lis own neighborlwod, and men in whom he the ught he could place his life with fafety. In order to condinc the rumber within fome bounds fo as not to exceed reafon in cate a marflal or fleritt could be found to make that impreper wie of bas power, and take the citizens from their buffetis or thin fomes uineceflatily, an officer fo offending can be protectied for mildemeanor, but this was not the cale. Where there is more than a fuicient number fummoned for the purpofe of tring a citil caule, which in Pemifilvania is confined to 48 , and more than that mumer flould atelad, and one of them fwom on the trial is take: hora thofe our the 48 that attend, then no doubt it would be miftiad, becaufe the fummons was unlawful; fo in the prefelt cafe, if one of the jurors bad been of the 28 over the number 60 , had mose thain 60 atterided it would have been a miltial, becaufe the semire oulered the marflat to cante but 6o to appear, (but that objection even would have been infuficient at this flage of the trial) and more he had no leghe to bring.

As to the propricty of fummoning 12 fiom Bucks and 17 fiom Northampen, the re ajpears to be no waton exercile of power in the marthat, becaule he aceed under the authority of the judge of this court. The gentemen could not lhow an authority which made it necellary for the mathal to have a cestificate to empower him to do this, and if it was neceflary, the cerificate of the judge appeaing Wipn the record would make it valid. Bat even if be had not receiv. ed the authority of the judge, the act of Congrefs would bave been a fufficient waraiat for his conduct. P. 67 vol I . twelse at leaft are to be fimmoned from that county, and 17 are fummoved. The act of fummoning is properly the bufnets of the marthal, if be has efficial notice, in any sbaje, that fuch a trial for a capital oflence is coming forward, which would entitle the prifoner to be tried by twelve jurors from the proper county if he makes the provifion which the law requires, he has abfolurely and completely acquitted his office, as well technically as formally. The return which has been produced embraces the whole number of 89 , lixty of whom are of the county of Philadelphia, and if there is any technical alteration in the form neceffary to give it legal precifion and effeci, it is now in time to alter it, but there is none neceflary.

Mr. Rawle faid he confidered this proceeding as having received the full fanction of the court, in the certificate given by the judge. Fint becaule no oppohtion had been made to it, and fecondly becaule (the whole mumber not having appeared) it was not excepted to at that tine. The lift out of which the feven jurors from the country were taken, he called a fupplementary lift, which completed the former lit, and though not amexed to that pamel was connected with it, filled up and made a part of it, on which an award was entered. The cales referred to had refpeit to a foreign country, but in a diftrict, one connty was nut foreign to another, and therefore Bucks, Northampton and Philadelphia, ftood in one exact lituation. 2 Hawk C. 41 . B. 2. Dyer 118.

Mr. Rawle concluded by faying that he looked upon all the proccedings in the prefent cafe as peifectly regular and compleat, to which no exception could juftly be taken by the prifoner, and he hoped the effort would mifcarry, fince every means had been ufed in :he defence during the long and patient inveftigation which had taken place, and alter a viedict had been fo folemnly pronounced by men whom the prifoner had fuch a fair means of chuling to anfwer his beft purpofe.

The attorney general, and council agreed, and the couri ordered that the deponents hould give teftimony, and be crols examined in court, on each lide. Alio that the witneffes thould be examined feparately, and kept ou: of the court, fo as not to hear the evidence given by each other.

No, I do not.
Attornay. Who did you mention this converfation to afterwards ?
Witness. I do not recollect that I mentioned it to any body.I afterwards paffed by feveral times, and faw Rhoad fpeaking to other perfons: I thought it rather hard before they knew what the crime was, that they fhould fay fo much.

Did you mention it to no one? Recollect.
I believe I mentioned it to fome of the people who lodged in the fame houfe: Henry Jarrett was one of them.

Attozney. Had you any converlation with Jarrett to day upon the fubject?

Witness. I fpoke to him this morning out of court, but nothing particular. Since that I mentioned it to Henry Schiffert, Valentine Keenly and Dewald Aldbrecht, but cannot particularly recollect what time I mentioned it.

Court. Did you mention to any of them before the trial came on?

Witness. Yes.
Counsel. Did you ever mention it to Fries?
Witness. No, I never had an opportunity-I never knew his name 'till this diffurbance took piace:

HENRY SHANKWEILER, fworn. Teftimony interpreted.
Were you prefent at any converfation between Rhoads and others.: refpecting Fries, &c.

Witness. Yes; it was at Sidell's tavern.
When?
It was the week after I came down-fince the court began.
Attorney. What time of the week ?
Witness. I think towards the later end-Thurfday or Friday.
Counsel. What paffed there?
Witness. Rhoad faid it was very well it happened, or went on: fo, for they thould be no longer fafe at home elfe.

What went $f_{0}$ ?

That the people were taken prifoners.
Relate how the converfation began, and what were the very words, as near as you can.

Witness. Some of the country people faid it was very hard they were brought down here prifoners; in anfiver to that Rhoad ufed thefe words. Rhoad further faid, that they ought to ie hanged, and Fries muft be hanged, fur he had been the leader of it, or of thein to go to Betlifhem, and he took the prifoners from the Marhal.

Atroneser. Were Hartman and Heberly prefent?
Wirness, Yes, I flept with them in the fame room.
Do you now fieep with them?
Yes.
Court. Did they fleep in the fame room with Rhoad ?
Yes, all three of us.
Court. Did the converfation pafs in that room?
Wirness. The converfation was down ftairs, where they were, in the bar room drinking ; but be related the fame up flairs too.

Counsel. Do you kiow John Fries?
The firft time I fav him was at Bethlehem.
Did you ever fee him fince?
Oily herc in court, except once at Mark's, when I came to Philadelphia to deliver mylelf up.

Did you ever tell Fries of this ?
No.

HENRY JARRETT, fworn.

Counsel. Do you know Daniel Heberley?
Yes.
Did he communicate to you, and at what time, a converfation between Rhoad and others abont Fries?
Witness. Icannot particularly mention the day, but one day he came to me in the court houle at yon window, telling me that I muft tell either Fries or his attorney that he thould challenge him, becaufe he had faid at Seidell's zavern that Fries muft be hung.

Did he tell you any thing farther?
No.
How long was this before the trial begun?
I camot tell, but it was before.
Did you tell either Fries or the counfel?
I believe I did not, but I think, if I am right, I told it to fonebody. I had not feen Fries, only in the bar, and never told him.

After a hort paufe, the witnefs thought he had told it to Judge Mulhollan, but was not certain. I told it feveral times, but 1 cannot fiear when or to whom.

> Eidience againt the motion. JOHN MULHOLLAN, fworn.

He depored that he had a diffent idea, fomething like a dream, but had no recollection of what it was. On the court applying the queftion, he did not recollect any thing faid to him by Mr. Jarrett about challengiug Rhoad, but he was not certain whether he did not fay that he would not like to be tried by him.
Court. Did he affign any reafon?
Witness. No, I believe not.
Covrt. Had you any converfation afterwards with Joln Fries on that fubject, or did Fries ever confult you as to the challenge of his jurors?

Witxess. No, never.
Court. Nor his couniel?
Witness. Yes, they afked me what I knew of the jury: I told them nothing, but from the temper of the times I would rather lie in prifon for years than be tried at this. time.

Court. Did you mention to Fries what Jarrett told you?
Witness. I do not know; I took but little notice, but let it pafs on.

The depofition of JOHN RHOAD.

Having heard three depofitions read in the above caufe, to wit : the depofitions of Herman Hartman, Daniel Heberley and Nicholas Mayer, I do folemnly declare, that I never did ufe the exprefions imputed to me by thefe deponents.

I recollect that I was in converlation with fundry perfons at Seidell's tavern, at which, the fiid Hartman, Heberley and Mayer were prefent, in which the late difturbances in Northampton county were mentioned, and I there expreffed myielf to the following effect, and no other effect nor purpofe whatever, viz. "That unlefs a flop was put to " fuch proceedings, as have lately taken place in Northampton county, "efpecially at Bethlehem, I would not wilh to live in that part of "the country."
Anl I have not, at any other time expreffed myfelf to the effect, flated in thofe affidavits.

I ferther declare, that I went to the trial of the faid John Fries, with a mind perfectly open to conviction, as to his guilt or iuncence, and that before I aflented to the verdict, I deliberately weighed and confidered ail that had been adduced in his favor.

JOHN RHOAD.

> Swora in open Court, May $15,1799$.
> D. CaLUWELL, Clk. Circuit Court,

Tine oral Teftimony of JOHN RHOAD (interpreted.)
Mr. Sirgreaves. Dj you recollecit any converlation between Shankweiter, Heberly, Hartmaii and yourfelf at Seidell's tavern?

Wifyess. Yes, perfectly well, but I do not recollect that they were all prefent : fome of thein I kiow were. They faid it was hard for them (hies ado onersthat liene here) to come down, as they were in poor circumfances, it would coft them fo much trouble and expence, whereupon I faid that it had been very hard for us (the witnefs and others in that country) in the winter and in the fpring to be up there: I think I faid that if the government had not power to bring thofe people to trial, or before the court, we could not live in the country, nor in any other country: whereupon they faid that the prifoners got feverely punifhed for it; I faid that the punifloment would be according as the law would inflict. They then difperfed-this was in the yard, before the door at the fide of the houfe.

Attorney. Had you any converfation of the fame kind in the room or by the flove?

Witness. Yes, I talked about it with Hartman near the flove.
What time?
It was in the firft week, toward the latter end of the week, near as I can recollect, but I cannot perfectly recollect. Hartman did not fay it plain, but he as much as gave me to undertand that it was hard, or no right that they (the pifoners) fhould come into that trouble, for that two might fwear againft me and bring me to the farse place; I the eupon faid that neither two nor ten of them could bring me to the fame place, as I had never drawn in the fame yoke with him, (Hartmail) againf the goverament. If they were to liwear, I would prove before all the magiftrates in the place, that I never had any thing to do with it, but was always in favor of government. This is all I can recollect.

Attornef. Was there nothing at this converfation faid about Fries and the other people?

Witness. No, I then went away from the flove.
Court. Did you ever talk with Shankweiler about it?
Witness. I believe he was prefent.
Did you to Herberly?
He was likewife there-in the houfe or at the door.
Court. D. you recollect faying to either of them that they (the prifoners) ought to be hanged-either in the flove room or in the bed room?

Witness. I do not recollect that I faid dny thing. I took particular care not to fay any thing of that kind, fince I lave been fummoned on the jury, becaule I new it was neceflary to take cane.

Court. Some wele faying you we.e warm : were you wam or offended in confequence of what Hartman faid to you?

Yes, it was difagreeable to me, and offended me, elfe I flould not lave faid fo much.

Atronner. At the firt time you come down had you converfation with Nicholas Mayer, or any bedy elfe?

I do not recollect : I know I have feen Nicholas Mayer before, but cannol tay where.
How long did you flay in town the firf time?
From evening till the next day at noon only-I came in about eight o'clock, and went away about three or fuur next day.

Court. Did you fay any thing about the proccedings at Bethlehem in Northampion coumy?

Witness. I recollect that there was a talk, but I cannot recollect the converfation itfelf.

Do you recollect faying that you would not wifh to live in the country, except a ftop was put to fuch proceedings?

Not at that time, but I believe I recollect fomething of the kind afterwards.

Court. What did you fay?
Witness. I faid that if the government had not the power to punifh the evil, or evil doers, I would not winh to live in fuch a country. I do not recollect any more.
Counsel. At this laft time did you fee Nicholas Mayor?
I did fee him ; but I am not certain whether it was before the door, or in the houfe.

Court. When did you come to town the fecond time?
Witness. On the 22 d of April, at eight in the morning.
Counsel. -Had you any converfation with Mayer then?
I never had any converfation with him, but I faw him in the yard.
Michael Snyder was next fivorn as to the character of John Rhoad the juryman; he depofed that he had known him 27 or 28 years, during all which time he had been a good character, and a man of veracity. He did not think he would talk farther then he could make appear.

John Moretz depofed that he had known him about 25 years, he was a very clever honeft man; a man of truth as much as he knew of him : he could fay nothing againt him.

Philif Walker did not know him very particu'arly, but he never heard any thing amifs of hin: as much as he knew of him he was an honef man.

Jacob Arvot junior liad been acquainted with Mr. Rhoad fome years, and believed him to be a man of unblemilhed character, as good as any in that country.

Mr. Sitgreaves faid he would not have troubled the court again upon this quefion, lad circumfances refted as they were before the evidence, but upon invertigation palpable differences would be difcovered between the affidavits and the verbal relations, not only of the deponents with themfelves, but which other. He then analized and compared the affidavits of Mayer, Heberly and Hartman, which he only recommended to the exanination of the court, and he thought the difference mult appear fo effential as to give a ferious doubt of the accuracy or truth of either, while the character of Mr. Rhoad was unimpeachable.

Mr. Lewis faid if any trifing difference appeared in the affidavits from the relation, it was eafliy accounted for in the manner the affidavits were tahen: thofe of Heberly and Hartman, were taken in his office, and intelpreted by a German, from whom he had very greaf dificulty to collect the meaning in Euglifh. Only one of thefe affidavits were taken by himfelf, the other by Mr. Ewing, a young gentheman, ftudent in lis office [Mr. Ewing corroborated the fact : " that he could not underfland what the interpreter faid."]

Mr. Lewis then mentioned the grounds upon which the rule to fhow caufe had been granted; whether either, or all of thefe grounds had weight in them, he would not undertake to affert ; but certain it was, that it was the duty of the prifoner's counfel to lay them before the court, and wait the event, which if favourable, would caufe a new trial : if not, they fhould be fatisfied with lawing difcharged their duty; in cither cafe, they fhould cheerfully fubmit to the opinion of the court ; and he was forry to fee that the cafi queftion, to wit, That the trial ought to have been leld in the proper county, had given any dicompofure to the court : he then explained the reafon, to fhow the court that it was not agitated ont of any difrefpect to their former decifion, which was that " manieft inconsenience" did prevent the trial beiser held there, hat this did not appear on the record. In criminal protecutions, and efpeciall: capies cades, it was ufial for the prifener's counfel to avail themielves of every flip and inaccuracy, and therefore he was exculeable in the preie:t. He quoted. 4 Burrows, 252.

It was conmon for the court to err, and in Such a cafe, he confidered himfelf in duty bound to point it out to then, and he was fatisfied if that error was of confouence courgh, the court would grant a rule thereupon, and thus retrair from their former opinion, which they were fully authorifed to do. He refucicl t) 3 Blackftone 391-1 Burrows, $393^{-}$

Mr. Lewis then went on to point out the propriety of granting a new trial in criminal as well as in civil cafes, althcugh the profecuting coundel, had enforced the want of procedent, as a reafon againft it; indeed he faid it was evidently of more conlequerce, and therefore he fuppoled it had been the more frongly oppoled: a man's life and his fame was of more value than a part of his property, and he had no doubt that, whatever might bave been the verdict, the court would go as far in granting it. It was admitted that the court had the power, if it had the power, thiere was no donbt but the honorable judges would exercife it accordinc, to their convition.

Mr. Lewis faid the council fer tiet prifoner did not come forward to prove that the verdict was given ageainf evidence, but to infift that the prifoner had been tried by eleve: jurns only, fir the other frood indifferent as he food uniworn, they went further-they weat to prove that there was an effential error in the pancl, and thas the prifoner was bereft of thofe beneilts, so winich the late entitled him. It we prove this, faid he, we do not adidels mirfelucs the the diffetion of your honors; it is not a matter of will, it is a matter of juflice, to which we are entitled. As it refipecis the evidence, you are not at all to conlider its weight: the evideare may be clear, anal yet the verdict may be wrong given, becaufe of the in onmetency of the jurors. The gentlemen have faid the peried for application is pailit is too late,-but with all their talents and induhious refearchee, thofe learned gentlemen have not boce able to produce a frate anthority to fupport the doetrize that it is too late ; ater conviction, or even after condemnation, the comt have authority to order a r.ch: trial; no time is fecificd to limit the diferetion, if the reatons are good. If the law has not diftinguifhed the period, thofe gentlemese are certainly unwarranted in faying it is too late. 2 Strange, 968 , is a cafe where an argument was held on a plea for new trial, but not a fingle argument is ufed, that a new trial could not be held on capital cales: that feems to be taken for granted.

It was argued againft a new trial, in capital cafes, that the court proceeded more deliberately, and more cautioufly, and becaufe the prifoner was allowed a challenge of his jury. The argument amounts to this: becaule the law requires merc caution, and gives the prifoner more advantages where lis life is at fake, for that reafon, he fhould have lefs advantage and lefs iadulgeace, or in other words, becaufe the benignity of the law allowed more benefits in the awful event of life or death; therefore in another point, efiential to the prifoner, he Should be bereft of an acivantage, eninoyed by one indicted for an affault, or in a common civil caufe. It may be argued, that the benevolence of the executive, may catend mercy to the prifoner, becaufe of any irregularity in evisence or proceeding, but this will not fatisfy the laiv; it is an haza d at bell, whiie the law gives him the certain advantage of a new trial. the power and right of granting a new trial in fome cafes, is adimitud ; now if any of the witnefles or jurors could be prove? to have perijured themelves, the evidence being firft given, atid the verdizt pronounced; this, it will be allowed, would have weight to grant a new rial ; but the cafe before the court, goes as far, if not farther; and if there fhould appear an extreme error in funmoning, the jury, or that one of the jurors had difqualifed himfelf from wearing the characterifics of an unbiaffed man, then it mult equally appear, that there has been an infringement of a legal right, fufficient to lay the foundation of a fecond hearing.

Another doctrine that was infilled on was, that it was difcretionary in the court; that where they were fatisied with a verdict, although againft evidence, no new trial ought to be granted : there may be inftances of a civil nature, in which that doctrine will be allowable, but they differ materialily from the one now before the court, and therefore will not apply : that application may go to the favor of the court, whers they lee the evidence flrong, but no favor can be exercifed, nor is any afked in this cafe; we only appeal to the junice of the cafe.

It was faid by one of the gentleme:, that this juror's declaring his fentiments, was only caule of challenge to the favor, for which triers ought to have been appointed, and the qualification or difqualification of the juror been determined by them, but for which it was now, too late. Mr. Lewis denied the pofition, He had already proved, both on his own declaration, and by the evidence, that it did not come to their knowledge, until after the verdict was given, and therefore they came forward as foon as they were obliged: this was allowed a fit ficient excufe in Salkeld 645 , and 11 Modern 119, and therefore the objection was unimportant. The winnefies could not inform John Fries, for he was in gaol; he could not know it, until yeflerday morning when the motion was made in court, for the witnefies had no knowledge of each ather, fo as to be abite to communicate ii. 3 Bac.

258-9, fays, that "it is particular caufe of challenge, if a juror lias "declared his opinion touching the matter." In caufes of particular challenge, the court is to inquire into the truth of the fact, and no triers are to be called, and if they find the caule a true one, they are not to judge, nor to be left to difcretion, but, they must try the issue again. This is the doctrine of ancient law and ufage, 266 Bacon. Then all the argument about triers is out of the queftion, the queflion is, whether the juror ftood indifferent, or whether he was under the influence of bias, and a prejudiced mind: the law compels the iffue to fteer clear of friends or enemies: no partiality whatever is to predominate; but can any man in the world, fay that Rhoad's minc' was free from prejudice, when he took opportunities to make fuch declarations?

Mr. Lewis then went into an examination of the evidence and depofitions. Now fuppofe the court to believe the fact nearly as flated by the evidence, Mr. L. afked, whether it was poffible, conffient with law or juttice, to believe that a juft verdick was given, or that any man ought to fuffer under fach a verdict? Suppofe the whole twelve to have made fimilar declarations, it would require no argument to convince the uibiafled, that the confequence muft be fatal.

It has been attempted to be proved, that even fuch a declaration was no ground of challenge, if it was not made from malice; but what is the meaning of an independent man? It means a man who fands on the high ground of jufice and impartiality, and is not warped by prejudice, nor warmed by refentment-quite free from intereft in the iflue: allo a man whofe judgment has not been made up in favor of either the one party or the other, for if it has, though he may be an houeft and well meaning man, it is not likely that his mind would be freely given according to evidence. Without he is free from thefe entanglements upon his mind, he will-he muft err. Now, it appears by the evidence of even Mr. Rhoad himfelf, that he was warm, and might have forgotten the expreflions, and nothing can be fhown, but that Mayer, the witnels, who has lived in thas country, is a man of good character; however, he muft be fuppofed fo, until he can be proved otherwife. Mr. Lewis remarked, that the witneffes fpoke of different converfations: Mayer of one, when Rhoad same Girf to town; the others of two afterwards, in the room where they were fitting, and in the bed-room. He conteaded that nu material, although a verbal difference did exitt; but the teftimony of Rhoads differed matenially from them all; his verbal telfimony and depofition was allo different, as might be feen. But Mr. Lewis faid, he doubted whether the teltimony of Rlooad in this matter, was legal evidence or not, becaufe it was a matter in which he was materially concerned, however they lad not much objected, as there was a confiderable difference in evidence going to a court, and to a jury; he had no doubt, their hours would make the neceflary allowance.

Athough Rhoad was not fworn at the time he ufed thefe exprefions, he was fummoned on this trial, and it was on high miflerivanor, whether it was iudictable or not, he would not fay, but it was a very imprulent difpolition to encourage or even fuffer. In Salkeld, ${ }_{53}$, Cook's cafe, chief jultice Hoit holds, that if a man ought not to be compelled to prove that he is a party, neither flould he be allowed to prove that he is nut a paity, by his own evidence: this applies to Rhoad giving evidence, in which his character is concersied. 4 ftate trials $747-8$ the cafe appears more fully: fuch a conduct is here declared to be tcandalous, and a mifdemeanor, and the man ougbt not to be on any jury. By four witnefles, neither inconfiftent with themfelves, nor with each other, Mr. Lewis faid this fact was clearly proved, and he thought incontrovertibly fo: of the refpectability of thole witneffes, he knew nothing; but nothing difrefpectul had been proved, and conlequently not their incompetency.

Judge Peters faid that he did not know about their fiwearing faliely, nor could he fay any thing about Mayer, but of the others he well knew that one was extremely flupid, and the others deeply prejudiced, on which account, their evidence flould be carefully fcrutinized, and carefully received.

The neceffity of great precaution and care, Mr. Lewis was willing to admit ; but this fupidity was a good apology for their not revealing the fact, until it was drawn from them: their ignorance indeed, was deducible from the whole of their conduct, and the oppofition they made to the government, but it did not frike at their credibility: uminformed, and milinformed as they were, their verity might be good. They were under indictments, and therefore perhaps afraid to fpeak; befues, coming from different parts of the country, they knew not John Fries: but let their offence or fituation be what it may, they may be honett men, and men of truth and integrity, and therefore they mult fland upon as grood a footing as witneffes could ftand.
We mult take it for granted then, faid Mr. Lewis, that the juror made thefe declarations, and if fo, according to the law of England, and of the United States, he is difgualified from the office, otherwife, that moft invaluable right, trial by jury, would be eminently impaired.

Mr. Lewis then examined fome authorities which had been quoted by the profecuting counfel, fome of which were irrelevant; and fome he thought not at all applicable. With refoect to the cafe of Ann Clifton, as quoted from the Penufylvania practices, the juror declared that " he did not know how any body could do otherwife thani "bring her in graily, but he did not fpeak as a juyman." The court were of opinion, it was not fufficient to grant a neiv trial. The objection of the court was not becaufe it was a cabital case, but they gave as a reafoin, that thefe words were not fufficient to vitiate a juror: his mind as a juror, he declared was fill open to conviation.

It was flated, that the apphication ought not to be lifened to, be: caure the prifoner had the challenge of sixty eight in effect, out of the whole pannel: how this was meant to be applied, he could not difcover, but one fact was phin, that the fmaller number there were fummoned above 35 , the betier choice there was for the prifoner, and thercfore the viribe number cannot be made to exreed 60, agieeable to common las. Mf. Lewis then oblerved, that one remark of Mr. Kawle, that Mr. Fhoad was the laft they could challenge, but they would rather have him, diar truf to the next, was a plain implication that they were ignorant of the fact, inftead of militating againft the motion. In order to remove every faficicion of inaccuracy from the former tefimony, he faid, ine nad happily been able to procure one, whote refipectability coud not be queftioned, and which he fhould now introduce to the court.

Coussel. Were jou prefent when any cunverfation took place between Rhoad and other; refipecing Frics and others?-relate the particulars.

Wirans. $\Lambda$ few days after Mr. Rhoad cane down, he was at my lioule, fittia; at my fure, with two other gentlemen, farmers I b blieve: they were hinving converfation a gend while before I came out of the bat, whon I ford up by them : they were talking about the indugents and M. Fies, and thofe who care from Northampton: they wow werining that thofe penple there, who were not of the funce opinion as the f:ow houghe down, were in dager, and fome of them ought to be lun e, and Fucs in paticalar. One of them mentioned that if Fris: hnew that, he wowld not have him on the jary; ; Rhoad find hat it nas not his will to come on the jury. I hearal no more, but returace into me bar.

How long was it fuce?
I: wa loun alter they came down he was here ever fince. Fridur, May 17.
Mr. Lewis refumed his argumen ia favor of the evidence, which he taid, hat we MI. Whe cane foward, the others being fuppected, woud have l, en a çuettion, whether the nepative tetimuny of Mr. Shand, in whin he was a paty, or the pofitioe tettimony of tour whers, who were :ut cnaceach, had the woft weight ; but now, taking it for granted, that Rhoad is miftaken, it can be only accounted for in two ways: firf, that his memory failed him; or fecondly, that he was extremely prejudiced: imputing nothing corrupt to him, fill we cannot allow him to be lefs fo than any one of the five witnefles we have brought to controvert his affertions: allowing him not to be free from prejudice, he cannot be fuppofed to be capable of judging for himfelf.

Mr. Lewis then mentioned another objection founded on the act which fays, "in cafes punifhable with death, the trial thall be held " in the county," &c. To remove this, one of two things mult take place : the court in whom is the difcretion, mult, from facts within their own knowledge, or facts laid properly befose them, order iteliewhere; otherwife fecondly, it mult take place in the city of Philadelphia, as a matter of courfe, as the law has, without a contrasy necelfity, fixed on the county, no entry need be made: but if that necelity did exift, it ought to be entered. How the oder was taken, and by what application the court was removed, he would mat fiy, all he contended for, was, that it mult appear the court did fo adjudge it, and for good reafons. The court could not be changed, but under cestain circumftances; thefe occuming mut a pear on the record of the cout. A motion was agitated on this point, and decided againf, but all that appears upon record, is that the motion was refufed: whether amendment can or cannot be made after trial, he would not contend, but he had doubts. He quoted Hawk. C. 22, 129 . Lord Rainond 14 r .

Farther. The court did not direct from what pat of the fate the jury were to come, but left it to the marthal, or elfe the marfhal exercifed it without authority or power. To him the judiciary aft fest. 29 appeared too plain to be miltahen, or to be repen $t$ to confruction : by this it appeared that part of judicial proccedings was left-not to the marnal, but to the judse of the court, and on him it was enjoined as a duty, which, if left to the marthal, would give ju't caufe of exception in the power of the prifoner. This was the practice of the marfhal ; a practice entirely new, and could have no manner of weight, becaufe the contrary was the pative law of the land, and if of, nothing could contravene it; it was io except that power was transferred to the marhal from the court, for if this could be leit, he did not fee why a great part of the duty of a judge could not be left for the marthat to exercile as well! The marthal could upon the fame principle, aflume the bench and try caules, becaule the law in that part of his daty does not affigu it mose to the judge than in the other. Certain duties were afigned to the judge, to the cleak, and to the marflal, to which each was reipectively bouncl. The firn Rate tials were in 1795, and there both the fubes gave the order in court, how the jury fhould be famonod, duextis that at leat ins firould be fummoned to attend for the trial of cerain perlons, and a: leaf 12 from the proper comties-fi wee to cme from the thate at large. The evenire facias mun be isund by the judge and fent to the manflal as his direatim, othar ie a feamae order of dimetion fofgned, though
was mot neceffary the direction flould be given, becaufe the law required it as indifienfible, on which account he fuppofed it was that judge Peters juft reminded the marfhal that capital acts had been committed in certain counties. In anlwer to this it was faid that the whole directions were given by the judge, lut he contended that the whele muff be in conformity, and muft come from the court, and the marilal could not take it up of his own accord. It was faid that there liad been but one inflaice of this fpecial order ; tue, but there had no more than one inflance occurred to occafion it. If Congrefs bad not thought is a power noceffary to be execcifed by a judge, it would not have becin a law, and though exereiled but once, or although not at all it was cqually fo, for the law may ileep, but it cannot die, nor will it be called up, but when occafion demands.
Farther. inie marfhal, without any direction from the court, or a judge therecf, has returned a greater number of jurors than he was legally authoized to do. By the act of Congrels, a fingle judge is cmiowered to hold court in certain caies, but if that jublge was to give an ordr out of the time of $h$ lding court, it would be conlidered as an ait of the jodge and not of the court, and therefore not an of ficial nor legalorder. The aenire in the prefent inftance is not figned by the judge, but by the clerk, wherein a return of fisty is authorized, but not a worl about the county, therefore the fiaty are fummoned from the flate : thus the venire goes to the marthal, whom the judge fees, and infirms him that the cafe is capital, on which account, in addition to the fisty returned in the venire, be nakes a due and regular return of twelve from one county, and feventeen from another, frgned with tis own name: mo doubt this was in confequence of the iatimation received from the judge. He had befre grone as far as his authority led him, and now he annexes thentymine in a feparate paper under the fame oder, which gave nu fuch diectimns, but ouly that not lefs than finty-eight nor more than finy fhotld be fummoned. The pamel is compleated, but whether the intimation or order of the judge was given before or after, we kiow not: to give the intimaturn was mht, but a wrong ule was made of it, for thele from the comaty oucht to have been iacleded in that pamel, which he might hase inchated, by futt fationg out the fane number, any time before it came into coart, and there his power would bave raded, and every thing would hate been ight except his havang had no order from the judge; but t.enty-nine more are amexed, whin not beng done under the venire na impoper, and if it had been, it would hive been equally lio, becale mot anthitatively given. I le come bite power th dive luch a retumas they thath proper, under the dicethon of the lan, bue if this is the act of a clerk, judge or maflat, it is irregular. Part of the number of fixty, and not bevond it, mould comt, thenk othembe direct. But in this cale even the twelve is "roceled, and feventen morc ammed: under that venite he might fatse retumed the whole from the comaty, but he could return no part abure fiaiy. Here in a certiacate produced by his honw Judge Ieters, binulyy..g that he had told the marthal it was a capital cafe, and twelve muf be fummoned from the county of Northampton: this is to be filed as an excule for the furplus, for there camot be an additional venire! In the trials of 1795 , there were 108 jurors fummoned, 72 from the flate at large and $3^{6}$ from three counties named, but that was by different pannells, and the fame could have been done now in the like way, and with the like authority, but this furplus is not to be amexed to the fingle panmel. This certificate of the judge cannot amount to any thing whatever, and his honor could not have meant to give it as any thing like legal authority, all the official acts of a judge mult be in writing, fome way or other in order that he may be made refponfible, otherwife it mult depend upon his memory, and too much upon his will. But this never can be meant as a legal act.

In 1795 an act of Afferbly of Pennfylvania, limied the greateft number of the jurors to be fummoned from the flate at large to fixty, and not lefis than forty-eight. The court determined that they could not be governed by act of affembly but by commonlaw. See 2 Dallas, but till the mater was left to the judges, and not the warlhal: the judges exercifd diecetion according to circumflances, but the act of Cungetis requiring twelve from the county remains binding, and is preferved as an invaluable privilege to which every man is entitled; he can be tried by men of his own neighborhood, and farely if this is fuch a privilege in common law, and efteemed in England as well as America, he bas a much greater chance of getting his neighbors from the finaller number than from the greater; and if this number is farther exceeded by twente-uine, the chance is ftill lefs. The marlial may be a man of virtue-fiuch is the prefent marflal ; but a man of a different charater might lucceed him, and he is to hold his place during will and pleafure. Now if it is confidered as a privilege that a man flould have as many of his neighbors as he can to try him, and the increafe of number diminithes that privilege, and, increafed to a certain extent, almoft aminhintes it, and if it is comblidered that the marthad has this authority, (which I deny) bow little chance has the prifoner, and how much power has the marithal over him! For this reafon the law intrufts the court with this power, and will not, nor has ever intrufted it to the marfhal. (He here quoted 3 Bicon 245, and Keling 16.) The cales referred to by Mr. Rawle; M:. Lewis laid was done by feparate panuels, as in $17,5-2$ Hale, $263-4$ Black. $344-11$ Mod. I—and ; Bacon, 244 .

When theie directions are not complied with, the proceedings are null and woid, for the theriff not following the order of the cout are gond reafon for a new trial, and theretore ne conclude that the pefent jurvis, feven of them aitually lerring, not being fummoned by the order of the ccurt, but by ai aflumed power of the marthal, both as to place and mumer, makes a mis-trial. 21 Viner, 172 , has a cafe fimilar to the prefent: one perfon on the jury was illegally admitted, :ccodingly the cour fet afide the verdict: on the prefint occalion there are leven illegally admited. There was a cafe when two indictments were brought in, and two panuels fummoned, but it hajpened that the one fummoned to try $\Lambda$, tried, $B$, and vice verfa:they were tried and both convicted; but on the plea, new trials were ordered becaufe they were not the men fummoned for the purpofe-2 Hawk. C. 27 , fect. 108,9 , 10 . See law of emors $6_{5}$. The authorities referred to fhow how it may be amented - the court are bound to render all which has been done null and roid. In Aurundell's cafe, 6 Cook, the error was as to the jury procels for murrer : the court fet afde the verdict, leeing that while there was error in the jury procels, his life had not even been put in danger: every thing cile was regular-the jury was returned from the parifh where the offence was laid; (the very parilh, and not the city was named,) the trial went on, and no challenge was made in the array, but for the above reafon all was fet alide, and a venire facios $d=$ nove granted. Thus it may be feen challenge to the array after challenge to the poll is not too late, if good caute le afigned-2 Lord Raymond, 884 .

The gentleman on the other hade has oppled a feccious argment as to number, to wit, that the wode of the venireare, you hall caufe to come before the court furh a number, and therefore, although a much greater number were fummoned, and no no.e than the legal number appear in court, thene is no cane of complant, but this is the commonform of a venire. Patia what mamer is the offeer to comfol the pand to appear before the courl? By fummoning them, otherwife they are limed. In a leral vew as it refpects the venire, they did all appear betore the court. Hak, Dacißone, nor any of the authorities fay hew many fhall come, but how mony fhall be fummoned.

Mr. Lewis here conchded a vey lamious invettigation of the points of lav reterring to the m, inn, and fubuited them to the confideration of the court, trulting that iih, chent was at ialt to fall a victim, it would be to the finond of jaisice, and not to the prefent ftate of public opinion, feemor that the martant procecdings on his cale would oqerate as a precedent t. be tramimitted down to pofterizy. Ie would leave the erent wiih full fubmaiom, imprelled with a firm reliance on the impartial and jult secilion of the conte infurgents.

Yes, there was fome converfation about it.
Did you talk about John Fries?
I cannot recollect; it was a general talk about the bufinefs, but not of Fries in paticular.

What did you fay ? Recollect.
There was not much faid-there was one behind tie fettle talked about fetting up liberty poles, but I did not know the man. Yohe laid that if they put up liberty poles it would do no harm, becaufe for liberty they coild do what they pleafol. Whereupon l laid that the liberty poles had occafioned a preat deal of offence and difpute. The man then went away, when I idid to lohe that that man feemed very merry: he anfiwced that he was there every day, and that he got drumk. I do not recollect any thing inore that was faid, I was not above five minntes in the houfe.

Court. Were you there at ayyother time?
Witness. Net in the lioulf, but I was before the door.
Where did you ladge the firt migit you caus to town?
At Seidell's.
Do you recollect any of her perfon wh was pefent at this time befides tohe and the drumen man?

No.
Do you recollect fitting by the fluse at any time, in converfation with two farmers about this infurrcction?
No.
Do you recolleit being at Yohe's any other time?
I was at Yohe's no more than that once, and then did not fit down.

MICHAEL SNTDER, fworn.

Attorney. What did Mr. Yohe fay to you after he went out of court yeflerlay; did he not tell you, that you were prefent when Rhoad made ufe of the words alluded to?

Witxfss. Yes, le faid, I believe you was there when he faid it.
Do you know any thing about it?
I do not know that I faw Rhoad there at all: I lodged in the houfe, but was fometines in, and fonetimes out of it. I told him I did not know about it.

GEORGE YOHE arain called.

Court. The court are very defirous of your giving evidence to day, on the fuljecit you did yefterday, in the prefence of Mr. Rhoad, ieft there thould be a mitiunderftanding.

Witness. Mr. Rhoad was fitting in my room at the fove, fome days after he came down, two other gentlemela with him; they had fome converfation before I came out of my bar, when I food behind the ftove: they were talking about the people that came from Northanpton, and the infurrection, and mentioned Mr. Fries: Mr. Rhoad faid that there people who were not of the fame opinion as thele inliurgents who cane down, were not fafe; and Rhoads farther faid, that fome of them ought to be hung, and Fries in particular. I returned intn my bar, and then I was called into another room. I fat Court. Had they been fitting there fometime before?

Yes.
What time of the day was it ?
I caniot tell, but I think it was in the forenoon.
Can you tell who the other men were?
I camiot, they were flrangers to me , and appeared like farmers.
Dd you know any more who were in the ram?
There were fix or feven more, I think Michacl Snyder was one, but I think there were none within hearing.

Was any thing faid about Mr. Khoad being on the jery?
Nothing that time that I recollect. I knew before that he was one. The man that was fitting by his fide, faid that if Fries knew that, he would not have lim on the jury; he replieu, that he wifhed be would not have him.

Do you recollect any thing elfe?
No.
Mr. Ruoad went to explain to Mr. Yohe fome part of the converfation, but Mr. Yole could not recollect it, as he faid he went in and out about his buffivel's. Mr. Yohe faid Mr. Rhoad was often in his houle, which contradicaing what Mr. Rhoad had fworn before, that " he was never in the houfe but once, and then not five minutes, and " did not fit dowi," the court afked Mr. Rhoad to recollect whether he was never there but once. He then anfiwered, that he believed he was twice, or perthap; three times, before he was called upon the jury-

Cuert to Mr. Rhoad. Was that afier you was fummoned dowin oa the jury or befo c?

Rhosd. The laft time I came down, and before the jury were fivon. I came there to inquire ahout a man, and I believe it was one of the nen who was fitting with me at the flove.

To Mr. Yonf. Did you fit down with them?
No. I flowid a little, and returned to the bar.
Mr. Khoad having faid he never fat down, Mr. Yohe reminded him of fome of the circumflances, and faid that he was fitting there more than half an hour; but Mr. Rlioad could not be brought to recolle:t it.

Corrtetn Rhoad. Do you recolleit either of the two men that were in converfation with you?

Rruad. I do not recellect fecing any perfon there, that I was arquainted with, but Mr. Snyder.

Cuert to Yohe. Was this a ferious converfation about the pifone, ?

Yone. I do not know, but I thought fo. I knew he was fummoned upon the jury, on that very accomnt, I took particular notice.

The cumat delined Mr. Yuhe to repeat the winds uled by Mr. Rhoad in the fame lançuge, (German.) He did fo, and Mr. Erdman the interpreter, declared them precildy what had beca before fiomath.

Mr. Rioad declared again that he never had fiel fo.
The examination here clofel, and the corre adjourned for about four hours, to give the judges opportunit; of examining the authoditues.

In the Evening the Court again mect.

Judge Peters obferved that the opinion of lord chief juftice Trevy, in 4 State Trials was much to the point, but that queftion was not determined by the court. In a queftion of fo much national importance as the prefent, Judge Peters thought it his duty to give an opinion-A man who lives in the county where iufurrection has happened, his impreffions of injury fiom the repetitions of fuch fcenes will be flomger than might be expected in other men, and therefore all that Rhoad faid about it being unlafe for the friends of government to live there, is accounted for, and no way improper for him to fipeak. I think Rhoad an honeft man, and do not think he had any malice againlt Fries more than any of the reft, but I think he mult have forgotten. As to what appeared to frike Mr. Lewis with fuch force, does not appear to me important. I think the proceedings might have been more regular, but yet I think they were regular enough to flamp the event with a fufficient fanction. The proceedings were much the fame as the court of Oyer and Terminor, when the fleriff fummons a number more than is wanted, in order to have them ready, and when twelve are wanted, they are taken out of that nums ber. This venire iffued by the larne courfe as all others do, perhaps not knowing the offences would be capital, but it appearing otherwife afterwards, agreeable to act of Congref's fome were fummoned from the proper connties. The venire fays the number is not to exceed 60 , yet thefe words do not defignate more than thofe in the practice of England which direets 12 , but 24 is generally returned. To be fure the court might have given the order, but I do not lee how this could be done without the defendant lying in gacl, or a fipecial court being holden. There is fome weight to be fure in the arguments on that point, but they are not fo important as they were held up to be. The marfhal having ready a certain number, when the iffue was joined, then, and not before, was the number who did appear, made to appetr in court. The paunel was returned, and furnithed to Fries, on whick the trial was fuffered to proceed, and on that acc.ount I think it appears it was approved of by the court, which is a fufficient deliznation:
Judge Irfdell-The queftion which the court have now to detide is certainly as importalit an one as ever was before a court. With regard to any intereft, the goveriment could be fuppofed to have in the event, or the feelings of private bumanity or compaffion as men, for the very unhappy fituation of the prifoner-thete muft huth be facrificed to that impartial juffice which our duty preremptorily commaids us to exercile according to the bef of cur capacities. Sure I am that it is alwass my difpolition fo to be influenced, as I am convinced it is alfo of the judge with whom I have the honor to fit on the beach.

It is admitted, I believe on botli hdes, that it is in the power of the coust in criminal cales to grant a new trial in favor of the prifoner, though they cannot to his perjudice, and it mut be readily admitted that it munt be the moft obvious confiderations, which could poffible render it the duty of the court, lelt they too readily grait a new trial: for if the power is placed in a court, it is proff that it moff, or might be fometime exercifed, and if ever proper occation arife for the exercife of it, it mull deperd on funie particular, floikingly applicable circumflances.

With regard to the particular circurffance now breught forward, that one of the jurymen made certain deciarations unfat rrable to the jultice, a prifoner has a right to expect, I mun confefs that until the cridence yefterday given by Mr. Yohe, I was not fatisfied that he had faid any fich thing as could give the court full ground to Lelieve him improperly biafied, fo as to admit juft caufe en a new trial; but that tefimony corsobuatiug the teftimeny of thede before given on which, independaintly, we could place but listle derendance, Arihes me with gieat furce, otherwife I thould have enterained fome doubs owing to their different relations of apparenty the fanse evei,t. This caution was invigonated by the very excellent charafer which the juror had borne. From this I have eve:y reafon to blieve that he has not willfully done any thing wrong, nor fwom to any thing which he does not believe to be true. Fron the relativn, it was difficult to arrange the particular parts of the converfation fo aito make it accord at any interval of time, on which account I was extremely definous that Mr. Rhoad and Mr. Yolie flumld be confronted, and queflions put to remind each other of the facts, fo as $b$ th might accod ; but it does appear that Mr. Rhoad's memory is extremely' defective in tome material points, and theref we, withot any inpeachment we may prefume it was a grofs miftake. It is the clear opinion of the court in 4 State Trials, that if a juryman, not out of particular mafice againd the indivilual, but from any other caufe appears to have formed a predecermined opinion, he was not fit to be a jurymal, and it was therefore good camife of challenge. In that cafe the expreffions ufed were much fimilar to the prefent cafe : that opinion appears to be grounded upon the fuppoficion that were a man, from any ill mot:ves, or otberwise, forms an opinion frongly on his mind, an improier bias is extremely difficult to get clear of, and will intuence an honeft man unwarily to give a wrong verdia, and to thefe circumflances every man is liabic. It is impofible for me to refit the impreti: m, from the number of depolitions produced, that Mr. Rhoad munt, at different times, have ufed expreffions fimilar to thofe related be Nis. Yohe, but I can readily conceive that fuch exprefions were uke: , th an i:mocont intention, and without meaning to prejudice hin it in atomwards ferving as an honeft juryman, yet I cannot be teranin, but it might orignate from a prediypoted opinion of the guile whe man, aid therefore it muft render him lefs able to difriminate laui, but if no fuch idea of grilt did exilt, according to the authority fated, it would be gool caufe of challeage, if known, but if mot hown until atier verliit is given, it would then be fufficient time, for what is good caufe of challenge previous to trial, is good ground for a motion after verdit. It is very much to be regretted that the witueffes who heard. thefe declarations did none of them communicate it to the counfel or the prifoner before the jury were fivorn, becaufe he might have been fet afids, and much umeceffary public expence and diffrefs to the un-Fortunate man, befides delar of the execution of juntice, in this par:ticular cafe, been preventeil.

It being admitted that the court may grant a new trial in crimian cafes upon fufficient canfe to thow, and it following that they ought to do it if hown, I farther think that if there is caufe of challenge before, there is egual canle, if it is proved that the juror was biafled, to order it, :ifter verdict is pronomed, whatever delay or inconveminnce may refilt therefom; that can be no reafon to withhold a priviledge to which a prifoner is entitled: from thefe riews, I think it my duty to vote for a new trial in the prefent cale, as the fact appears too clear to be controverted. In this event, there will be flill an opportunity for the priloner to be freed, and juftice be done between himetf and his country.

With regard to the point of law, if my mind had not been clear on the evidence relipecting the juror, I hould have been decidedly againd a new trial, and accondingly fhould have taken the trouble more fully to have delivered my fentiments; it being fo, I fhall now make but a few general remarks. As to the point, that the record fhould evince the proceedings of the court, otherwife they are invalid, with reafons why trial could not be held in the county, I think there is no neceflity of the reatons appearing on the record of court. If the queftion had flool fimply upon this ground, it would have been immaterial; but it did not: application was made to the court, after fereral indiitments were found, alledging that the trials ought to be held in the county, whereupon the court declared opinion, that "great inconvericince" prevented a compliance with the motion: but farther, it appeared to be gone out of the power of the court, becaule the indicment had been found in this court, which muft be conlidered a part of the trial; and the law means the whole proceeding fhall be in onc place, fo that the indietment muft have been fuund in that county, otherwife the tial by jury could not be held there. Thefe were the realons which cperated to influence the court to refufe the application. In this dilemma, it was imponible for the court to fay the trial fhould not proceed here; and had it been removed, a new indiciment could not have been found ; if it had, the trial could nut proceed upon two indianents. The only times for confidering this queftion, I believe, was, when this man was charged with the offence, before he was committed, or even after the court fat, and before the indictment was brought into court. If it had been the opinion of the judge who committed him, that trial could be held there, then it could lave been referred to the fupreme court, who, if they had been of the fame opinion, would have ordered a fpecial court. But from the itate of that county, in one can believe that trial could have been held there in any siay conducive to julice, or fo as to make the proceedings of the court fuch as they ought to be, becaufe the Prefident has declared, by proclamation, that the law could not be executed without military affiffance, which I never wifh to fee guard a court of juffice as matter of cloice, though unavoidable necelfity may fometimes make it prudent.

With regard to the fummoning the jury, it is to be obferved that the practice now ufed, was an eftablithed ufage of this court for many years paft, which is a fanction fufficient, if no pofitive law nullifies it. The venire, iffued in this form, in my opinion, did iflue with the fanction of the court, and had the fame effect, as though the exprefs order of the court had been annexed. It appears that it was not known, at the time the venire iffued, that any cales were punifhable with death, and of courfe not neceflary to include a fpecial provifion for twelve to come from the county. Mr. Lewis made a conceffion, which, if right, did away the whole of this objection: he faid, that upon the marlhal's receiving information (whether it came from the judge or not) that a cafe punifhable with death bad occurred, he had a right, without any order from the court, written or verbal, to fummon a greater number of men than in other cales: the words of the law are, not that he fhould fummon twelve, but twelve at lealt; but he obferved that this fhould not exceed, but be included in the number fixty. I do not know what authority he had to limit the number to fixty, in this or any other cafe. The law intends that a prifoner fhall have a chance of men from his own neighborhood; certainly then the greater the number which comes from it, bis chance is proportionably increafed, therefore it can never prejudice the prifoner. I think that if the marthal thould extend the difcretion given him to an unncceffary number, it would operate to the vexation of the perfons fummoned, and they alone would have caufe to complain. Formerly, by law, a theriff was directed to fummon twelve, but by ufage, he aclually did fummon twenty-four, yet all above the twelve appeared to acquelice, and it could not be of difadvantare : fo in the grandjury for twenty-four, forty-eight was fummoned: the power was affuned and not complained of. I prelume that if the marfhal had anthority to return that number, without a venire or precept, he was not limited as to number; and that when they came here, they formed the jary attending court. I am farther of opision, that when the pannel was puelented to the pilioner, that pannel obtained the full fanction of the court, as much as though they had given the order.

So far as to fubftance. With refpect to furm, the words are, after joining the iffire, "let the jury come." That is a direction given by the court to the marflal to fummon the juiry, but as it would be inconvenient for him to fummon the jury after this order, which is for him to do it without delay, thofe jurors already fummoned appear in court, fo that if it was entered upon record it would appear that after the prifoner was arraigned, and iffuc joined, the marhal had diected thefe men to come, and they bad come. It appears to me that whether the marhal fummoned the jurors of his own accord, or whether they were fummoned under the exprefs order of the court after iffue was juined, in fubftance and in form the law is fo far complied with as tudo perfect juftice. Though I am not certain that my opinion on thele points of law are right, not having had much time to examine, yet I am frongly of that opinion at prefent; however 1 have thought lets and faid lels upon them than if the main object of the motion relled on it.

Senlible of the importance of the queftion: and that if life is once foft it can never be recovered; leaving alde the quettion which in. volves doubt, and refting on the facts which have appeared before the court, I deem it my duty to fay that a new friah ought to de,

Judge Peters. Upon the points of law urged, I fhould have thought proper to have given my opinion, although they would have materially differed from that of a gentleman whole law knowledge I much refpect ; yet I think it at this time unneceffary to fay any thing farther than that I agree in the opinions of the gentleman with whom Ific.

As to the other point, to wit the conduct of this juror, I confefs that my mind is not compleatly made up: I think that all which can be faid on that is, that no juryman ought to go into that box with prejudice upon his mind. In a cale which the public at large muft feel materially interefted, it is impoffible to keep the mind from being affected; all the citizens will have their feelings; the queftion then is, whether this one individual had or had not particular malice againt the prifoner? If not the evidence would weigh lightly on my mind: upon this point I confefs myfelf to have doubts.

Thefe very striking expressions the juror fwears he camot recollect ufing, although the others fwear that he did ule them. I am ftill doubtful, from the light opinions I entertain of all the witnelfes except one, whom I do not know, but if any impreflions are made upon my unind favorable to the motion, his evidence has made them, otherwile I could not helitate what opinion to form.

I know the event of a refufal; I know that a divifion of the court will be the confequence, and the man mult beleft to the mercy of the executive. Individual puniffment is nothing to public example; on the other hand the confequences of a new trial would be to delay the exercile of juftice. I am fatisfed that the prifoner has had a fair and impartial trial, with all the advantages he could defire ; but as I think public example is the only object which the law contemplates, and as that public example will have a far more forcible effect whe: every excuse is removed, and the public fully fatisfied with the proceedings of this court, which may not be the cafe if a divifion of the court takes place, I rather yield my opinion to the neceffity, than at conviction of the juftice of a new trial. On thefe accounts I fubmi: to fay that there shall be a new trial.

Mr. Dallas contefted the juriidiction of the court upon the general polition that an indiatment found in the city and county of Phladelphia, conld not be tried at a court holde: at Norithown. The conffitution and laws of the United States, he obferved, werc founded upon this principle: that the criminal fhould always be tried as near the place where the crime was committed as circumfiances would admit; which was to be in the county, unlefs manifert inconvenience flouild operate to prevent it. The circuit court could appoint fpecial crurts fir the trial ef criminal cafes, but not for civil cales. Laws of United States p. 226 vol. 2.

Bat the diftrict judge onderel the court to be holden at this place, agreable to the powers he was velled with be the quarantme and healch haw, pafed February 2 th 1799 . Sect. 5 th and 7 th reads thes: Sect. sth $^{\text {th }}$ fiall be lawful for the judge of any diftrict court of the United States, wition whofe dilirect any contagious or epidemical difeaic flath at any time previil, fir as ia his opinion, to endanger the life, or lives of any perifon or pertens contined in the prifen of fuch diflhict, in purfance of any law of the United States, to direct the :rarhal to caule the perion or pertons conined as atorefaid, to be comord to the next adjacent prifon, where fich difeaie dees not presait. :lere to be contined until he, ilie, or they, may be fafely removed batk to the place of their fift cominement, which remove hall be at the experce of the United States.

Sct. 7. That whenever, in the opinion of the chief juntice, or in ale of his death, or imbility, of the fenior affociate jultice of the fipreme court of the United States, a contagious ficknels fhall render is lace dons to hold the next flated feffion of the faid court at the feat of government, it hall be lawful for the chief or affociate juftice, to iffue his order to the marhal of the diffrict within which the fupreme court is by law to be holden, directing him to adjourn the faid feffion of the faid court to fuch other place within the fame, or any adjoining diffrict as he may deem convenient; and the faid marfhal fhall thereupon adjourn the faid court, by making publication thereof in one or more public papers printed at the place, by law appointed for holding the fame, from the time he flall receive fuch erder, until the time by law prefcribed for commencing the faid feffion. And the diftrict judges thall, refpectively, under the fame circumflances, have the fame power, by the fame means, to direft adjournments of the diffrict and circuit courts within the feveral diftricts to fome convenient place within the fame refpectively.

Neither time nor place could be changed in civil cafes, bur both time and place might be changed in ciminal cafes.

Mr. Dallas then proceeded to apply thefe laws to the prefent motion: fuppofing that the place of trial ought to have been at or near where the crime was committed, yet it was determined at the Marcls term that it flould not be held nearer than at Philadelphia, although Norris town was nearer than Pliladelphia. It was then laid down as an effablifhed principle by both the judges, that the indictment was part of the trial, and where the trial was commenced, there it muf be concluded; and therefore a motion to remove the prifoners for trial to the county where the offences were committed, were overruled.

Firft, he would obferve, that the trial ought to have been held in the county: the judictaly act, vol. I. p. 67, provided that the trial flould be in the county where the crime was committed. Subfequent to that, an amendment to the confitution (8th) was paffed, providing, "That in all criminal profecutions, the accufed fhall enjoy the right to a fpeedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime fhall have been conmmitted." From this Mr. Dalias conceived it clear, that what was called district in the conflitution was fynonimous comty in the law, and recognized that exprefion, and therefore he thought they ought to be tried in one of thole counties, and at no other place.

But in criminal cales, there was a difcretionary power in the court, or in the diftrict judge, to remove the court in cafe of contagious fichinefs, as well as a power to remove the prifeners.

The 5 th fection only provides for the remoral for fafe keeping of the prifoners to the next adjacent priion, until they can with falety retarn. The court could be taken any where; but the prifoners could not be taken any where: it mult be only ti the " neat adjacent prifon, where ti.ch difeafe does net preval." Norris town, he contended, was mot the beyt adjasent primen: it was to be the next prifon, to an adgarent pilim, and to o.e where the ficknefs does not prevail, if it wesin the poner of the court io difenfe with one of thefe reafons, it was with all. Norris twa 4,0 miles from Ihiladelphia, Chefter was but $: 5$, the diference is he filie was but frall, but if the qoords of the law were not binhing in every part, the fame difcetionary power might have removed the cour 100 miles.

The prifoners were therefore not to be tried, but to be kept till they could be removed back with fafety.
Judge Peters faid, he contemplated Chefler, but he had heard that there were fome cafes of the fever there, and he knew it had before been much afflicted with it; he therefore did not confider himfelf fo clofely bound as to be forced to go there.

Mr. Dailas faid, vague report was not to be attended to, or he belicved it would be a reafon againt going almolt to every place: a court was keid at Chefler on the gth inft. He believed Chefter anfwered the perfect defcription of the law. But, he faid, the prifoners were removed, not merely for fafe-keeping, but for trial ; however, he couceived the former decifion, "that the trial was begun where the iudietment was found," muft prevent the tials being held any where but in Pbiladelphia, becaufe the indictments were found there. Though a latheus corpus was powerful in its operation, yet it was certainly not meant to be in direct oppofition, and to fupercede an act of congrets. Nor was the perfonal inconvenience of the court to be coifideced; the act of congref's was peremptory, and could not be diffented to from any caufe, without it was by a repealing claufe.

He hoped the court would give an opportunity to his colleague (Mr. Le:isis) who was now ablent, to give his ideas on the fubject. He was fent for, and expected hortly.
Mr. Rawle contended, that there was in divifion contemplated but that by which the United States were divided into 13 diftricts; he thourlit it impofible to conceive that "district" meant a county, and thereffre the reference to the 8 th amendment of the conltitution, he thought, no fupport to the argument.

With refpect to the power of the court to try the caufes, Mr. R. thought it clear, that as both in civil and criminal cafes, the courts could be revooved, both with refpect to time and place, under certain circumfances, fo could the bufinefs of the court alfo; this was a matter of courfe, and therefore the power of habeus corpus, to bring all the prifiners up, was in the court. If it were not fo, in vain would be the provilim (at times of ficknefs) of the confitution, which directed a s"ecdry trial, becaufe inevitable delay mult take place, or the lives of the court and jury, as well as of the prifoners, be in great hazard. He concrived, that the $5^{\text {th }}$ fection, which provided for the removal of the prifoners, was fcaicely conformable to that part of the conftitution which provided for a "\{peedy" trial, becaule, if the conflection was, as fuppofed, by the other complel, it infringed o: the prifoier's right: they had no power to keep a man in long confineinent, until his guilt was afcerained; and no prevalence of diforder could authorife them to it .

The genteman faid, that they were to be taken away for fafekeeping, until they cwald be returned in fafety to the prifon from whence they were taken. Now, fupprie, for inflance, thofe to be lemoved, who had been ientelced for eiglit months imprifonment, and that time expired, whillt they wele at fome other prifon, on account of the prevailing licknefs, could it be fuppoled that the law contemplated that they fhould be kept till they could with fafety be returned? He prefumed not.

Would they not thereby have fuffered fale imprifonment by being confined longer tha: the judgment of the court ordered? Moft certainly they would.

As to the next convenient prifon, Mr . Rawle thought the words were not very perficuous, not fufficiently, he thought, as to meafure geometrical diffances to a nicety. He took it to be one of thofe cafes whicls would bear a reafonable and circumftantial confruction, and which was left in the judgment of the judge, whether it was convenient and fafe to be rigoroufly executed, or not: there might be an alarm of difierder fufficient to warrant the judge to fay, that it was not lafe to lodge the prifoner in one place, and, as another was about the fame diltance, where no fuch alarm exifted, he thought himfelf juftifiable in ordering their removal to the latter: for though there was provifion to remove them once, there was no provifion to remove them away again, even in cafe of alarm, except it was back to the fame prition they firtt were in. Upon the whole, as to removal, he thought the judge had executed his duty and his clemency. If it had not been right, the prifoners fhould have complained at the time of their removal, but they were all perfectly fatisfied.

With refipect to the effect the removal would have to the jurifdiction of the Court, he thought the argunents at the laft court refpecting trial in the fame county, would not apply. He referred to the argument of Judge Wilfon in the cafe of Hamilton, Dallas' Reports, 2 vol. p. 760 . The Court had power in every county in the flate, becaule the whole flate conflituted but one diffrict, in which the law directs them to be tried.

He did not fuppofe the matter of convenience was any queftion at all: nor did he believe the Judges would be in the leaft guided by it.

As to the bufinefs began in Philadelphia, in as much as the indictment was there brought in, it was flated, that the trial mult be continued there. This might be alfo the means of delay, which the conllitution providid againft; but he believed the argument could be aulfwered in another way. The court was held in Philadelphia, and this bufinefs was continued, and therefore wherever the court lat, therefore its bufinefs muft follow it. What would be the effect elfe, of an indiatment being found in Norris-town, and the caule being continued over? Muft the court remove back here at another feffion to try the caufe here? This would bring the court into a continual ftate of vibration, and juftice be much delayed. He thought the court was competent to take up what remained of former ieffions.

Mr. Dallas hoped the court would confider the great inconvenience of the trials, efpecially on the trealon cales, now going on: the deranged flate of the counthy, owing to the diforder which had driven numbers of citizens from their homes, would make it ruinous to the prifoners; it would prevent the prifoners the opportunity of inquiring the characters of the jurors, ard alfo of procuring witnefles. It would doubtef's endanger his life.

Agretable to Mr. Rawle's argument, Mr. Dallas contended, that the $5^{\text {th }}$ and 7 th fections of the Quarrantine Law were at war with each other, and nett only fo, but with the general policy of the laws a;id conifitutions But thefe two fections, in his opinion, were diftinct in their nature and object,and no repealing claufe had ever been paffed, and thefore each part muft be carried into effect. The 8th fection provided for the removal of the prifoniers, but there was not a word abour trial in it. By the 7 thl fection it wonid appear, that the diftrict judge might take the court to Pittfburg if he plealed; he was not reftrained at all ; bur there was no fuch power given to him refpecting prifoners; he could nat 'ake them farther than the nearef prifon of fafety. How could thefe two fections be reconciled? Why were not the two fections firmed upon one principle, if they were fo connected as the gentemen fuppoled? Of what avail would it be to take a court to a place where there was no power of taking the prifoners, who muft be tried, before that tonit? But fo it might be, if the reafoning which had been given was right. Had not the $g^{\text {th }}$ fection been introduced by the legilature, then, indeed the whole jurildiction would have been removed with it.

With refpect to the indictments that might be found in Norris town, the court haing been held agreeable to the 7 th fection of that Law, the queftion of precile ditance being fet alide, undoubtedly they would go to wherever the court would remove. Inafnuch as juftice could rot be done to the prifmers, and inafinuch as the former decifion prevented the trial being held any where but at the place in which it was begua, he hoped the trials would not be proceeded on.

Mr. Lewrs arrived in court, and apologifed for not being able to attend earlier: he had not fufficiently veighed the motion, he faid, to be able to add any thin, the the ground ably argued by his colleague, and theiefore wined to lease it to the decifion of the court.

Jodge Wabimagrix laid, miming was more clear than that the fith and ferentin tecions of the Guar antine Law were, for different purphes: the sth only refates to till: icineral of prifoners, that they might not fall a prey to any contaginus difeafe that might occur wherefuever they may be confined; and this removal was not for the rathe of trial, but ifr hifie keqpirg. It was douhtul, previous to the palfing of this act, whether the marflats had power to remove them, whatever mirgh be the caule, or however dangerous to them to remain in prifor b bet a ainh this donbt and dager, Congrets provided. On thece gromud, the court thought that the trials ought to go on, and therefore the motion was owr-ruled.
